WORLDINGS.
There are altogether 1,365 foreign offices at the disposal of the State Department.
One of the finest collections of precious stones and jewels owned in Chicago is the property of the wife of a retired gambler.
Corporal Tanner, the new Commissioner of Pensions, entered the Army when only seventeen years old. He lost both of his legs at the second battle of Bull Run.

John A. Macdonald, the Canadian Gladstone, is noted for his weakness for his flannel necktie, and, except when in evening dress, rarely wears any other color.
The collection of postage stamps made by the late Duchess of Galliera is said to be valued at $50,000. It is contained in 3,000 albums, and is the finest collection in the world.
Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, the historian and editor, is described as a quiet little lady, with a gentle voice and a sympathetic face. She lives at the Colman House and is often seen in society.
Senator George, of Mississippi, is described as a typical specimen of the substantial and scholarly Southern gentleman. He takes great pride in his farm, and prefers life at his country home to existence in Washington.
William Shockey, of Waverly, O., is so erroneously committed that when one side of his body requires the other remains perfectly dry. One-half of the forehead, one side of the nose and the whole right half of the body exudes perspiration most copiously, while the other half remains absolutely free from moisture.

JOY AT THE KRULISCH HOME.
A LONGSHOREMAN'S QUERY.
Apparent Doubt About the Ancestry of the Head of the 400.
Through reading much in the newspapers about the coming Centennial celebration I am almost led to suppose that George McAllister was the father of his country, that Thomas McAllister drafted the Declaration of Independence, that Col. Prescott McAllister ran the battle of Bunker Hill, that Gen. Israel McAllister galloped down the stone steps, that Benjamin McAllister negotiated the French alliance and that Alexander McAllister was the first Secretary of the Treasury.
Who is Ward McAllister? What part did his family have in the Revolutionary war? I do not know the name of McAllister does not occur in American history, and I should like to have some one inform me if it occurs in literature or art. The only McAllister I ever heard of was an ingenious and entertaining showman who went around the country giving sleight-of-hand performances.
I wonder if the grim farmers who stood on Bunker Hill, or the soldiers of Valley Forge, ever looked down the vista of a century to see Ward McAllister? The American Revolution, I believe, was not made by dancing masters' George Washington, I think, was not a professor of etiquette?
I see, too, that a certain New York family which has traced its lineage to the settlement of land is going to be somewhat conspicuous at the Centennial ball, which is to afford a chance to the Americans to see some of the revolutionary families to hop about to music. Now the family in question was not in this country when the revolutionary war was fought, nor was it here when Washington was inaugurated.
The first member in this city was a foreign immigrant who came over to the English shore, and died. Under the present law, which is somewhat severe on impecunious immigrants, he might perhaps have expected some embarrassment in getting through Castle Garden.
Now, I am a longshoreman, and I don't know how I have ever had any time to devote to such a folly as that. But I belong to a family which fought in the Revolutionary war. Now, if they are in the line of the great families, they are families to be proud of. Ward McAllister is not? I belong to one of the oldest families in America, which has settled in New England long before the passengers began to take the bells and slings of Holland to the United States.
Among the longshoremen, and the bricklayers, and the printers, and the hod-carriers, and other workers of this great city, there are thousands of descendants of families that fought in the Revolutionary war. Why doesn't Mr. Ward McAllister know how to trace his lineage? He is the longshoreman of Marselles, the 400 who know how to trace their lineage to the XVI. out of the Tuileries. They were 200 more than the so-called "400" and they are the subject of the greatest National song in the world.
A LONGSHOREMAN.

