

THEY WANT MONEY.

The Committee on Sites Waiting for the Finance Committee.

The Board of Steam Navigation Object to Oak Point.

They Propose Bay Ridge and Want to Unite the Cities.

Interest in the Columbus Exposition of 1896 has revived somewhat...

That this action doesn't mean an early selection of site, however, is certain...

"We are not going to select a site until the Finance Committee takes some definite action."

The Executive Committee of the Committee on Sites and Buildings, however, have made a strong move...

There has been a rumor flying about the fact that the Executive Committee on Sites has determined to select Oak Point...

Mr. Cheney and Vauxburgh called on behalf of the Board of Steam Navigation to protest against the selection of this site...

The Executive Committee held a meeting and formulated this protest, and those loyal to their objectives...

They say that the Oak Point and the East River present more difficulties to navigation than any other waters around New York...

The Board of Steam Navigation favors the Bay Ridge site, and the Board of Finance favors the Oak Point site...

The objection that the site is not in New York City is the Committee proposes to overcome in a novel manner.

They propose a corporate union of the cities of New York and Brooklyn, the ceremony of union to be one of the striking events of the opening.

Mr. Cheney said that his Board is not averse to the inland site, as all the advantages of dockage that he had to the Bay Ridge are obtainable on the North River.

He spoke of the added attractions of the harbor would have from the permanent building being located at Bay Ridge...

Secretary Whitney, of the New London (Conn.) Board of Trade, forwarded to the Mayor a copy of a resolution adopted by that body favoring New York City as the place for holding the great Exposition.

Russell D. Eiley, of 17 East Fifteenth street, who favors a site "northwest of Central Park," sends a rough draft showing an arrangement of the main buildings as he would like to have them located on the cardinal points of the compass...

SOUTH CAROLINA OFFICERS WATCHING FOR FIRE-EATING GEORGIANS.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 6.—A telegram received from J. L. Stone, Vice-President Morton's superintendent at Ellerslie Stock Farm, dated at International Fair Grounds, Buffalo, says Mr. Morton's exhibit of twelve head of choice Geany cattle has been awarded seven first and two second prizes.

BERRYMAN PLACED AT LAST. Collector Erhardt Makes Him Deputy and Athlete Is Left.

Wilson Berryman, the perennial candidate for any office on the Republican ticket in the Seventeenth Assembly District, has at last been placed. Collector Erhardt has named him to succeed Deputy Collector Samuel Guthrie.

This is the place which the time of starting, and the two steamers sailed hence yesterday on even terms.

Catastrophe to Miss Werman. With a candle in one hand and a bottle of kerosene in the other, Miss Annie Werman, of 438 Fifth street, was exploring her bedstead this morning for unwelcome visitors when the candle and kerosene came together and Annie was severely burned about the hands, arms and face. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

OCAN RACERS DELAYED. The City of New York and the Tentative New on About Even Terms.

QUEENSTOWN, Sept. 6.—The steamer Tennessee left New York, which started from Liverpool within an hour of each other, were delayed yesterday by fog.

The Tentative left three and a half hours and the City of New York four hours.

This about equalized the time of starting, and the two steamers sailed hence yesterday on even terms.

With a candle in one hand and a bottle of kerosene in the other, Miss Annie Werman, of 438 Fifth street, was exploring her bedstead this morning for unwelcome visitors when the candle and kerosene came together and Annie was severely burned about the hands, arms and face. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

SMILINGLY TO DEATH

So Went the Woman Who Plunged Into Niagara's Torrent.

She is Said to Have Been a Mrs. Lawrence, of Brooklyn.

Her Face Peaceful as a Child's as She Whirled Over the Brink.

NIAGARA FALLS, Sept. 6.—The woman who committed suicide yesterday at Niagara Falls, as told in THE EVENING WORLD of that day, is now supposed to be Mrs. Lawrence, of Brooklyn.

She threw herself into the torrent in a most deliberate manner, and her actions while on her way to an awful death convinced all who saw her that she was insane.

She reached Niagara Falls shortly after midnight yesterday morning. Few people were stirring at that hour and she asked John Forling in what direction she should go to get to the Spencer Hotel.

When she arrived there, Clerk Greenwood showed forward the register and the woman inscribed in a bold hand her name, Mrs. Lawrence, Brooklyn, N. Y.

She left word to be called at 7 o'clock, was awakened at that time and paid her bill. After breakfasting she sauntered leisurely down to Prospect Park.

At about 9.30 she slowly walked down the river bank at a place about two hundred and fifty feet from the brink of the Falls.

Very deliberately she hurried her party and a pocket book far out into the swirling moving stream.

For a moment she stood there watching them and then she loosened her long reddish-blond hair and watched her curiously.

Suddenly the woman gave a quick spring into the water.

The first feet first in the swirling waters, and her clothes boomed out around her like the balloon jib of a yacht.

The imprisoned air beneath them kept the woman afloat and the swirling eddies slowly turned her around until her face was staring at the crowd.

It was a fearful sight.

The woman's fair face, framed in her beautiful hair, was as peaceful as an angel's.

As she saw the crowd of helpless, terror-stricken persons moaning and wringing their hands upon the bank she smiled.

Those who saw it say it was the smile that a child might wear when gleefully perpetrating some piece of mischief.

Then the spectators saw the woman slowly turn around again. Nearer and nearer she approached the horrible brink.

Just before she reached it the waters whirled her around once more, and again she saw the crowd.

She smiled, threw up one hand and waved a farewell to those looking at her.

