WHO'S FOUND AN OLD MAN?

HERMAN OPPEN ANXIOUSLY SOUGHT BY HIS THREE CHILDREN.

A Pleasant Old Gentleman, But Something Wrong With His Head—He Wandered Out of His Home on Wednesday Evening and Dropped Out of Sight in a Few Minutes—Hospital and Police Stations Searched in Vain.

OST—An old man, tall, gray coated, light blue eyes, a friendly smile, forty years of age, 60, kindly face to his home, 115 East 115th st.

Herman Oppen is the missing man. As pleasant an old gentleman as you would care to meet, he is described to be, and you might talk with him a good while without discovering that he was not all right in his head. He lived in a third-story flat at the address given. With him resided his three daughters—May, Emma and Annie—and his son George.

Emma is delicate, and stayed at home with her father, while the others went to their daily employment. She was with him Wednesday evening at about 7 o'clock, when the old gentleman muttered something about going home, and, getting his hat quickly, left the room. He wore an old, short coat, had no overcoat, and did not even take his cane, without which he was hardly able to walk.

The daughter supposed he would linger about the door, or at best would move off but slowly. She followed him as soon as she could get ready, but he had on one occasion started for a way and she was not able to let him go alone. She got downstairs a few minutes after him and found that he was already out of sight.

Since then he has not been seen by his anxious children. A general alarm was sent over the police wires yesterday, and the son and daughter, in their anxious search, have visited the hospitals. They were called yesterday morning at the Morgue. The sick daughter, though scarcely able to do so, has joined in the search.

Mr. Oppen was formerly in the employ of the P. & O. steam company as a watchman, but had to leave his employment because of this trouble with his head. He has been subject to epileptic fits. He has a brother downtown, but no other people except his children.

A policeman saw an old man, who is supposed to have been Mr. Oppen, go down Fourth avenue and stop to watch some blasting operations near the Hudson river and Eleventh street. With this incident all trace of the missing man stops.

THEY ALL GOT ASHORE BUT ONE.

A Schoolboy Drowned While on a Botanical Trip in Pennsylvania.

LANCASTER, Pa., May 17.—A drowning accident attended with unusually sad features occurred this afternoon at Riegler's Landing, on the Conestoga. Dr. J. P. McCaskey, Principal of the Boys' High School, accompanied by seven of his pupils, was on a botanical tour and desired to cross the creek. The bridge was washed away several years ago and has never been replaced, an improvised raft composed of logs and stones being used for the purpose. While the entire party was on the raft it suddenly pitched overboard, and the boy, who was six to eight feet deep. Prof. McCaskey quickly got out, and the boys ashore except William Smith, who had crossed a year ago, and who was drowned.

The drowned lad was a son of Jacob Smith, a carpenter in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He was a member of this year's graduating class of the High School, and had just completed arrangements to begin the practice of law after graduating.

Johnson's Innocence Almost Proved.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—Samuel Johnson, the colored man under sentence of death for the murder of Farmer John Sharples, Sunday, Nov. 2, 1880, will probably soon be at liberty again. His innocence of the crime has been all but proved, and the case has attracted the attention of the prominent members of the Pennsylvania Bar. Samuel Wilson is believed to be the one who attacked George Bond. His name is William Samuel Wilson, 415 E. 11th st., Philadelphia. Wilson and three others did it. Bond was on some time ago and published in The World some statements which have been taken from colored wax masks, and that Mrs. Sharples, when she was murdered, came to the house, and that his lips did not move and that his face had a wax look.

Thieves Among Y. M. C. A. Members.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—Howard Neff, aged sixteen years; Lewis Goshalk, aged six, and J. L. Curry, aged twenty-one, all well-connected members of the Young Men's Christian Association, were held in the city yesterday on charges of stealing two watches from clothing left in the reading rooms of the Y. M. C. A. symposium. Much property has recently been lost in the city and the matter being placed in the hands of detectives the arrests followed.

Three "Falls-Ind" Defendants Acquitted.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.—The Federal grand jury in the fall-ash case returned a partial verdict at 10 o'clock. John Connelman, John Reardon and Dr. C. N. Metcalf were acquitted, but no report was given on County Clerk Sullivan or on George Bond. These men were the alleged accomplices of Coy and Sherman, already convicted. The latter started for Michigan City today.

Told by Workmen.

The concert for the benefit of the brewers last night at Wendell's Hall was a financial success. The United Trades' Section will meet to-night at 145 E. 11th street, when important business will be discussed.

The Rice Association of Cattle Butchers, will meet to-morrow afternoon at Brommer's Union Park.

