

FREE AMERICA'S HERO.

MASSACHUSETTS UNVEILS ITS SHAFT TO CRISPUS ATTUCKS.
Impending exercises on Boston Common and in Faneuil Hall—What the Boston Massacre Meant to the Future of America, According to the Words of John Adams and Daniel Webster.

SCENE OF THE FAMOUS BOSTON MASSACRE, MARCH 5, 1770.
(From an Old Print.)

brave comrades, who were massacred by the British on State street, March 5, 1770.
Doris Hall, State House, was the scene of the reception meeting of the Committee at 10 o'clock this morning, and all preparations were completed for the procession which started at 11 o'clock from the State House.

The Governor and Executive Council, the Citizens Committee and invited guests, in carriages escorted by the military and civic organizations from the State House through Beacon, School, Washington, Boylston and Tremont streets to the site of the monument on the Common, where they witnessed the unveiling exercises.

After this the line reformed and proceeded through Tremont, Court and State streets to the scene of the massacre, thence through Merchants Row to Faneuil Hall, where further exercises of a commemorative nature were held.
On the Common the exercises consisted of music, prayer, remarks by W. H. Dupree and Mayor (John) Eaton and the unveiling of the monument by Gov. Ames.

APOLLO'S COSTLY BATH.

He Loved Him Into Marriage, and Now He Must Pay $3 a Week.
Justice Duffy decided yesterday at Jefferson Market Court that Apollo Vivian Castellanos should pay his wife $3 a week alimony. Apollo went through a rather meagre marriage ceremony with Susan Henry last year.

His wedding ceremony was a bathing suit, the scene of a ceremony was the bath-house at the foot of West Twenty-third street, and the officiating clergyman was the woman who had charge of the bath. Apollo and the fair Susan went under the matrimonial yoke on the Fourth of July. No there was much playfulness in the whole marriage.

As Apollo's humor waned, his devotion to Susan "peered out." Hence her suit for support, which Justice Duffy has answered by granting Apollo to the tune of $3 a week for Mrs. Apollo and a small Apollo, who came on the scene seven months ago.

Brooklyn met with a complete surprise to-day in the tie-up of its street railway lines, with a prospect of a general tie-up of all its surface lines, unless the New Williamsburg and Flatbush Railroad Company yields to the demands of its 300 employees by abolishing the abuses complained of.

The lines which have stopped running are the Nostrand avenue, running from South Seventh Street Ferry to Prospect Park, via Lee Avenue, Broadway and Nostrand avenue; the Lorimer street line, beginning at Park and Nostrand avenue and extending along Govenor street, to Lorimer and thence to Tenth Street Ferry; and the North Second street line, from the Twenty-third street ferry, via North Second street and Metropolitan avenue, to the Lutheran cemetery. The North Second street line is leased by the Flatbush Company from the Brooklyn, Bushwick and Queensborough Companies.

When the early riers, mostly workmen, whose custom it is to take the cars of these lines to reach the city or the eastern terminal of the routes, got out this morning they waited in vain for the cars. They knew nothing of the tie-up, and were being swung while before the realization was had.

All the girls who go to the Central Grammar school in the Nostrand avenue line had to walk, but did not mind it much, and tripped gaily to the big school building.
The conductors of the company, at Park and Nostrand avenues, were congregated a hundred conductors, drivers and stablemen, all quiet and waiting for the military policeman keeping his watchful eyes on them.

In a hall in Myrtle avenue, near Spencer street, another group of the striking employees were congregated. It is the meeting-place of Local Assembly No. 5, 515, of District Assembly No. 10, and the strikers of the other lines involved in the tie-up belong.
Andrew Best, Secretary of the Executive Board of District Assembly No. 75, was present, and said that body had taken matters in hand, and told an unruly crowd reporter the cases that led to the tie-up. He said:

BROOKLYN TIED UP.

Three Big Surface Lines Stopped by the Knights.

The Companies Charged With Breaking Their Word.

Likelihood That the Trouble Will Spread to Other Lines.

Brooklyn met with a complete surprise to-day in the tie-up of its street railway lines, with a prospect of a general tie-up of all its surface lines, unless the New Williamsburg and Flatbush Railroad Company yields to the demands of its 300 employees by abolishing the abuses complained of.

