A VERY QUEER CASE.

Is Witte a Victim of an Hysteria Hallucination?

His Alibi Seems to Prove that He is Innocent.

Mrs. Samuels's Word is All that is Against Him.

The circumstances surrounding this truly remarkable case grow more complex every day.

The case was again before Judge Ford in Jefferson Market Court yesterday morning.

It is the opinion of many that the story as narrated by Mrs. Samuels may be the result of a disease peculiar to women known as hysteria.

It seems rather strange that two men should in broad daylight enter a house, strike a woman senseless, and then take two rings from her fingers and a pair of earrings from her ears, leaving behind them things of much more value.

It also appears rather odd that the blow struck had force enough to stun the woman for half an hour, but still leave no mark or discoloration.

The EVENING WORLD reporter, working on this theory of hysteria, visited Dr. Graeme M. Hammond at 58 West Forty-fifth street.

Dr. Hammond, like his father, make a specialty of these nervous diseases.

When the reporter had narrated the circumstances of the case to the physician, the latter said: "It is just possible that Mrs. Samuels is a victim of this peculiar malady."

"Could she imagine all these things and put them into execution?" asked the reporter.

"Certainly she could," the text books are full of such cases.

"But how would you account for the disappearance of her rings and earrings?"

"Easy enough," she has probably hidden them. People thus affected conceive plans and carry them out even to the smallest and most complete details.

"The circumstances all point to the case being one of those peculiar cases often made by women suffering from hysteria.

It is a strange case, and there might be some strange developments should a physician be called by the defense to examine Mrs. Samuels.

"I used often to read the newspaper aloud to my wife," said Bert Robinson, "and once I was fairly taken by a patent medicine advertisement.

"I had a long trouble and I bought a bottle of the remedy. I was a stranger to it and it took me in—and cured me."

Mike J. Kelly, the $10,000 beauty, the ball-tosser from Balltoosertown, is going before the footlights.

He said this morning that Boston will see him no more in the crack baseball line after next season.

This plan of Mike's is not the outcome of a sudden whim, but is the result of a long-considered scheme on the part of the genial Kel.

When he was quite a little boy, Mike used to run his papa's trousers and big coat, and on the dining-room table and to the trunk and on the tough's brogue in a way that would rival even the ingenious impersonations of Billy Hoy.

As he grew into blooming manhood and developed into a great ball-tosser, Mike's aspirations for the stage took a more definite form.

Well, I'll tell you, he will certainly be a success in the theater, and I have not a doubt that he will be a great success.

He will go into training at once. He is his own boss.

HARRY PHILLIPS'S CARNIVAL FIGHTS.

Three Events He Will Engage—He Thinks Mitchell Can Whip Dempsey.

MONTEAL, Dec. 17.—Harry Phillips, John L. Sullivan's manager or backer during the English tour, has arrived here, his native place, and is daily holding levees with his friends at the Balmoral Hotel.

Harry was lounging in the Balmoral smoking room to-day when the EVENING WORLD reporter called on him.

"Yes," he said, "I intend to give three purse fights, one for bantams, one for lightweights and one for middle-weights."

"I intend to offer a $500 purse for lightweights and a fairly confident that Sam Blacklock will win."

"It is sitting the probabilities that a $500 purse will bring Dick Guthrie and Mike Walsh together, making the hearts of the Canadians glad."

"What do you think about all this Sullivan-Kilrain talk?"

"I don't know. But if they do it is my opinion that Dempsey will experience something he has never had before, and that is a beating."

BURIED FOR MANY YEARS.

A VERY RARE FIND MADE IN THE CITY LIBRARY THIS MORNING.

It is an Engraved Copy of the Declaration of Independence Signed by Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, Just Fifty Years After the Original Signing—John Quincy Adams Called Attention to This When He Signed.

In overhauling the mass of books and documents under his care this morning City Librarian Carvalho brought to light a most valuable and interesting work which was jammed in between the wall and shelving, where it had been for years.

It is nothing less than an elegantly engraved copy of the Declaration of Independence on vellum, bound in folio form, attested on Aug. 2, 1828, by the then only surviving signer, Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, Md.

In an address before the Common Council, on the death of Jefferson Adams, Rev. Dr. Stephen N. Rowan suggested that such an attested copy should be made by the City of New York on every Fourth of July thereafter, and this document was accordingly prepared and presented to the city July 4, 1828.

The certificate of Mr. Carroll follows: Grateful to Almighty God for the blessings which He has conferred on my beloved country, in her emancipation, and upon myself, in permitting me, under circumstances of money to the city of New York, to be the first to sign the Declaration of Independence adopted by Congress on the fourth day of July, 1776.

