

SEVEN CROWS WERE OMINOUS

THE BIRDS VISIT THE BARK SCOTLAND 800 MILES FROM SHORE.

They swooped in on the "Sailors' Dinner" like harpies, and the sailors who knew they knew the vessel was wrecked on the Jersey Coast in Saturday Night's Storm.

OFFICIAL TO THE WORLD.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Dec. 18.—The bark Scotland, Captain William Munro, from Liverpool to New York, started on a voyage to Liverpool on Saturday evening. During the voyage an event happened which the sailors said was a sure portent of disaster, and the result fully justified their fears. When about fifteen days out, and about 800 miles from shore, while the crew of twenty men were sitting at dinner they were somewhat startled by the sudden appearance of a flock of seven crows which flew through the open window and surrounded the table. The birds appeared to be famished for they alighted upon the table and began devouring the food which had been set out for the men. The sailors, as soon as they saw the crows, got up and left the table, saying they had enough, although they had hardly eaten a mouthful. They all seemed to be struck with fear, and from that day on were upon their work with a sullen look, as though they apprehended some danger. After that, when they sat down to their meals, they would invariably close the windows and cabin doors so as to prevent the recurrence of the omen.

Among those on board at the time was a young woman from Whitestone, L. I.—Mary Seymour—who had accompanied the captain on the voyage. Upon the trip she was accompanied by a young man, a friend of her father's, named Seymour. She reported this evening, "but when I saw those crows alight on the table I was struck with horror. I have heard and read so much about the ill-luck which follows the visit of such birds that I immediately felt that something was going to happen. I told Miss Munro, the captain's daughter, of my feelings, but she laughed at me and even went so far as to catch one of the birds and keep it in the cabin for some days. I felt satisfied that the crew did not like the idea of Miss Munro keeping the bird on board, but they all thought so much of her that they did not say anything, and they all heaved a sigh of relief when she said she had thrown her overboard. But little was said from that day on, and we somehow had party frolics on the occasion until about the middle of the storm set in. None of the men or myself said anything, but I know that the fear had again seized us, and we looked for something unfortunate.

At 8 o'clock, when Capt. Munro came into the cabin and informed us that by morning we would be in New York harbor, I felt that I was in a bad way. About half an hour later I was somewhat startled by having the mate call to one of the men to leave the deck to ascertain what the wind was doing. I ended to the deck and found a terrible storm raging. I immediately went below, and hardly had I gained the stowage of Miss Munro when I heard something snap, and soon after that we were struck upon the bar and I knew the omen had come true and we were wrecked. The captain, who had now gone on deck, soon returned and told us we had struck on the Jersey coast. The boom had broken and had fallen upon the vessel, thereby rendering it useless for a time. Although Capt. Munro told us that a crew of life-savers were on shore to render us help at any time, and that I could not sleep, as I could not drive the thought of the fact that I was in a bad way, and a welcome sign when they broke and I saw the life-savers plugging the breeches buoy and took us off the ill-fated boat.

The Scotland is of about 1,500 tons burden and loaded with goods and empty oil barrels. The steamer floated in place of the Scotland at 8 o'clock last night, after being in full view of the wreck. The wind was then blowing from the north and the sea was very rough. The mate had made his way about half over his patrol when the Scotland was discovered, tossed by the surf on the outer bar.

The crew at the station-house was notified and a huge bonfire built on the shore near the wreck. For the night the fire kept burning, and the station from the station was immediately hauled to the scene of disaster, and a vessel that carried a life over the ship. The ship's crew, however, as it was not until daylight that the breeches buoy was put in operation. The mate of the ship, who had been hauled ashore, the remainder of the crew, twenty in all, remained on the vessel. Miss Seymour and her father, who had been taken on board, were taken off in the breeches buoy during the day. The young ladies manifested much self-confidence when being hauled ashore in the breeches buoy. They stood the gaze of the immense crowd on the beach with composure and sang and chattered three days out from Liverpool, bound for New York. The captain reports good weather during the passage. Although the weather was not so good as six feet of water in her hold, the chances of hauling her off are favorable if the weather continues good. The wrecking Company's steamer arrived this afternoon.

The storm last night is said to have been the worst that has raged along the coast in several years. The wind blew a perfect gale and the snow was thick mixed with sleet that the parolmen along the coast had hardly any business.

The schooner Lena M. Collingham, from Virginia to New York, with a cargo of lumber, was wrecked near Hoboken last night. The crew were all saved. The vessel is a total wreck.

QUICKLY COWED BY CLUBS.

