MARRYING TITLES.

Some people are surprised, and some patriotically indignant, at the havoc made among our marriageable American women by foreigners with titles. Not only our young girls, just budding into society, but our bouncing matrons widows are being carried over the ocean by the score, and the homes of our Fifth Avenue begin to feel in the shade if they cannot announce an expected visit from "our daughter, the Marchioness of Droyot," or "our dear child, the Countess Carbonele."

HENRY LABOUCHE has explained the desire of the foreign nobility to seek American wives. Girls in England are awkward, red-embowed, large-footed, badly dressed, hoydenish misses, with giggling propensities and no conversational powers. American girls are handsome, natural, always at ease, a little "cheeky," well dressed, good conversationalists and free from the smell of bread-and-butter. He declares that England will continue to be overcrowded with old maids until English girls realize these facts and become Americanized. The principal attraction of American women, however, is the fact that they have money and can do with it generally what they please. The worst use they can put it to is to bestow it on a beggarly foreigner because he happens to possess a title. They would do better to spend it on home manufactures.

ANNA DICKINSON'S CLAIM.

Miss ANNA DICKINSON has not been fairly treated by the Republican National Committee. Apart from the question of the legal status of her claim for the $1,200 for which she sues the Committee, there has been an attempt to belittle the services she rendered in the campaign. Miss DICKINSON has spoken for the Republican cause ever since the party was founded, and her addresses during the war certainly were patriotic, inspiring and useful. HORACE GRIZZLEY, were he living to-day, would appreciate her efforts, and no unkind word in relation to her would be suffered to appear in the Tribune. The members of the Committee ought to pay Miss DICKINSON'S claim, if they do so out of their own pockets. They won enough money on election bets to afford to give her five times the amount she demands as her right. It is a picaresque business to mar the celebration of a great political victory by trying to beat a woman of genius, who has helped to secure it, out of a few dollars. The Grand Old Party is not a Good Old Paymaster.

The Grand Jury investigation of the Seneca meadows mystery has brought out the fact that the dead woman was not the tramp, MARTHA KING, after all. The Paterson Chief of Police was mistaken when he supposed that he identified the body. The crime will now, it is hoped, be brought to light if the woman was the victim of foul play.

Major JOHN A. BUTLER, who conducted Mayor Hewitt's canvass in Harlem, is now called upon to fight a campaign in the courts. Three wives are after him. The Major, who talked a great deal about honesty during the election, has been a repeater at the ballot-box of matrimony.

THE RIGHT WILL ALWAYS WIN.

A Note from John Shephard, Who Adopted the Orphan Josie.

To the Editor of The Evening World: I take the pleasure of writing you these few lines to thank you for all that you have done for us. My mother also thanks you. I hope that you will continue in all such good works. It will reach the Juvenile Asylum authorities not to be too hasty again in their action. It was a hard fight, but the right will always win against the wrong. I held a big party here on the 27th of last month in honor of Josie Shephard's safe return home again. We had 100 people in the house at the party. I am sending Josie to the German school. He is learning German and English. Yours respectfully, JOHN SHEPHARD, 888 North Clinton street, Rochester, N. Y., Sunday, Nov. 11.

Eyes Ears Nose

Are all more or less affected by catarrh. The eyes become inflamed, red and watery, with dull, heavy pain between them; there are tearing, burning noises in the ears, and sometimes the hearing is affected; there is constant disagreeable discharge from the nose, bad breath, and in many cases loss of the sense of smell. All these disagreeable symptoms disappear when the disease is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which expels from the blood the impurity from which catarrh arises, tones and restores the diseased organs to health and builds up the whole system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar.

HELPING HARRISON.

More Remarkable Combinations for His Benefit.

He Certainly Should Be Able to Patch Up a Cabinet.

Gen. Grabbill Will Be There. To the Editor of The Evening World: Secretary of State, Nobody to blame (Blaine); Secretary of Treasury, Gen. Grabbill; Secretary of War, J. O'Donovan Rossiter; Secretary of Interior, J. O'Donovan Rossiter; Postmaster-General, Let her go Gallagher; Attorney General, Judge Crush'em. RICHARD A. NATHAN.

A Diamond Cabinet. To the Editor of The Evening World: Secretary of State, James G. Blaine; Secretary of War, Baby Anson; Secretary of the Treasury, C. H. Byrne; Secretary of the Navy, Mike Kelly; Secretary of the Interior, Jim Muttie; Postmaster-General, Adams Terry. If this Cabinet can be beaten by better known persons, I would like to see it done. Yours respectfully, HOME PLATE.