WILLIE TAKES HIS ACQUITTAL AND RELEASES VERY COOLY—HE GOES OUT FOR A WALK WITH HIS UNCLE—DRUGGIST DORFFNER ACCEPTS THE VERDICT, BUT IS SULKY—HE WON'T TAKE KRULISCH BACK.
It is a holiday in the household of Joseph Krulisch today, and there is great rejoicing there.
Willie Krulisch was acquitted of the murder of Gneuder Wechsung by a jury of intelligent and fair-minded citizens last night at 9 o'clock, and the sixteen-year-old boy was discharged.
Joseph, Willie's handsome elder brother, clasped the boy in his arms and cried heartily over him when the verdict was announced.
Mary, his pale-faced and sickly sister, wept quietly on his shoulder, crossed his hair and kissed him.
Assistant District Attorney Jerome, who told the jury that he had no doubt Willie was guilty, shed tears, too.
The crowd of spectators cheered lustily at the verdict. Everybody was in an ecstasy of excitement.
Everybody save Willie Krulisch. He was as cool as if he had no concern in the matter at all. He suffered some one to hustle his overcoat on to him and was taken away by his brother and sister.
A reporter found a smiling-faced young girl in charge of the three little ones of Joseph Krulisch at the Improved Sewing Association apartments, in East Seventy-second street, this morning.
Joseph and Willie and Mrs. Krulisch and Mary all went out after breakfast, and I don't know when they will return, she said, adding, "Oh, yes, we were all glad the verdict was given. Willie didn't say much."
The reporter scraped acquaintance with little Willie Krulisch, who is three years old, thin, a black-eyed, round and rosy-faced kid, and asked her: "Were you glad to see Willie?" "The babe giggled eagerly.
"Even the baby in a crib seemed to partake of the general rejoicing, and she and her little brothers and sisters were all in a chirrupy way."
"No, I haven't seen Willie Krulisch, and I don't want to see him," replied Dr. Duffner, to a query of an EVENING WORLD reporter.
"Dr. Duffner is a decided snob," he continued, "but I have had trouble enough over this thing. I have been abused just because I was so unfortunate as to have this thing occur in my store. No, I would not like to give Willie his old place here again."
The doctor's wife, who is one-half hour before he left, agreed on the verdict exonerating Willie Krulisch. They all agreed that he bought the knife with which the life of Gneuder Wechsung was hacked away, but there was a reasonable doubt whether some other person might not have visited the store and had the knife in Krulisch's absence. Hence the verdict. The jurors were pledged to secrecy, but it was said that at first there were ten for acquittal, one for conviction and one not voting.

NECESSITY FOR CAUTION.
Editorial Note.
"Miriam," he said in pleading tones, "tell me what impediment there is to our union?"
"None now, George."
"None now?"
"Before I link my life to yours, George, I must know how long you will stay in New York. You have arrived last night. A young, smiling girl must look at the divorce law before she leaps, George."

A MODERATE MEASURE.
THE EVENING WORLD'S CHILDREN'S BILL is not a radical but an exceedingly conservative measure.
It only asks that before a child shall be irreversibly separated from its parents, there shall be no reasonable doubt of the rightfulness of such separation.
Messrs. Legislators, don't forget what that eminent jurist, Judge BARRETT, says:
"THE amendment proposed by 'The Evening World' is a good one, so far as it goes. I SHOULD GO FURTHER."
There should be a power vested in the Supreme Court to send proceedings back to the magistrate or to review them and act upon the review. And the Court should be empowered to decide the case, not upon the review alone, but upon any new facts and changed circumstances and conditions as well. And the Court should be empowered to recommit or discharge or make other disposition of children in such cases.

EVERYTHING FOR FAMILY NEEDS.
Templing Display at McParland & O'Flaherty's Great Spring Opening.

A SHORT-SIGHTED POLICY.
The refusal of the railroads that will reap the rich harvest incident to the approaching Centennial celebration to make the time for which excursion tickets will be valid long enough to be of benefit to the merchants of this city is short-sighted and not at all just.
The business men of New York will make great sacrifices to insure the success of the Centennial, and they are certainly entitled to reap compensatory benefits.
Thousands of people will come to New York, induced by low passenger rates, desirous of buying goods here, and for the railroads to practically send them home before they have an opportunity to do business is an idiotic policy.
The merchants of New York are the best patrons of New York railroads, and their very reasonable request in this matter should be promptly granted.

NOT IN THEIR NET.
From the Philadelphia Record.
Mrs. Tipple—I see you have new neighbors, James. Are they society people?
James—Yes, they are society. Guess not, mum. I see the man of the house came home last night with his arms full of newspapers and magazines.
Sometimes Read That Story.
How do you ever happen to find that lather ticket mummy took away from you the other day, Willie?
Willie—I'm afraid I lost it. She told me she had it in the Bible.
Yes, but she told Johnny where she put it. It was right in the David and Goliath story.

THE MAINSTAY OF BASEBALL.
We congratulate our readers who have pushed the movement for the preservation of the Polo Grounds for this season to its present satisfactory state. With the action of the Aldermen and Legislature there is now almost no doubt that the Giants will play this year on their favorite grounds.
THE EVENING WORLD seeks no undue credit for what has been accomplished, but the public will fully appreciate that the formidable Polo Grounds Petition of our readers has proved to be what we said it would be, "the mainstay of baseball in this town."
All other papers were crowding loudly over the prospective calamity to the National game, involved by the loss of the Polo Grounds.