The lines which have stopped running are the Nostrand avenue, running from South Seventh Street Ferry to Prospect Park, via Lee Avenue, Broadway and Nostrand avenue; the Lorimer street line, beginning at Park and Nostrand avenue and extending along Govenor street, to Lorimer and thence to Tenth Street Ferry; and the North Second street line, from the Twenty-third street ferry, via North Second street and Metropolitan avenue, to the Lutheran cemetery. The North Second street line is leased by the Flatbush Company from the Brooklyn, Bushwick and Queensborough Companies.

When the early riers, mostly workmen, whose custom it is to take the cars of these lines to reach the city or the eastern terminal of the routes, got out this morning they waited in vain for the cars. They knew nothing of the tie-up, and were being swung while before the realization was had.

All the girls who go to the Central Grammar school in the Nostrand avenue line had to walk, but did not mind it much, and tripped gaily to the big school building.
The conductors of the company, at Park and Nostrand avenues, were congregated a hundred conductors, drivers and stablemen, all quiet and waiting for the military policeman keeping his watchful eyes on them.

In a hall in Myrtle avenue, near Spencer street, another group of the striking employees were congregated. It is the meeting-place of Local Assembly No. 5, 515, of District Assembly No. 10, and the strikers of the other lines involved in the tie-up belong.
Andrew Best, Secretary of the Executive Board of District Assembly No. 75, was present, and said that body had taken matters in hand, and told an unruly crowd reporter the cases that led to the tie-up. He said:

"It has been forced by continued violations on the part of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, who have written agreement we made with the company last March. The men have been working to get overtime, and some of them have been unjustly and arbitrarily discharged without a hearing.
The tie-up has been run on Sundays over the twelve-hour limit, and trippers over or swing have gone over thirteen hours. The strikers have called for the time for meals, the agreement calling for fifteen minutes for breakfast, dinner and twenty for luncheon.
Men prominent in the Local have been discharged for that reason, undoubtedly, but those who have been given notice, as Harris is the cause of the trouble, and when a man with a grievance approached him he was told to get out of town."

"At the Lorimer street depot the conductors who should be relieved from duty at mealtimes have been compelled to switch off the cars. The strikers have had to do extra work over the time stated in the agreement. The strikers are responsible for the disturbance of their regular duties, even when burped with extra work.
The strikers have been run on Sundays over the twelve-hour limit, and trippers over or swing have gone over thirteen hours. The strikers have called for the time for meals, the agreement calling for fifteen minutes for breakfast, dinner and twenty for luncheon.
Men prominent in the Local have been discharged for that reason, undoubtedly, but those who have been given notice, as Harris is the cause of the trouble, and when a man with a grievance approached him he was told to get out of town."

TOOK POISON ON THE STREET.

A PRETTY GIRL TRIES TO END HER WRECKED LIFE.

She Came from Canada, She Says, and Met Misfortune in This City—Serious Charges Against a Druggist Who Caused Her Arrest—It Was Then That She Drank the Poison—The Druggist Says It's Black-mail.

A pretty Canadian girl lay in the New York Hospital this morning, suffering from the effects of a dose of bichloride of mercury, which she swallowed at the corner of Fifteenth street and Seventh avenue last night, while on her way to the Thirtieth street station-house, where she was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.
The girl, who is named Annie Lyons, is an Irish girl and has been in this city for four years. She lives at the corner of Fourteenth street and Seventh avenue.
According to the story of Policeman James McVey, Druggist Scott spoke to her early in the evening, requesting her to remain with him, as he expected trouble from a woman.

About 7 o'clock a pretty little dark-eyed brunette clad in a dark Newmarket and a velvet-trimmed hat entered the drug store, and walking up to Mr. Scott, said she had a bottle of bichloride of mercury, which she had bought at the corner of Fourteenth street and Seventh avenue.
According to the story of Policeman James McVey, Druggist Scott spoke to her early in the evening, requesting her to remain with him, as he expected trouble from a woman.

About 7 o'clock a pretty little dark-eyed brunette clad in a dark Newmarket and a velvet-trimmed hat entered the drug store, and walking up to Mr. Scott, said she had a bottle of bichloride of mercury, which she had bought at the corner of Fourteenth street and Seventh avenue.
According to the story of Policeman James McVey, Druggist Scott spoke to her early in the evening, requesting her to remain with him, as he expected trouble from a woman.