Quite a Constellation. To the Editor of The Evening World: Here's my Cabinet, For Secretary of State, J. G. Blaine; Secretary of Treasury, Dr. Mc Glyn; Secretary of War, Lew Wallace; Secretary of Navy, Rear-Admiral Luce; Secretary of Interior, (Prover) Cleveland; Postmaster-General, Belva Lockwood; Attorney-General, Clinton B. Fink; Secretary of Agriculture, some hayseed. E. P. FLANNERY, 2129 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Murchison for Private Secretary. To the Editor of The Evening World: I beg to submit the following as eminently suitable: Secretary of State, Pat Ford; Treasury, John McMackin; Army, Corpl. Tanner; Navy, Mr. Dudley, of Indiana; Interior, B. E. Perkins; Attorney-General, ex-Judge Terry, of California; Postmaster-General, J. J. Cogan, of New York. Your space does not permit suggestions as to other appointments, but I would wish briefly to urge the claims of Mr. Finnerty as Minister to England, with Mr. Carnegie as his Secretary of Legation. It would be ungrateful to forget the services of Mr. Murchison, who would make an admirable private secretary to Mr. Harrison. M. McQUADE, 531 East Twelfth street.

A Very Decent Collection. To the Editor of The Evening World: Let me try my hand at Cabinet-making. Here goes: For Secretary of State, John Sherman; Treasury, William R. Allison; War, Gen. Lew Wallace; Navy, William F. Fry; Interior, Warner Miller; Postmaster-General, Gen. Russell A. Alger; Attorney-General, well, I will leave that office for Gen. Harrison to fill. If John Sherman won't take the State Department, I nominate Senator George F. Hoar. W. E. W.

A GUEST'S FRIGHTFUL FALL.

Six Stories to the Stone Courtyard of the Grand Central Hotel. A cry of agony rang through the empty corridors of the Grand Central Hotel shortly after 5 o'clock this morning, startling the newly awakened help and causing much hurry and excitement. Other cries and groans were heard and on opening the door of the courtyard a middle-aged man, who was recognized as a guest at the hotel, was found lying on the stone floor terribly crushed and unconscious. An ambulance took him to the city hospital, where his right leg was found to be badly fractured. He had sustained severe internal injuries. The injured man arrived at the hotel late last night somewhat under the influence of liquor, and was taken to the "Fray" Station. He had given a room on the sixth floor, having a window facing the inner courtyard of the hotel. The window of his room was found open this morning and there were scratches on the paint which showed that the man had got on the sill or some person and had either fallen or thrown himself to the yard, six stories below.

WORLDLINGS.

Mrs. Harrison is said to be an enthusiastic and successful china painter. She has her own kiln for firing her china and attends to all the details of her craft. The great fortune of the Sturgis family, in Boston, was founded by William Sturgis, who began life as a poor Cape Cod sailor. He rose to the command of his ship, finally monopolized the trade of the Northwest Coast, and died rich. On account of the great magnetic influence of the vast quantities of iron and steel in the Pittsburgh mills, the magnetic needle is of no practical use in that city. Civil engineers, when surveying land in the city, are obliged to abandon the use of the ordinary compass.

OUR AUTOGRAPH COLLECTION.

An American merchant who has been in business in China for several years says that the average fortune brought home by a Chinaman on his return to China from the United States is about $200. On this small sum he is able to live in comfort free from the toil of earning his living. This is the record of Alfred Daniel, of Douglas County, Ga.; He is eighty-two years old, was never sick a day in his life, was never in bed at sunrise, never lost a tooth, loves a good chow fun, has been a deacon in the Baptist Church for fifty-eight years and never allowed an oar to escape his lips.

Fate Overtakes Chestnut Vendors. Eight chestnut vendors were fined $5 each at the Essex Market Court this morning for obstructing the sidewalk in Grand street. THE SALE OF Peptonix (DISSOLUTE TABLETS) has been enormous everywhere that this great Dyspepsia Remedy has been introduced. It has taken the lead of all digestive remedies because it affords instant relief and effectual cure for all forms of indigestion and dyspepsia. It has cured thousands. TROD. HERRICK, Druggist, 59 Tremont St., Boston, says: "I have never had a preparation in my store that cured dyspepsia that has sold so well and given such satisfaction to my customers as Peptonix." SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. Mailed prepaid, on receipt of price. 75 cents per box. THE ALLSTON CO., 67 High Street, Boston. Send two-cent stamps for sample.

MISS MARY ANDERSON.

Miss Mary Anderson probably wearied of eternally hearing her acting criticised as coldly correct but without any real emotional intensity. This has been dimmed into her ears ever since she first appeared on the stage, and even compliments become monotonous, you know. Her Juliet, her Rosalind, her Pauline all delighted the eye, but left the heart untouched, she was told.

No I imagine I see Miss Anderson one the morning in the agony of deep meditation. "I evidently shall never be accepted," she says, "in the role of the young, love-struck girl. They tell me that as I have never felt this emotion I cannot act it. That may be. But I will not be discouraged. When Mahomet found that the mountain would not come to him, why, he set out, like a brave little man, bought his ticket, and went to the mountain. The right sort of a role does not seem to come to me. I will seek it."

The Anderson selected "The Winter's Tale," and certainly the dual role of Hermione and Perdita calls for no very deep-moving passion. In Hermione there is denunciations and conjugal distress; in Perdita sportiveness and comedy. And before going any further, it must be said that Miss Anderson was eminently successful. Her success, indeed, was not one that can for a moment be questioned. Her performance was a triumph.

