

JOKES CAUGHT ON THE FLY.

LANDON PICKINGS FROM THE GREAT CROP OF HUMOR.

Alcohol Scented Voice—Dear! Angry One (with Broom)—Well!

All He Wanted (From the Boston Post). Stern Parent (to a young applicant for his daughter's hand)—Young man, can you support a family?

Place and Locality. Morris Park—Hello, Squaw, where are you going?

Madison Squeer—Out West, to fit myself for a Government position. Morris—What can you gain out there to help you?

Madison Squeer—The "geographical qualification." Mistaken Identity. (From the Chicago Tribune.)

"The dearest and sweetest object in all the world," said the young husband fondly, "I hold in these arms."

"I hold in these arms," "I'm but a little darling!" assented the young wife, with a gleam of pride in her eyes.

"The Eternal Fitness of Things. (From the Boston Post.) Fwedly—Gee! dear boy, why the deuce do you wear such a gaudy tight collar? It's a positive chokaw, jaw jaw!"

Teddy—Yass, I know. But fact is, I'm going to get drunk to-night, and I want to be in top-top, y'know.

Survival of the Fittest. (From the Boston Post.) Mr. Sooble had called in, and during the conversation which ensued he mentioned that Neighbor Dulgen had been obliged to shoot his dog because it had grown old and cross.

Mr. Sooble had called in, and during the conversation which ensued he mentioned that Neighbor Dulgen had been obliged to shoot his dog because it had grown old and cross.

Check to the Sweet. (From the Boston Post.) P. Muncholson (to a girl)—Talk about adventures! Why, good God! when I was out in Newbrack I was struck slap on the cheek by a Comanche's bullet, by Gode!

Miss Dorothy Debutante—Oh, do let me see it, please. I never saw a fastened bullet.

A Florentine Tragedy. (From the Boston Post.) The Countess Chestnut—Lorenzo, dearest, we must meet only as strangers hereafter.

I marry Count Bowleggio to-morrow. (Lorenzo weeps.) Do not weep, sweet. Why weep? Lorenzo—I am weeping for the Count.

Great Place for Corn. (From the Boston Post.) In the tug-of-war contest held at the Berkeley Athletic Club last night, eight heats were pulled between the New York Athletics and the Young Men's Institute; also between the Berkeleys and the Young Men's Institute.

John L. Sullivan and his party will occupy a box at the Bijou Theatre this evening.

Coal Truck Burned Out. The elevator and coal pocket at the foot of One Hundred and Thirty-third Street, North River, owned by Theodore S. Tunc, was totally destroyed by fire early this morning.

Lafayette. From the land of Lafayette, "La Belle France" comes a most desirable article, such as is used in SPECIAL FAVORITES—purest and best.

THE EARL'S WIFE.

One of a Series of Tales of To-Day.

By GEORGE R. SIMS.

CHAPTER II. THE COURTESY OF DARTON TELLS HER TITLED HUSBAND THE FACTS. "Good morning. Won't you shake hands, Lou?"

THE COMING GREAT FIGHT.

SULLIVAN AND KILRAIN THE ONE TOPIC OF CONVERSATION.

Joe Ellingsworth Wants a Go at Jack Dempsey—Deserous and Moran Matched—Ed Conners Knocked Out by Harry Thomas—Desperate Fight Between Alf Mitchell and Alfred Ball in England.

Discussion of the Sullivan-Kilrain match throws all other sporting topics into the background just now. It is often stated sneeringly by our English cousins that only in England is there widespread interest in boxing.

Though the betting on the great match is now almost even, without doubt, the man abstains from liquor until the fight it will be to 5 on the day of the meeting in John's favor.

Kilrain was certainly honest in his offer, made in a letter to Mr. Fog, to fight Sullivan for nothing, or for a purse, if one could be raised, in case a disagreement occurred at the choosing of the stakeholder.

Frank Dempsey and Chappie Moran have finally concluded arrangements for their final fight for $20 a side and the 150-pound championship. It will occur within five weeks.