It is interesting to note that the attested copy was made by the City of New York on every Fourth of July thereafter, and this document was accordingly prepared and presented to the city July 4, 1828.

The Federal officials whose autographs are found in the work are: State officials: John Quincy Adams, Henry Clay, Secretary of State; Richard Rush, Secretary of the Treasury; James Barbour, Secretary of War; Sam'l J. Southard, Secretary of the Navy; James Stevenson, Recorder of the Treasury; Joseph Anderson, Comptroller of the Treasury; Nathan Sanford and Martin Van Buren, Senators from New York; John Cassin, Senator from Kentucky; Stephen Van Rensselaer, member of Congress from New York; and Major-Gen. Alex. Macomb, of the Army.

State officials who signed are: Joseph C. Yates, ex-Governor; John Savage, Chief Justice; L. Jones, Chancellor; Samuel A. Talbot, Attorney-General; John Taylor, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; Simon De Witt, Surveyor-General; N. F. Beck, Deputy Surveyor-General; Cadwallader A. Colden, Senator from New York City.

The municipal officers who signed were Mayor John T. Riker, Recorder R. Riker, Councilman Stewart F. Randolph and John Lozier.

Richard Varick, Morgan Lewis, Lefferts Livingston and Robert Truax, attached the signatures as members of the New York State Society of the Order of Cincinnati.

Other citizens of New York whose signatures appear on the document were: Chas. O'Connell, William W. Van Buren, David Bowie, David Abm. Van Nest, Lynde Cattin, Stephen Whitney, W. A. Thompson, David Gefferson, Joshua Secor and Joel Post.

Mayor John T. Riker, Recorder R. Riker, and Wm. James and Richard Varick DeWitt, citizens of that city, also appended their autographs.

This interesting document bore the accumulation of dust of many years, and no one about the City Hall remembered when it had served the purpose for which it was presented to the municipality.

City Librarian Carvalho thought it too valuable to repose longer on the shelves with the common books under his care and had it safely locked in the safe of Clerk Truway of the Common Council.

ANN O'DELIA'S TERM UP.

The Spook High Priestess Coming to Town To-Morrow.

She Intends to Take the Stage and Lecture.

Prison Fare Has Fattened Her and She Weighs 205½ Pounds.

There is some excitement in spirit circles to-day, and not without reason.

Ann O'Delia has finished her term on Blackwell's Island, and bright and early to-morrow morning will take off the striped gown that for six months has covered her 235½ pounds of fatty tissue, and will once more be ready to invoke the shades of Socrates, Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, Michael Angelo and other ancient citizens who used to be special cronies of hers before she was juggled.

The General will be unjuggled on Wednesday.

Mr. Luther R. Marsh, who said so highly for Ann's spirit (?) pictures, could not be found in town to-day.

O'Delia has grown quite plump. She never was a skeleton, but when an EVENING WORLD reporter saw her this morning he was strongly reminded of an overgrown sack of meal loosely gathered in at the centre.

Ann has had religion and since taking board in the Hotel de Workhouse has industriously attended church on every available occasion.

Not, however, as a corollary, premier danseuse or ballet girl.

She admits that she has grown too fat to take such parts now. She thinks her forte is lecturing.

She was committed to the island on the 19th day of June last. The General went up next day. Annie was given a 4 by 6 cell on the second tier.

Her work seemed to be particularly suited to her temperament.

She had only had one visitor while in jail, Mr. Marsh.

He seemed to be as badly broken up on the spot as she.

She has been so long in the cell, and she has had so many friends among the other female convicts.

only opportunity they have of seeing one another at all. Ann is first there always. The General kneels away in the rear. She cannot turn around. It is against the rules. He can see her back. When leaving church she goes out through a door straight ahead of her. He goes in an opposite direction.

How will she be taken over to New York? On one of our ferries. The hour is not yet known. It will be early, though. She will first dress herself in some brand-new store clothes that have been sent her, and go away in bang-up style.

She would not believe Clerk Crane when he said that she had gained at least twenty pounds and now weighs 205½.

It is a ruse of my lean enemies to throw ridicule. I may be stout, but I do not run to common fat.

She will be landed probably at the foot of West Twenty-sixth street to-morrow morning.

Mr. Stewart is expected to be on board to welcome her home. It is thought that he has secured rooms for both her and the General to go to.

While serving his term, Gen. Diss Debar has been at work as bookkeeper in the tin shop under Keeper Metzler. He has been a journalist for a livelihood. He has received a number of communications recently from John L. O'Sullivan, a prince of spiritists, who is a warm admirer of the fox O'Delia.

It is possible that they may go into partnership and establish a factory for the production of spirit pictures.
