NEW YORK NOTES.

The Hull Murder Case-The Murderer Weakening.

The Testimony Against Dr. Hull-A Witness Who Plotted Against His Life.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The steamer Bristol, of the Fall River Line, arrived here at 9 o'clock this morning, having on board the noted prisoner Chastine Cox, the confessed murderer of Mrs. Hull. He was in charge of Capt. Williams and Detective Seem. The officials predict that Cox will implicate some body else in the affair, and that he was hired to do the job. Cox was smiling and not at all nervous when he landed. He looked fresh and was neatly dressed.

The murderer, Cox, was taken to the police headquarters this forenoon; a large crowd The murderer, Cox, was taken to the police headquarters this forenoon; a large crowd gathered and there was much excitement. While going from the carriage to Sup't. Walling's office Cox qualled for the first time and fattered, but was supported on each side by the police. He rallied and in a few seconds only a tremor of the lower lip and chin indicated the dread he feit. By instructions from the superintendent, Cox was next taken to the coroner's office, who ordered him to be locked up at headquarters. He now occupies a cell guarded by two officers. The inquest will be resumed to morrow. Cox will be indicated by the grand lury Friday. In reference to the suspicions of Dr. Hull's connection with the murder of his wife, it is stated that there were several strong circumstantial points against him, and he was under close surveillance by the police even as late as Saturday last. It is known that there was a most infamous transaction in connection with the case. The strongest point against him was the confession of a worthless character who claimed to have met Dr. Hull in Reservoir Park, and the latter offered to make it an object to him if he would put Mrs. Hull out of the way. It was intended to use this so-called confession against the doctor. The superintendent refuses to give the name of the person who thus plotted to jeopardize Dr. Hull's life. It is not known what action will be taken against him.

THE TRIP TO NEW YORK.

Cox and his custodians, while on the steamer Bristol, occupied stateroom No. 2, known as the bridal chamber. All the passengers were anxious to see the Hull murderer and all sorts of expedients were resorted to in order to get a glimpse of him. The prisoner disposed of a hearty supper with keen relish and enjoyed a cigar while reclining on the bridal couch. He chatted good humoredly with the officers, denying that any one assisted him in the murder, and reiterating the statement that the entrance into the house was effected through the front window. He said he entertained no hope of escaping the gallows and was ready and willing to die for the crime, although he had not intended to murder Mrs. Hull when he entered the chamber. He slept from 1 o'clock until the boat reached the city. He then arose, arranged his toilet, and before leaving the boat was served with a substantial breakfast.

Miss Maggie Robinson, with whom Cox resided for some time, said to a reporter to-day that while he had a room at her house he was an eminently proper man; he had no bad habits and never drank. The day after the murder of Mrs. Hull one of the family, when reading an account of it, remarked that it was a bad case. "Yes, a horrid murder," was Cox's reply, and that was the only time she ever heard him refer to it. His manner was natural; it was calm and collected, and betrayed no emotion. Miss Robinson said that Cox had always spoken of Mrs. Hull in the kindest manner.

HOW COX IS CONFINED.

How cox is confined.

Chastine Cox, the murderer, who is at present confined in a cell in the upper tier at the police headquarters, will be guarded all night by two detectives, one being in the cell with the prisoners, and the other keeping guard outside. The reason why such extraordinary precaution is being taken, is to prevent any possible attempt at suicide.

Superintendent Walling this evening gave positive orders to the officers on guard not to allow any one, under any circumstances, to see the prisoner. After the inquest to-morrow Cox will be taken to the Tombs and kept there until the trial. All the important witnesses will be taken before the grand jury Friday, and the trial will in all probability commence early next week.

ALL OF MRS, HULL'S JEWELRY RECOVERED.

ALL OF MRS. HULL'S JEWELRY RECOVERED. Every piece of jewelry stolen from Mrs. Hull on the night of her munder, except one plain gold ring, has been recovered from Oox, the munderer, the pawnbrokers to whom he had piedged it, a mulatto girl in New York to whom he had given the topaz necklace and other jewelry, and a negro to whom she had given a rusty ring. The two persons last named are detained as witnesses. DECLINE IN THE PRICE OF COAL OUT.

DECLINE IN THE PRICE OF COAL OIL.

An important feature in the local market for crude petroleum, is the completion of the Tide-water Pipe Line. This line delivers crude oil in New York in opposition to trunk lines, which since the absorption of the Empire Line, have had a monopoly in transportation. The immediate effect of this is shown in the price of crude oil in bulk, which shows a rapid decline from five and a half cents per gallon to two and a quarter cents per gallon now. The trunk lines are forced to publish an open rate.

Business has been light in nearly all departments of trade, the attention of many buyers (both wholesale and retail) having been absorbed by peremptory auctions, which were commenced to-day, under very encouraging auspices. There was a continued and steady movement in staple goods on account of back orders, but new transactions were almost wholly of a hand-to-mouth character, as is always the case when jobbers are on the eye of stock-taking.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

A Tax Dodge.

PITTSBUEG, June 25.—A terrible fight occurred here last night between two negroes. Charles Richards and Charles Green. He accomplished this purpose with the assistance of Green. Last night when Green demanded pay for his services a fight ensued. The Thurman Committee Presents a Report to the Democratic Caucus.