Joe Ellingsworth, who is so anxious to have a go at Jack Dempsey, spent some time yesterday afternoon in arguing Editor Lumley to try to bring about a match.

The amateur boxing and wrestling championship meeting of the N. four A's May 13, at Madison Square Garden, will be the most interesting event of the kind that has ever taken place in America.

Dr. W. H. Crawford will present a gold watch to the member of the Manhattan Athletic Club who scores the most points, in the name and under the colors of the Club, in open competition between May 1, 1889, and Dec. 31, 1889.

A five-mile run had been arranged between Harold Wolf of Connecticut, and Will H. Devlin of New York, to occur at the picnic of the Cretch Pleasure Club at Jones's Woods, April 29.

Harry Thomas of this city, knocked out Ed Conners of Newburg in thirteen rounds the other night at an unpubl private club in fifty-two minutes. This is the sixth battle Thomas has won. He weighed 137 and Conners 138 pounds.

Miss Maggie McNamee, the little Irish favorite, and Miss Nellie Frankel, the champion of Cuba, are entered for the female bicycle race immediately following the six day go-as-you-please.

There will be quite an acouus of racing men from this city next week bound for Washington for the Spring race meeting, which commences next Wednesday. The Brooklyn Jockey Club will lumber up the legs of its race on a month.

Pleasant afternoons Fleetwood Park presents an animated kaleidoscope of fast horses. Two thirty-two and a half was made recently by Billy G. and his crew.

The Spring meeting of the New York Driving Club will commence May 21, lasting four days. Entries close May 2.

According to a cable despatch received by the Associated Press, a desperate battle was fought between Alf Mitchell and Alfred Ball in England yesterday. Sixty-five rounds were fought, when Ball broke the small bone of his arm and had to give in.

Bill Reeder, the nine-stone four pound champion, has issued a challenge to fight Jack McNamee for $250 a side, the battle to take place in England.

There will be another sale of trotting stock at the Institute Building on May 2. Though nothing so fine as the Marshall stud can be had here, yet some prime animals will be put under the hammer.

The good prices brought at the sale of the Marshall stud in proof that high-bred trotters make a very good form of investment, $6,000, however, was rather a low price for an animal of Manbrino Dudley's calibre.

A number of actors met at the Coleman House yesterday for the purpose of organizing an actors' athletic club. A committee was appointed to draft by-laws and to secure managers.

John L. Sullivan and his party will occupy a box at the Bijou Theatre this evening.

From Colorado. PLATTEVILLE, Col., Oct. 21, 1887. DEAR SIR: I would care to sell you the celebrated LIVER PILLS for a splendid article for biliousness, headache, fever and debility.

John L. Sullivan and his party will occupy a box at the Bijou Theatre this evening.

From the land of Lafayette, "La Belle France" comes a most desirable article, such as is used in SPECIAL FAVORITES—purest and best.

STARS ON ABBEY'S BOOKS.

PATTI, ANDERSON, MRS. POTTER AND PERHAPS BERNHARDT.

Another of Howard Bronson's Plays for the Near Theatre—Mr. Frohman's Unconquered as to Mrs. Keely's Adventure—Anon Pund to Talk His Play to England—Miss Mother's Summer Tour.

Henry E. Abbey is now busily engaged looking for next season his different attractions, to wit: Mme. Patti in a farewell farewell-tour, Miss Mary Anderson and Mrs. Potter. It seems that Mr. Abbey's intention is to manage Mrs. Potter, after all, though the direct management will be in the hands of Messrs. Kyle Bellew and Charles Schroeder.

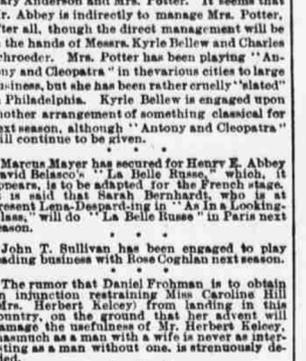

Marcus Mayer has secured for Henry E. Abbey David Belasco's "La Belle Russe," which, it appears, is to be adapted for the French stage. It is said that Sarah Bernhardt, who is at present in London, is to play the part of the "La Belle Russe" in Paris next season.

