SECRETARY STRONG AND THE VI GENERAL ASSEMBLY. AMENDMENTS.

If there is anything in the wide world the If there is anything in the wide world the people of this State care nothing about, it is the result of the vote on the constitutional leans January 7, 1879.

Yeas—Behan, Chevalley, Glynn, Houston amendments. Yet the Times and Picapuna accommends to the property of the constitutional state of the people of th utely convulsed over the confession made by fr. Strong of his luability to arrive at any nclusion from the returns. We are on the link of chaos, and the Pic. suggests, as the mly escape, the revolutionary proceeding of meting the Secretary of State, a constitutional Meer, because of the dilemma in which he nds himself, and the putting of some man of force we suppose, who is "competent to per-form this simple ministerial act" of making the returns tell whatever the Pic and Times may demand in regard to the results. While people are demanding a solution of their culties in a Constitutional Convention, the Pic. is inciting revolutionary violence in the erests of selfish schemers. This assault pon Secretary Strong—in which Gov. Nichils is also involved—is a most unjust and putrageous impugnment of this official, than there is none in the world more conthere is none in the world more connties. The difficulty in which Secretary ility to reach any conclusion that he feels ed in formally promulgating, is not thout precedent. In fact, the almost uniconstitutions at a general elecand by a popular vote, is utterly imprac licable. The attempt has been repeatedly made, and has almost invariable been attendwith failure and inextricable confusion. it of which it was impossible to colve any reliable conclusion as to what was honest will of the people. In New York experiment was tried and failed. A comn was appointed to draft amendments the constitution and the result of its was submitted to the popular vote, and the amendments were voted down and a alppl, at the last election, an amendment was submitted abolishing the office of Lieutenant Governor, was carried by a large majority, itution for the reason that the point was ised that a majority of the actual voters of State, and not of the votes cast merely. was necessary to pass an amendment of the astitution. The same provision exists in our constitution, and the point would be s valid here as in Mississippi. But we need not go abroad for precedents.

isely the same difficulty Secretary Strong himself confronted with was presented after the election of 1876, when a committee the Nicholls Legislature, composed of some the ablest men in that body, confessed emselves utterly unable to selve it, and e has never been a promulgation of the its of the vote on the amendments subnitted at that election. Is Mr. Strong to be clamed and arraigned for incompetency, and with a flagrant suggestion of interested mo-tive, for not being able to do what a legisla-tive minimittee, composed of able and expe-ries of men of affairs and lawyers, confessed discives unable to perform before him? Truth of the business is that there has a no intelligent expression of the popular upon these amendments, and even were a majority of the votes cast had been in favor, still the State government would on itself a grave responsibility in proting them as parts of the fundamental tary Strong, but upon those who selected this nod of altering the constitution. No offiser clothed with ministerial functions paerely and impracticable. The trouble, and the sole able, is in the impossibility of obtaining an intelligent expression of opinion, by direct vote of the people, on questions so purely theo-retical and complicated. Constitutions and constitutional law are matters the people can handle only through their representatives, and it is in this particular that the representative principle of our government is most useful and necessary. Mr. Strong is cartain-ly not responsible for the fact that a conven-tion only is capable of passing upon such

But what strikes us as most ludiercus and pitiful in this assault upon Secretary Strong and Gov. Nicholis is the censoriousness of the Pic. Bolingbroke draws somewhere the picture of Atticus, the "meanest man in Rome," who would have been "noted with infamy at Athens," in that he sided with all parties and ventured with none, assuming the tone of Cato when upbraiding the querulous complainings of Tully in his exile. The Fic. playing censor to these officials presents us another simile. The Fic., which has changed its position five times on the question of a constitutional convention, as we can prove by its stitutional convention in frame a new convention to frame a new convention for the Sate, and the Covernor shall immediately, on of the Legislature to the fact that it has not been customary totax any class of persons in the State without allowing them the right to vote. Thus, in old days, before negro suffrage was langurated, Connecticut left untaxed the property of the colored people because it refused them the right to vote. Thus, in old days, before negro suffrage was langurated, Connecticut left untaxed the property of the colored people because it refused them the right to vote. Thus, in old days, before negro suffrage was langurated, Connecticut left untaxed the property of the colored people because it refused them the right to vote. Thus, in old days, before negro suffrage was langurated, Connecticut left untaxed the property of the colored people because it refused them the right to vote. Thus, in the first that it has not the State and thirty-six delegates shall be elected by the State at large, one resident of the State, except to the property of the colored people because it refused them the right to vote. Thus, in the first that it has not the state of the vote. Thus, in edd days, before negro suffrage was inuagurated, Connecticut left untaxed the property of the colored people because it re-fused them the right to vote. Gov. Endrews puts the question to the present Legislature whether they will not grant women the same right as negroes were granted, and refuse to tax their property as long as they are denied the right of suffrage. There has always been a large vota in the Connecticut Legislature in favor of granting the elective franchise to wo-men, but this vote has never been large enough to carry the measure. It remains to be seen whether Gov. Andrews' approval of female suffrage—for his message reads like an approval will persuade the Legislature etleut to try the experiment. The results of female suffrage in Wyoming have been a good deal debated of late. The best evidence would seem to show that it has worked well and accomplished good results in that territory.

Jones is to be elected, in a few days, we are d. United States Senator from Nevada. t makes little difference which party sucis in Nevada, Jones is pretty sure of an ection. Alcotte special committee to consider the Governor's message, as ifollows: Messrs. Liddell, Bridger, Wise, Jones and Murrill.

A memorial from H. E. Gilmore, of Plaquemines, contesting the seat of H. C. Warmoth, was presented and read. The memorial sets forth that Warmoth at the time of the November election was not a qualified electror of the parish, which fact was well known; that said Warmoth, therefore, was not eligible to represent said parish as a Representative; that pationer was any qualified, and claims the seat on this ground.

Mr. Murrill, opposed the reference of the

sent said parish as a Representative; that pertioner was as qualified, and claims the seat on this ground.

Mr. Murrill opposed the reference of the memorial to the Committee on Elections and Qualifications, on the ground that it was not elatined that Warmoth was not elected, but simply that he bad not registered. Hundreds or citizens in every parish in the State were similarly disqualified. He contended that this was no reason why Warmoth should not be eligible. He moved to table the motion to refer.

The objection was afterwards withdrawn and the memorial was presentedfrom A. H. Ooker, contesting the seat of E. H. Bower, of the Parish of Orleans. Referred to the Committee on Elections and Qualifications.

Mr. Bridger, of Caldwell, asked permission to withdraw the papers presented with House bill No. 1910 of the session of 1878. The permission was granted.

gan to sue the State.