A Trio of Anarchists from Hoboken Get Up a Small-Sized Riot.

Three dissipated-looking Anarchists, hailing from Hoboken, N. J., were taken to the Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning charged with inciting a riot in the meeting-room attached to the Masonic hall, No. 412 Ninth street, at midnight Saturday. They did not look a bit aggressive, all the energy having been knocked out of them on the previous evening. Their heads were sore and bound up with blood-stained bandages, indicating that a terrible fight had taken place.

The promoters were Charles Agner, a piano-case maker, who had a room at No. 114 Clinton street or Greenwood street, Hoboken, N. J.; William Hayden and Henry Nightingale, all about thirty years of age and members of the cabinet-makers' branch of the Progressive Labor party. Two members of the Central Labor Union, Ed. W. Wilson, of No. 703 Tenth avenue, and Armin Widmer, of No. 433 West Thirty-seventh street, appeared as complainants. Their heads were also wrapped in blood-stained cloths. It appears that the Anarchists are in the habit of holding their meetings at Hugo Meyer's saloon, on Ninth street, between First and Second streets. From that place the trio of Anarchists started on a tour of the town Saturday evening. They paid a visit to the saloon at No. 57 Ninth avenue, and were very noisy there, insulting the proprietor and two customers. Their heads were also wrapped in blood-stained cloths. SLAIN BY A CRAZY FANATIC.

A Woman Offers Herself as a Passover Feast Sacrifice, and Dies.

SELEMA, Ala., Dec. 18.—A horrible murder was committed here to-day. William W. Jordan, a faith doctor, has been living in Selma for the past twelve months, and in that time has acquired great influence among the negroes, whom he told that he had come to redeem the negroes. He arranged for a Passover feast at the house of two negro women in the outskirts of the city this morning, and told them a sacrifice was necessary. Frances Driver said she was willing to offer herself as a sacrifice, and laid her head on the table. Jordan thereupon took a sword and struck her several blows on the neck and stomach, a number of times, killing her instantly. The body was then dragged out into the street by the two other women.

The New Yorker Made a Good Catch.

LOWELL, Mass., Dec. 18.—Daniel Page, who has been arrested here by Deputy Sheriff Bryant, of New York, is one of the smartest confidence men in the country. By misrepresentation he managed to secure a large amount of stock of the Champion Silver Mining Company, whose office is here. He sold his shares indiscriminately, in violation of the contract with the company. He was arrested in Glens Falls, N. Y., for obtaining $4,500 from Daniel E. Peck under false pretenses. Investigation shows that he is known in Toronto as Tom Scott and in New York as Sam Brown; in Los Angeles, Cal., as Henry Page; in Havre, Ill., as Lincoln Page; in Rochester, N. Y., as Cyrus Page. He tried to swindle the Justice Gold and Silver Mining Company of San Francisco, and cleared out suddenly, in a canoe he had a heavy store. He swindled Mrs. Thastner, of Rochester, N. Y., out of $500. He is now in Cambridge Jail. He is fifty-one years old and a native of Maine.

SULLIVAN'S LAST NIGHT IN IRELAND. A Rousing Reception at Belfast by a Distinguished Audience.

DUBLIN, Dec. 18.—John L. Sullivan's Irish tour came to a close last night with a grand exhibition in Ulster Hall, Belfast. The distinguished pugilist was accompanied to Belfast by Phillips, his backer, Secretary Barnett, Fred Gallagher and Michael Gunn, of the Dublin Gaiety Theatre. He was very cordially greeted by the crowds which had assembled both at the railway station and at the Queen's Hotel. Ulster Hall was thronged, the audience including Major-Gen. Wiseman Clarke, commanding, and officers of the local garrison, the heads of the principal departments and the elite of Belfast and neighboring towns.

Upon his introduction by Mr. Gallagher, Sullivan met with a very flattering reception and made a short speech. The cheering was renewed again and again as Sullivan retired to his dressing-room. On his reappearance in ring costume the enthusiasm reached its height. Jack Ashton, too, was warmly received. Both were in excellent form, and the exhibition throughout was of the most brilliant character. At the conclusion the spectators rose en masse and paid yet another tribute of admiration to the heroes of the arena. The sparring matches between members of Sullivan's combination troupe—Charles Hopkins, Frank Murphy, Jack Hickey, Jim Kendrick, Nuno Wallace, Charles Williams, Sam Blacklock and Tricky Hook—were greatly enjoyed. A number of military officers and others called on Sullivan after the exhibition and tendered their hearty good wishes for his success in the contest with Jim Smith. The slugger and party left by the mail steamer for Glasgow at 10 P. M.