If she had never been in the rôle which dealt with the most overwhelming of human emotions, we might have suspected Miss Anderson of genius. The quiet dignity of her Hermione and the exquisite pastoral abandon of her Perdita might have led us to think that she could have been equally successful as Juliet. But this we knew was not the case—more's the pity. In "The Winter's Tale," however, she made a wise and artistic selection. In this play she has never before been seen to such advantage.

The actress of a wife and the despair of a maiden are two such utterly different emotions. The former comes from wounded, conjugal affection; the latter from blighted, unattained love, dominated by unconscious sexuality. The external expression of these emotions may be the same, but the internal rage is different. And Miss Anderson, in the platonic grief of Hermione, showed consummate ability. She could understand and grapple with affection—calm, enduring, noble, wife's affection. It is so much easier to analyze and so much more wholesome, too, if we would only believe it, than the stormy insanity of unattained love. Miss Anderson was absolutely impressive.

In the final scene her resignation was truly pathetic. To think that she should have wasted so much time demonstrating the fact that the passion of Juliet was utterly incomprehensible to her, when to such a rôle as Hermione she could bring such admirable platonic intensity! There is the error of the aspirant. "I want to go upon the stage," she says. "Engage me in a Romeo and Juliet company." A girl would be slighted if you told her you didn't think she thoroughly realized Juliet.

The change from Hermione to Perdita was most artistically managed. Miss Anderson's voice was different in the rôle. She kept her deep, contralto tones for Hermione, and her lighter, more soprano notes for Perdita. And what a revelation she was as her own daughter! Mr. Abbey could not charge a price that would not be worth a slight. In the final scene her resignation was truly pathetic. To think that she should have wasted so much time demonstrating the fact that the passion of Juliet was utterly incomprehensible to her, when to such a rôle as Hermione she could bring such admirable platonic intensity!

As the statue in the last act Miss Anderson again charmed her audience. She was a magnificent picture. Standing at the top of a flight of stone steps, clad in severely classic garb, with her rich purple curtains in a cold, white, dazzling light, Miss Anderson was wonderfully beautiful. As she slowly descended the steps she was almost starting.

"The Winter's Tale" was admirably put upon the stage. There was nothing extravagant about the production. The scenery was not extraordinary, not nearly as sumptuous as the settings at the Broadway Theatre, but it was most effective. Miss Anderson has certainly secured wonderfully adroit management.

The company was thoroughly good. It was not marred by the indifferent performance of any one member. It was admirably trained. It would have done credit to Augustin Daly, A. M. Palmer, or Daniel Frohman, the three most effective organizers. J. H. Barnes was a capital Leonato, and Mrs. John Hillington an effective Paulina. Miss Zetta Liberty and Miss Mary Ayton were respectively good as Mopsa and Dorcas, and J. G. Taylor an efficient Roger. Now under the Londoners' appreciation "The Winter Tale." ALAN DAVIS.

GOV. HILL'S MANY VISITORS.

He Takes a Quiet Breakfast However and Refuses to Be Interviewed. Gov. Hill, who arrived in this city last evening, breakfasted with Assemblyman Wm. F. Sheehan, of Buffalo, and Col. John H. McEwan, of his staff, at the Metropolitan Hotel this morning. He politely but firmly declined to be interviewed, saying, laughingly, that he had done all his talking before the election and must decline to say anything now. The reporter essayed a few questions, but the Governor refused to answer them in regard to the object of his visit, which, he said, was on private business. Among the many visitors who called upon him at room No. 204 were Joseph J. O'Donovan, ex-Comptroller Andrew H. Green, Senator Jacob A. Cantelero, Assistant Commissioner Higday and John H. Spellman. Gov. Hill will leave the city this evening, but whether to return to Albany or not could not be ascertained.

A PRETTY BABY IN THE HALL.

Abandoned By Its Mother in Mr. and Mrs. Stillman's House. A wee baby girl whose mother has abandoned it, was sent to Randall's Island from Police Headquarters this morning. It was sent to Matron Webb by Mr. A. P. Stillman, of 100 East Thirty-ninth street. While sitting in his house last night, Mr. Stillman heard a plaintive wail, and he agreed with his wife that it was a lone some situation. The noise continued, and he sought more and more human, and finally Mr. and Mrs. Stillman opened their front door and were surprised to find a pretty little baby up their vestibule. It wore a red hood and was comfortably dressed.

A handsome smoker's set of silver has just been received by Coroner Messenger. He was it as the most popular coroner at the fair of the school connected with the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer. The fair was held shortly before election. Sheriff Grant won a gold-headed cane as the most popular candidate for Mayor. This was one of the many places where Coroner Messenger's work for Sheriff Grant told. He worked day and night, and as hard as if he himself had been a candidate. In all he spent about $4,000 for the election, but he is just as happy as if he had not spent a dollar, because Sheriff Grant was successful.