Policy of the Radicals on the Bill Repealing the Test Oath.

Eads Refuses a Position on the Mississippi River Commission.

[Special to the Democrat.]

WASHINGTON, June 25 .- The joint caucus to-day adopted the programme drafted by Thurman's committee. There was considerable debate, in which the stalwart Democrats expressed their views without the least restraint, but there were very few dissenting votes when the question was put, and finally the decision was made unanimous.

The Radicals are divided on the question of opposing that part of the new bill which con-tains the repeal of the test oath, and the probability is that only a few of them will make their opposition openly on the floor of the House or the Senate.

It is reported here that Eads has notified

THE DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

The joint caucus of the Senate and House Democrats met shortly after 3 o'clock and remained in session until 6 o'clock. Before being called to order every avenue of approach was guarded for fear that some one might hear what was doing, said and done. Every corridor about the hall was strictly guarded, and no one was permitted to walk through. There was no hesitation in saying, however, afterward, that the caucus had adopted the report of the advisory committee agreed to this morning.

This was that the vetoed judicial bill

Mr. Waddell, of Missouri, offered the vetoed bill and urged its passage again as a proper action for the Democrats to take under the circumstances. There was a strong element in favor of Waddell's proposition, but in the end it was rejected.

Mr. Elackburn spoke in favor of immediate adjournment without voting another dollar of appropriation.

A number of stalwart Democrats absented themselves from the caucus, so as not to be in any way bound by its decision.

There were only about seventy members of the House present and about twenty-five Senators.

The report of the advisory committee was adopted by a majority of only five Representatives. Six Senators voted against it. Among those wno spoke most carnestly against it were Speaker Randall and Senator Wallace. Some of the members say to-night that they will not be bound by the caucus action, but will make another effort to send the vetoed bill back to the President. Other members and Senators believe that there will be a final closing of the session by Saturday night, or Monday at the farthest.

Others, again, shrug their shoulders when asked about it, and reply that no living man can tell when.

Altogether the situation is very much mixed.

THE TRADE DOLLAR BILL

The Senate Finance Committee will again consider the House trade dollar bill to-morrow morning. The triends of the measure on the committee say that Bayard is raising the same tactics to prevent any action on this bill that he did on the Warner bill. It is evident that there is considerable feeling existing between the opponents and friends of these bills. The latter particularly are outspoken in their condemnation of what they term the unwarranted position assumed by the chairman of the committee and those in accord with him. It is very doubtful if anything will be done with the trade dollar bill at this session.

SENATE.

Washington, June 25.—Senator Thurman, President pro term, being detained at home by illness, left a note designating Mr. Eaton as Vice President for to-day.

The Chair laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting all information in the possession of the department in regard to the action of the National Board of Health as to a refrigerating ship for disinfecting purcoses. Referred to the Yellow Fever Committee.

Mr. Vest introduced a joint resolution declaring the free coinage of silver to be demanded alike by patriotism and statesmanship. Laid on the table.

Mr. Burnside introduced a resolution declaring the Monroe doctrine the policy of this country, and that the construction of a canal across the Isthmus of Darlen by any foreign power would be in violation of that doctrine and a menace to the supremacy of the United

Mr. Beck called up his resolution, offered yesterday, asking for a joint committee consisting of five Senators and seven Representatives to examine and report at the next session what changes should be made in the mode of collecting revenue with a view to economy; the commission to sit during recess and be armed with the usual powers of commissions. Referred to the Finance Committee.

The second prohibits any officer of the United States government from contributions upon his subordinates, or of allowing it to be done for the purpose of assisting in coming elections, under penalty of fine and imprisonment and disqualification for office-holding for ever. These several amendments were ordered printed and laid on the table.

Mr. Windom arose and spoke generally on the political situation. He reviewed the attitude of the two parties just before the war, and afterward. The policy of the Democratic party had brought on the war, and afterward nearly paralyzed the patriotic efforts of the North. He understood the financial condition of 1869 and 1878. In the former year, our credit was poor and loans difficult to negotiate at 12 per cent. Now, foreign nations beg to invest in our securities at 4 per cent. Mr. Windom presented a good many statistics calculated to show an increase in the trade and prosperity of the country since 1890. All this, he claimed, was the result of the Republican policy.

Mr. Saulsbury replied by calling attention to the other results of Republican rule. There were hundreds of theountry had been collected at a ruinous cost and misappropriated with prodigality. The Senator had charged the Republican officials with stealing millions of dollars. He would ask for proof. It had been found by a Democratic committee that not a dollar had been stolen.

There was no hesitation in saying, however, afterward, that the caucus had adopted the report of the advisory committee agreed to this morning.

This was that the vetoed judicial bill should be divided in two parts, the first being all that part to which the President didn't object. This will include the repeal of the test oath law.

The other will contain an appropriation of $600,000 for United States marshals, coupled with a provision that none of the money therein appropriated shall be applied to the payment of deputy marshals, or to any other purpose than that specified, under the heavy penalty of a fine of $5000 and imprisonmen.

The penal clause was suggested by Senator Beck.

It is believed that the first bill will be signed, but that the caucus was not very harmonious.

There was a good deal of discussion, and it is admitted that the caucus was not very harmonious.