Louis Walder, of cigar-makers' International Union No. 144, was chairman at the meeting of the Tobacco Trades Section last night.

The breadstuffs of the tobacco workers has been suspended from the Tobacco Trades Section for non-attendance and non-payment of dues.

An important matter was discussed in the Tobacco Trades Section last night. The secretary was instructed to furnish any report of it.

The case of Harry Schottlander, a former member of the cigar-makers' International Union, who was presented to the grand jury. He is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, by representing that he was going to strike against when he was at work earning wages at the time.

A DELINQUENT SECTION HAS BEEN DISAPPEARED IN THE TURKISH CROSS-OUT CHALLENGE.

MRS. SCOFIELD WILL FIGHT.
De Lancey Nicoll to Begin Legal Proceeding To-Day for Her Release.
Mrs. Lillian E. Scofield does not intend to give bail. She says she will fight in the higher courts for her release on the ground that she is unjustly detained in the House of Detention on an illegal commitment by the Coroner.
Her counsel is De Lancey Nicoll, who is assisted by Frank J. Keller. The lawyers feel confident that they will have Mrs. Scofield set free within forty-eight hours.
Mr. Nicoll intends to move in one of the higher courts to-day. He will not say exactly how he will act, but he will probably obtain a writ of habeas corpus returnable to-morrow.
Mr. Keller said in reference to the case: "If anything could be more absurd than the commitment, it is the fact that the prisoner is detained in the House of Detention for witnesses. I hear that Mrs. Scofield was taken there because the Coroner had no Tombs blanks nor at hand."
Mr. E. Mills, Ferris's bondsman, is to be brought before Coroner Levy this afternoon to show if he really owns the property which he swore was his. He explains the affidavit of Lawyer Emmer, to the effect that John O'Conor, George T. Capron and others own the property, by saying that the title is in dispute in the Supreme Court.
A letter from San Francisco in a woman's hand, and signed "M. B.," was received by Coroner Levy. The letter states in an intimate knowledge of Mrs. Scofield's career for many years. She says Mrs. Scofield was born in Liverpool in 1843 of Irish parents and went to California when quite young. Several larcenies, two attempts at blackmailing, an assault on a woman with a poker and cruelty to a younger sister are among the offences charged by the writer against Mrs. Scofield.

A COURT IS HIS STAGE NOW.

TRAGEDIAN O'CONNOR HAS HIMSELF FOR A CLIENT IN A LAWSUIT.

Appearing Before Justice Clancy with His Bride to Resist a Demand for Salary Made by One of His Company—Acute Legal Points and Stinging Questions Which Could Not be Skipped.

The case of Richard Griffin against James Owen O'Conor, the unscrupulous tragedian, was called in the Second District Civil Court to-day by Justice Clancy.

Lawyer Sullivan, of Blaks & Sullivan, explained in behalf of Mr. Griffin that the suit was one of several brought to recover pay for services as support to Mr. O'Conor on the theatrical stage.

At this Mr. O'Conor, now supported wholly by his bride of a month, arose, and addressing the Court in the voice of the ghost of Hamlet, said: "If Your Honor please, I happen to be a counsellor at law as well as a bad tragedian. And I move the dismissal of the case. I have been sued in the wrong district. Mr. Griffin lives in New Rochelle."

The bosom of the tragedian heaved and swelled with an emotion that gave vent through his nostrils and pursed lips.

Griffin, a tall, slim young man, declared in a voice like the bass in a frog orchestra that he lived at the Hotel Everett.

"Ah-h! Quite so! Like most actors he lives now here—now there!" exclaimed the little man of tragic lege, waving his hand majestically. "Well, well, I find the motion untenable."

Mr. Griffin laughed good humoredly and said his whole family lived at the Everett.

Lawyer Sullivan moved an adjournment to a certain date, whereupon the tragic lawyer of legal tragedian, as you please, remonstrated on Nights in the Bar-Room" style that on that day he must appear in another court to defend an action brought by another lady for salary. A day was finally fixed upon, and then Mr. James Owen O'Conor placed his papers in a brown bag, which he turned over to the custody of his brown-frocked, buff-jacketed bride, and they left the courtroom.

Mr. O'Conor recognized THE EVENING WORLD reporter. Raising both hands and rolling his eyes heavenward he apostrophized emotionally: "What enterprise, my dear! What enterprise on the part of THE EVENING WORLD!"

Then he introduced Mrs. O'Conor and opened the bag again.

"Here are my papers," he said. "These are notes for my guidance if you would like to copy them."

These are the notes: MOTION TO DISMISS. Long or short summons. Griffin's defendant. Griffin's contract. Griffin's contract. Griffin's contract. Griffin's contract.