About 7 o'clock a pretty little dark-eyed brunette clad in a dark Newmarket and a velvet-trimmed hat entered the drug store, and walking up to Mr. Scott, said she had a bottle of bichloride of mercury, which she had bought at the corner of Fourteenth street and Seventh avenue.
According to the story of Policeman James McVey, Druggist Scott spoke to her early in the evening, requesting her to remain with him, as he expected trouble from a woman.

GEN. NEWTON'S SUCCESSOR.

Deputy County Clerk Gilroy Selected by Tammany.

The liveliest interest attaches to the probable appointment of Mayor-elect Grant to the many important offices of the city, which will be vacated during his term of office.
In connection with none of these is there more manifest than in the case of the Department of Public Works, with its enormous patronage and political power.
This Department will be one of the first which the new Mayor will be called upon to supply with an efficient and capable administrator.

The term of office of Gen. John Newton, the present Commissioner, expires in May, but it is not until the end of the year that he will be called upon to resign.
For some time he has been credited with a desire to leave the office, and it is believed that he would be required to serve from January 1st until May under the administration of a Mayor who would be a native-born citizen of the city.
The consummation devoutly to be wished "by Tammany" has required the state-makers to be early at their work, and a number of names have already been suggested as possible successors.

WEeping AT THE GRAVE OF ROYER.

Mrs. Willmet's Pet Dog Buried in a Costly Casket at Bridgeport.

BUrDENPORT, Conn., Nov. 14.—The pet dog of Mrs. Samuel Willmet died Monday, plunging the household into deep sorrow. Some heartless individual had administered a dose of poison. The funeral occurred this morning and was attended by a large number of friends. The interment was in the family private lot.
The casket was lined with white satin and covered outside with purple velvet. The remains were placed in a dog kennel of roses tipped with sprays of dog fennel.
The members of the family stood weeping around the grave, and what remained of Rover was laid at rest.
Some of the floral offerings were expensive and unique, one being a dog kennel of roses tipped with sprays of dog fennel.
News Summary.
France decides not to abolish her Embassy to the Vatican.
Several Americans, including an army officer, are arrested and imprisoned while hunting in Mexico.
The Roumanian Parliament is opened by King Charles.
Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria has a narrow escape from assassination.
President Cleveland gets a gold-headed cane from the members of the fair of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, in this city.

EXTRA

2 O'CLOCK.

VIEWS OF CONVICTS

On the Motive and Method of Whitechapel's Murderer.

Jesse Pomeroy, the Boy Fiend, Talks for "The Evening World."

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde the Nucleus of His Theory.

Englishmen in Sing Sing Give Some Interesting Opinions.

Janitor Titus and Others at Trenton Express Their Ideas.

Correspondents of THE EVENING WORLD were sent this morning to the State Prison at Sing Sing, N. Y., Trenton, N. J., and Charlestown, Mass., for the unique purpose of securing some expert opinions and theories as to the Whitechapel mystery. The reports received are appended:

JESSE POMEROY TALKS LEARNEDLY.

The Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde Theory Meets His Ideas Exactly.

"I don't know how Jesse Pomeroy came to learn of the Whitechapel murder," remarked a Charlestown man yesterday, "but I understand that he has given opinions in regard to the subject. I think he is a very good fellow, and I think he has an idea of what he has said." asked an EVENING WORLD correspondent.
"Certainly, Jesse has been reading Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and he has formed some theories which are interesting. He is a firm believer that good and evil exist in every human being. The good nature, he believes, is the dominant one, but a person suffering such an affliction as during the Whitechapel murders, the good nature is overcome, and the evil nature is the result of accumulated wickedness inherited. This inheritance may, like any disease, be dormant in the system from one generation to another.
When, however, it breaks forth in its might, it is a terrible thing, and the deeds committed are more horrible than those of ordinary occurrence.
This Jesse believes to be the case in the Whitechapel murders. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when he committed the murder of the woman in the Whitechapel horror. He coincides with Dr. Forster's theory in this regard. The distinguished medical authority calls it homicidal mania, and says that a person suffering such an affliction is during the period of his mania, calm and forgetful of what he is doing, and he is not conscious of his actions.
For myself, I am convinced that Pomeroy was laboring under homicidal mania when