A photographer, with true business instinct, raised his camera at the face, but he was too late.

There was a momentary cry of horror as the woman suddenly went out of sight and plunged head first into the swirling waters.

Five minutes later Mrs. Lawrence's dress, torn and ragged, came to the surface and was pulled ashore by the crowd.

A few minutes later the body came into view and floated peacefully in the still water near the New Suspension Bridge.

The woman's neck had evidently been broken. The sweet smile that she wore while on the verge of eternity was still stamped on her face and will always haunt the memory of those who saw it.

The body floated out of reach and soon after was whirling around on the outer edge of the Whirlpool. It has not yet been recovered.

Mrs. Lawrence was nearly 6 feet tall and very pretty. She weighed about 150 pounds.

Her room at the hotel was searched, but no further clue to her identity was discovered.

A search of her dress and other articles revealed nothing. The body will probably not be recovered for several days.

MAN AND BOY CUT TO PIECES. TERRIBLE LEVEL CROSSING FATALITY IN ELIZABETH TO-DAY.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 6.—Frederick Schultz, a baker, doing business at 821 Elizabeth avenue, was struck by an express train on the Pennsylvania Railroad at Bay View crossing shortly before noon to-day. He and his apprentice, Louis Nidrick, aged sixteen years, were instantly killed. Their bodies were literally cut to pieces. The wagon was demolished, but the horse escaped unhurt.

A BABY'S QUEER RIDE. Carried Over Fifty Feet on a Locomotive Pilot Without Any Injury.

A little baby belonging to Mrs. Willis, of Mulberry street, Newark, is the subject of no end of talk in that city to-day.

About 9 o'clock last night Mrs. Willis, the baby and a young Mr. Marshall, who is a clerk for Charles Strong, a Newark coal dealer, were crossing the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western tracks at the Halsted street crossing at East Orange, N. J., in a carriage belonging to Mr. Marshall.

Suddenly the night express, leaving this city at 8.30 p. m., bore down upon them.

The carriage was smashed to pieces and Mrs. Willis and young Marshall seriously hurt. The baby, who was wrapped in a heavy woollen blanket, was hurled into the air and fell a distance of fifty feet.

The little fellow wasn't even scratched, and did not appear to have minded his ride a little bit.

THAT EIL PLOT.

Robert Ray Hamilton's Murder Was Evidently Contemplated.

Josh Mann's Significant Confession That a Will Was Extorted.

All the Parties Before Judge Hogan at the Tombs This Afternoon.

The confession of "Josh" Mann, the lover of Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton, that a will had been made by her husband in favor of the baby, Beatrice Ray, and that all Hamilton's property was to go to the woman in case the child died, published exclusively in THE EVENING WORLD'S Sporting Extra yesterday, has created another sensation in this remarkable case.

Mann, who is apparently only anxious to save his own scalp, is being induced by the wily Inspector Byrnes to make a confession of working so successfully upon evidences who fall into his clutches, to give away all the details of the infamous plot.

He says that the confession of Hamilton showed him the will he had, duly executed, and after reading it to him, remarked that if Ray should happen to die she would marry "Josh" and that he was so "careless that an accident might happen any time."

As she was to be the guardian of the $10 baby, the fate of the little one was practically in her hands, and an accident was not much more easily managed than in the case of the able-bodied Assemblyman.

"Josh" also confessed yesterday that he had lived with Mrs. Hamilton as her husband's mistress, and that the reason why Hamilton for a time after his marriage with the woman assumed the name by which she was known in her last connection with the late Mrs. Hamilton was to keep her from learning of his real relations with her.

The suspicions with regard to Mann's intimacy with Mrs. Hamilton are fully confirmed by the fact that he has been seen in the presence of the woman and her supposed child make it altogether probable that the ultimate purpose of the conspirators was to take the life of both Hamilton and the child, and thus secure all his property for themselves.

The friends of Mrs. Hamilton are deeply distressed by the disclosures for they realize the terrible dangers with which she was surrounded, while he was associating with the adventures and her companions.

It is believed that the woman, by her ungovernable temper, the plot might have been entirely successful. It is believed that the nurse Donnelly knows a great deal more about the secret life of the woman than she has yet told, and she is looked upon as a very important witness.

It was she who declared that Mrs. Hamilton, in a confidential manner, had said that her violent temper was due to her habitual use of that drug.

The extreme nervousness of the woman in her place of confinement at the Tombs is said to result from her inability to obtain morphine.

When Mrs. Rupp visited her the other day she begged her to bring her half a dozen morphine pills, which she came again, and Mrs. Rupp would have carried out her promise to do this if it had not been for the intervention of her husband and Judge Irving.

It is believed that if she had sufficient quantity of the drug she would attempt suicide, for she is in a state of great mental depression.

Inspector Byrnes' investigations have satisfied him that Mann is really Mrs. Swinton's son. She was first married to Dr. Kemp, of Baltimore, in 1847, and a daughter by that name was born to her on the stage under the name of Miss Stevens.

In 1850 she married a musician named Mann, who lived with her in New York till her death in 1860, and was then placed under the name of Miss Stevens.

Mrs. Hamilton was well known in Elmira about 1870, and was living there with a man named Brill. She had frequent quarrels with him and on one occasion tried to shoot him.

He escaped and went to New York, whither she followed him, and then returned to Elmira, where her actions were so violent that she had to leave the town to escape arrest.

A number of witnesses are to be summoned to appear at the examination before Justice Hogan at the Tombs this afternoon. The examination will be held at 10 o'clock.