Sullivan will remain on tour till Jan. 10, when he will retire into strict training for six weeks to meet the winner of the Smith-Kilrain fight. It is more than probable, Sullivan informs me, that he will train at the Carragh of Kilmore, where he is assured he will have quietness and roost every facility for the work.

I am in position to authoritatively state that Jim Smith, champion of England, and Jake Kilrain still intend to fight their international battle to-morrow, Monday morning, the venue being located at Roubaix, in France, before the close of the month. Smith remains a strong favorite, and in London on Saturday odds of 5 to 1 were laid on him.

CO-OPERATIVE FARMING A FAILURE. A Business Enterprise Approved by the K. of L. Sold Out by the Sheriff.

BRANDY, Minn., Dec. 18.—The experiment with co-operative farming, known as the Crow Wing County scheme, is pronounced a failure. This is the plan which was approved by the Knights of Labor and of which so much has been expected. The enterprise was begun under flattering prospects on a large tract of land in the southern part of this county about Bay Lake. The land was good gravelly land, with scattering of scrub-oak timber. Near at hand, also, was plenty of pine and other wood. A saw-mill was put up which was expected to produce lumber for large buildings. But none of the projects proved successful, and after two years' effort, the leading members of the colony have permanently disengaged, and all but one, Mr. Rankin, have departed.

The Sheriff a few days ago sold the mill under foreclosure. Mr. Rankin and Mr. Young, with their families, are members of the Presbyterian Church, and for some time after Mr. Young left the colony had everything went along smoothly, the two families being on intimate terms. Several weeks ago, however, a quarrel broke out between the two families, and Mr. Rankin claims that the quarrel was caused by a dispute over a small tract of land. Mr. Rankin claims that he has not accounted for the quarrel, and that he has not invested in the colony. Mr. Rankin claims on the contrary, that he has carefully examined the accounts of the colony, and has no objection to his own expenses on contributions made by his sons, who are printers, employed at a printing store. His wife and two children joined Mr. Young in leaving Mr. Rankin alone at the farm, and the enterprise again getting upon its feet.

H.O'NEILL & CO 6th Ave., 20th to 21st St. BURGULARS AT DOBBS FERRY.

After Successfully Robbing Three Residences They are Caught With Their Booty.

Early on Sunday morning burglars entered the residences of three citizens of Dobbs Ferry, D. O. Bradley, President of the village; W. H. Yale, and Mrs. Major. They stole some silverware, an overcoat and a value full of clothing from Mr. Bradley, silverware and evening apparel from Mrs. Yale and valuable jewelry from Mrs. Major.

Mr. Bradley saw one of the burglars just as he was leaving his premises. He hastily donned his clothing and followed. On his way he met a Dobbs Ferry policeman, and together they followed the burglar down as far as Hastings, where they lost track of him in the darkness.

A number of officers, including a Yonkers policeman, noticed two men skulking along the streets carrying big bundles. Their actions were so suspicious that he determined to arrest them. As soon as he started towards them they ran, but he captured one of the pair and took him to Police Headquarters. Another officer, who was another officer brought in the second. They gave their names as John Powell, aged forty, and William More than an appearance and furnished his property. The jewelry consisted of two valuable diamonds belonging to Mrs. Major. She has not yet gone to Yonkers to identify them.

There have been numerous petty burglaries of late in this town, and the police think they have the burglars.

HARLEM BURGULARS AT WORK. One Member of a Gang Caught—He Makes a Confession.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 18.—The store of C. W. Kerner, at Chester, this county, was burglarized Friday, and Saturday night Conductor Frank McGrath, of the Erie road, saw a young man with an immense quantity of gloves aboard his train near Chester, and turned him over to the police of this city. The prisoner proved to be one of the burglars. His name is Wolford, and he resides at Harlem.

His comrades, he says, are John Earl and Loden Evans, and they all belong to the One Hundred and thirty street gang, of Harlem. Wolford is only seventeen years old, and says his comrades are about twenty-three. After robbing the store Wolford says the trio went to a barn near Craigville, remained all night and day, during which time they divided the spoils. The gloves were given to Wolford, and a ticket for this city was purchased for him by Earl. The package was to be stored, and when Earl and Evans, who were to follow on a freight, arrived the articles were to be taken to New York on the night train. Wolford's companions evidently learned that he was a trouble and did not follow. Wolford seems to be a novice at the business, and seemed anxious that his father should not learn of his arrest.