DISB DEBAR ON THE STAGE.

The Producer a Spirit Painting Like the Did for Lower March.

Spook Princess Ann O'Della Disb Debar was a novel attraction at Prof. Herrmann's entertainment at the Grand Opera-House last night, having given out that she would produce a spirit painting by the same supernatural methods as converted Luther R. Marsh.

The about medium, who was gorgeously dressed in a black and white costume, and then set on an easel in the rear of the stage where it could be seen only incidentally. She stood before the picture about thirty seconds, apparently in an ecstatic trance, waving her arms as if to harmonize discordant spirits.

The lights were lowered at this moment, and after Ann O'Della had fumbled among her skirts the virgin canvas disappeared and a picture in black and white took its place on the easel. The audience thought they saw a trick and hissed the princess as she retreated from the stage.

Don't Expect Track Permits Till Monday.

The Police Commissioners are overwhelmed with applications for permits to keep tracks on the side streets near where the Centennial parade will pass. There are hundreds of these applications, all of which require investigation, and the announcement is made that no permits can possibly be issued before Monday at the earliest.

A Ticket for His Friend.

"Mother doesn't think the will go to the theatre with us to-night, Albert." "Give it that so? I've got three tickets. What shall we do with the third one?" "Give it to the man that you always go out to see between the acts. He can sit with us and you won't have to go out to see him."

to her pent-up feelings in a flood of tears. Joyce was utterly unmanned at the sight of his sister's grief and despair. He tried to persuade her that he was helpless in the matter, and that after all he wasn't a very dreadful adviser, and that "necessity might easily be got rid of and nobody be any the wiser. Then Louise's grief gave way to indignation. Her cheeks flushing, her land and reveal the whole plot, and that they should all be made to answer for their share in it. Then she changed her tone and flung herself upon her knees and implored her brother by the memory of the old days when they had been all in all to each other and endured trouble and poverty and misery together, not to side with her enemies against her, but to help her to defeat them. She was sure that there was some way out of the dreadful dilemma in which their wickedness had involved her. Wouldn't Will be her friend and save her from shame and humiliation?

She went over the whole circumstances of her marriage with Vincent. She recalled everything to her brother's memory, how she had met this man, who was one of the associates of Kirby and Major, and how he had passed for a rich diamond merchant, and had made love to her, and how she, being poor and without friends, had thought it would be a good thing for Will and herself if she made a rich marriage, and had at last consented, and how on the very day of the wedding her husband had had to leave London suddenly, he said, because his father was dying, but as they afterwards knew, because a young fellow whom he had credited at cards had gone to the police about the matter, and Vincent was afraid he would be arrested. And then the girl reminded her brother of how the next day together with her husband had had to be arrested in France for half murder, a Frenchman who had accused him of cheating at one of the small Paris "Hells."

"You told me he had been sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, and had been taken ill and died, and I was free of him forever, and need never think of that dreadful wedding again, except as one thinks of a horrible nightmare that has vanished when one opens one's eyes in the daylight. And you know, Will, that I married Vincent because he was poor, and I kept him poor."

replied Louise, "I am your wife, and any scandal in which Will was mixed up would reflect on me." "Quite right. Money matters, I suppose it is a question of money, certainly." "His lordship threw away the end of the cigarette he was smoking and took his wife's hands."

"Loo, old girl," he said, "if money's wanted don't you go doing anything foolish with your jewels or anything of that sort. Come straight to me, and you shall have it. You've been a little brick in money matters. When I married you I expected that Will and Kirby and their mob would try to work me for a bit through you, and I dare say they have, but you've never given me away or played their game for them."

"Hugh, you don't think." "All right, Loo, I'm not saying you would have done it, but I know what a wretch they are, and I'll bet long odds they've tried it on. I didn't go about with them for a couple of years for nothing."
