

RABIES, AGONY AND DEATH.

A FATAL CASE OF HYDROPHOBIA AT THE CHAMBERS STREET HOSPITAL.

Symptoms of the Disease Manifested by a Washington Market Porter a Month After Being Bitten by a Dog—Dreadful Sufferings that Caused Death in Two Days—A Cripple's Paroxysmal Strength.

"Davis" Canavan died in great agony at the Chambers Street Hospital at 6.30 this morning of hydrophobia. He had been taken there for treatment at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Charles Canavan is the name on several articles belonging to the unfortunate man, including a letter addressed to him; but he was affectionately known as "Davis." He was a cripple, having suffered a contraction of one leg and the loss of an eye when a lad. He was twenty-seven years old and was employed as a porter about Washington market.

On Oct. 8 last Canavan saw a big, ferocious bull-dog and a handsome, shaggy-coated Newfoundland in an unequal fight in the road in front of 270 Greenwich street, where he lodged. In attempting to separate the animals he was bitten by one of the brutes, a big gash being made in the small finger of his right hand. So firm was the grip of the dog that Canavan lifted it clear from the ground in his efforts to pull his finger out of its jaws.

Saturday night Canavan bought a glass of beer in a neighboring saloon, but when it was set on the bar before him a shudder ran through his frame, he could not drink the amber liquid and froth came to his mouth. The froth seemed to strangle him; his pharynx contracted convulsively and he coughed in a manner resembling the half-suppressed barking of a dog.

Yesterday morning, on his way out, Canavan's room-mate, Allan Kent, stopped at the door of a kind-hearted little woman who lives on the floor below and asked if she would not look after Davis, who seemed to be suffering. She went a little later to Canavan's room and found him sitting on the edge of his bed vainly trying to pull his finger out of its jaws. The woman's assistance was not needed, for Canavan was able to get up and walk to the Chambers Street Hospital, and there he sat behind the stove in the reception-room, waiting for his number to be called and frothing at the mouth and coughing like a barking dog.

Dr. Wedekind, the house surgeon, thought instantly upon examining Canavan that it was a genuine case of hydrophobia, and by dint of questioning became sure of it. The case was diagnosed on the hospital books as rabies, and later, in consultation, Dr. C. H. Wilkin, the senior surgeon; Dr. Garrison and Dr. Wedekind decided that it was hydrophobia.

IOWA IS A DOUBTFUL STATE.

Representative McDonald Says Allison Will Be Nominated by the Republicans.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.) WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Representative McDonald, of Minnesota, believes that the next Presidential election will find some of the Northwest States in the Democratic column.

"Only seven years ago the State of Iowa gave Garfield a majority of 79,000. In 1882 the majority for Gov. Sherman fell to 53,600. In 1884 Mr. Blaine's plurality was only 25,000. Last year the Republican Secretary of State won by only 9,000 majority and it is not unreasonable now to believe the reports that the Democrats have carried the State. If they have not carried it this year there is no reason why they should not next year. Iowa is no longer a safe Republican State. In the best view that I can take of the situation, it is very uncertain. There is little doubt that the Republican candidate for the Presidency next year will be Senator Allison, of Iowa, who is the man that Mr. Blaine would select if he were asked to name the Republican nominee. And it looks now as if Cleveland would carry Iowa in 1888 against any Republican candidate, even Allison. There is no doubt about it. The Democrats are on top and the Republicans are falling further and further behind every year."

CALLAHAN'S IRON NERVE.

His Wonderful Calmness After Being Run Over by a Street Car.

A Broadway street car, crowded with people on their way home from the opera, was running at a high rate of speed between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh streets soon after midnight last night. The passengers were suddenly startled by feeling the car strike and run over something and then say, "To those who were left the car for the purpose of finding out what had happened was afforded a display of coolness, courage and nerve seldom witnessed. Seated on the paving stones, calmly smoking a cigar, was a man whose legs the wheels of the car had just passed.

An ambulance on its way from the Twenty-second Precinct to Bellevue Hospital arrived at the scene a few minutes after the accident occurred. Ambulance Surgeon Sanford and Houseman Cahill removed the man, who then gave his name as John Callahan, from the pavement to the ambulance and immediately carried him to Bellevue Hospital. At the hospital, Dr. Thomas McCann found that Callahan had received an oblique laceration of all the tissues of the thigh, together with a compound fracture of the femur. An amputation of the injured member was immediately made and all the blood vesselized. The efforts of the surgeons were in vain. Callahan died at 3.30 o'clock this morning, about three-quarters of an hour after the operation was completed. Father Callahan administered the sacrament to the dying man.
