

THEY STOPPED THE KENTUCKIANS

The Louisville Legion Has Done More Work Than Flies.

The Louisville Legion, which is Kentucky in the Centennial millennium was incorporated just fifty years ago, probably has a more varied and interesting history than any other organization will take part in the celebration, however, assigns its origin to the Kentucky command which won renown at New Orleans in 1819, and at Mexico, in the army of Gen. Taylor—himself a Kentuckian—the Legion achieved particular distinction at Buena Vista, and shared in the victories which marked the progress of the American army to the Mexican capital.

The Legion did not enter the Centennial organization, but its members were scattered through the famous "Orphan Brigade," of Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, who served in the army of Gen. Taylor, the Legion without formal organization, but its members, veterans of the Civil War, held occasional social meetings for the purpose of reminiscences. Their banquets were also by younger members, who from the then late unpleasant war the one class grew eloquent over the exploits of Taylor, it was rare sport for them to suggest that they too had seen Shiloh had been only less bloody than the other. Such remarks were received as the ancient glories of the corps, and were generally silenced with a description of the Legion's charge at Buena Vista, which touched the ground four times in minutes, and the fifth ensign fell in the colors of the Mexican parades.

A reorganization of the Legion followed, since which its career has been exemplified activity and usefulness. When, in 1877, the railroad riots broke out, the Legion was the first to be organized, and its members were effectively by the military organization. From that time this organization has frequently to assist in suppression of lawlessness in a part of Eastern Kentucky which has given rise to a favorite pastime of the State. In 1878 the Legion spent months in Breathitt County—"Main" district—engaged in suppressing the Little-Strong feud. The leaders of the feuds were captured. Later they were called to Breathitt for seven weeks, possible the trial and conviction of law-breakers and establishing peace. In 1880 the Legion guarded the Louisville, quelling a riot and lynching of a notorious criminal, Washington, afterwards tried and hanged. The summer of 1882 witnessed the factions in Carter County, adjacent to the Legion was three weeks there. Later the Legion was organized to prevent the lynching of a man charged with murder and arson, conveying the troops on the Ohio river by an armed mob on the shore, the mob steamed out into the river, the militia. Several of the latter but their first volley killed and five of the assailants and stopped the second trial of Neal and Craft. Later, and from the effects of hard labor of the Legion died.

In March, 1880, the miners resisted the employment of convict labor, and the Louisville Legion assisted the civil authorities in enforcing and protecting the State's property. The miners were camped here in the severest weather. In March, 1882, Bowman was murdered at her house by two strange negroes, arrested a mob of 15,000 men after them, but was kept in check by the suppressed after nine days of incursion. The murderers were hanged in August and September the Legion service in Iowan County, where a quieting permanently the celebration between the Martins and Tolliver years had been the terror of the men in which more than fifty men had been killed. In November, 1888, the French broke out in Perry County, and the Legion called again to the mountains for service, seventy-five miles from the road, marching that distance in a rough road and burdened with a flag. In the Centennial parade a cheer heard the flag carried by the Legion through the Mexican War. The Legion carried by the Legion were won in a prize drill, and the Legion of the staff indicate the Legion. The Kentucky contingent by Gen. Simon Bolivar Buckner, ordered to Gen. Grant at Fort Donnell a pall-bearer at his funeral. A staff of officers being Col. John A. Kelly, Col. Ernest MacPherson, Major-General of Kentucky, and many of the campaign in the counties, is here with the Legion.

YEARS ESTABLISHED

ANALYST, SOT, EVANGELIST.

Howren Has Reformed and Will Wage War on Rum.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

ON, S. C., April 29.—Henry D. Howren, member of the Florida Legislature, eight years connected with news.

Charleston, Jacksonville, Savannah, and Charlotte, created a sensation here by announcing that he would hold a meeting in the Opera-House. Mr.

Howren has an established reputation in the South as a brilliant writer and a confirmed teetotaler. For years he has been able to hold his own in a social circle of men of his talents would gain for him on a spree of a month's in the hospital, where he remained a few days ago. During the time he was partially paralyzed, his limbs and his tongue refused to obey him. He says he was converted and devoted the remainder of his life to a most rum.

He regained his speech and the use of the Opera-House was crowded Saturday to hear him. Every minister present was approached by the new evangelist, but all refused. Howren, was in earnest, and when he asked his newspaper associates to stage with him, and he opened the prayer. For two hours he talked, and his life, his slavery to liquor.

He is a highly educated man, and his talk was eloquent and pathetic. A drunken man turned loose on a monkey with a red-hot poker in a cage. He will lecture in the cities of the South on this time on, and will walk when he can't ride.

JOHN STACEY'S WILL.

Will Be Made by His Relatives to Break It.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

NEWPORT, April 29.—Joshua Stacey, and Mrs. Kaul are three well-known Newport. Until recently they had a brother named John A. C. Stacey, and several weeks ago, John Stacey died comparative obscurity to a position of prominence and wealth. His estate is estimated at $200,000 to $350,000.

Twenty years ago he was attracted to a son of one of his neighbors, and his death took a deep interest in the young man is Postmaster-General, whom President Cleveland appointed in 1887. For a great many years the business and social relations existed between Stacey and Brown. When Stacey died he left his entire business in stone to his mother, sisters, brother, and nieces he left very valuable property.

It was probated on April 8, and notice was given to all parties interested. A very extraordinary fight. Executor, who drew the will, has been the executors. Messrs. Brown and have the assistance of City Solicitor.

CHEER FOR THE CELEBRANTS.

Time: With most people the angle of reflection is an obtuse angle.

Rochester Post-Express: The bunco-man's fleece is not as white as snow.

Atchison Globe: There are men who can never put on enough war-paint to make them look like lighters.

On City Blitzard: Many grave charges are made against citizens by the secretary of a cemetery association.

Merchant Traveller: It is only natural that the man who never has time to do anything never seems to get anything done.

New Orleans Picayune: There is no good reason why a man who has ears of the largest size should sit at a play with his mouth open.

Atchison Globe: It is not putting things in the right place that bothers a man so much as finding the right place after he has put things in it.

Baltimore American: This week George Washington is first in the processions, first in the newspapers and first in the hearts of his celebrating countrymen.

Northwestern Herald: A New York paper speaks of "the bustle of the Centennial celebration." This is an anachronism. Fashion plates of one hundred years ago don't show a bustle.
