THE PEOPLE OWN.

Stoyment Park last evening was a most stagnant protest against the action which for so much of this Summer has barred the people out from the cool, green refreshment.

Last evening there were there, and the quiet, orderly crowd of men, women and children, for the park is a little paradise for children, sat about on the benches or walked through the gravelled paths, their faces bright with content.

What a shame it would have been to have let this green breathing spot for the hot and tired people be tightly shut up during the Summer months, useless and irritating. Such a course would be almost nullification, because it would nullify every end of a park.

Not even the aristocrats who dwell in the immediate neighborhood of Stuyvesant Park would have had the satisfaction of looking at it, for they are out of town at cool, gay watering-places. The casual passer-by who would be a stranger in the city might have asked: "What is the park for?" And the answer would have been: "For nothing."

Last night anybody who saw the neat, happy Sunday gathering in the cool, quiet park would not have needed to ask any question. The park is the people's, and the people had it last night.

INCENTIVES TO VAMPIRES.

In Bavaria the graveyard keepers have lately been detected pilaging graves. There is no more revolting theft than snatching a corpse from the grave, stripping it of all that is worth anything, and perhaps carrying the body to a dissecting room to be carved up by an embryo physician.

What can stir the feelings of relatives more than the thought that avocian ghouls should dare to wrest tenderly loved ones from the bosom of the earth where they sleep in the long solemn slumber of death!

But it is almost to encourage these mercenary grave-diggers to consign a corpse to the earth with jewels, or rich clothes, or other articles of value about their persons. Sometimes an object to which the deceased was greatly attached is buried with him, and this may prove

But to make the casket of the dead a jewel casket is to encourage the grave robber.

Such a proceeding is unreasonable and should be discouraged.

Pittsburg policemen have been indulging in indiscriminate slaughter of dogs.

They expected 50 cents a head for every dog they killed, and they consequently killed all they could. The dogs might be tied up in a back yard or held in leash by a little girl or sitting in a window of a house. It mattered not. The "copper" saw 50 cents in his corpse and killed him.

Over a thousand dogs, many of them valuable animals, were killed before the "coppers" were restrained. Nice policemen in Pittsburg.

An elephant, two camels and five horses were recently stolen from a circus. It

THE WAYS OF WOMAN FAIR.

Do you want some sound suggestions on the promotion and preservation of beauty?

Well, eat fruits three times a day; prefer vegetables, eggs and soups to meat and bread; drink water in wholesale quantities; but not one drop of ice water; spend an hour at each meal, and if possible take a nap after dinner; make a medicine of water for internal and external application and use laughter as a laxative. In olden times tea and toast were prescribed for sick headache and bilious attacks; now wise women drink hot water for a day at intervals of two hours. Sleep eight hours at night, and as many hours during the day as you can steal. When you want to look your very best for a company or entertainment take a hot bath and go to bed and sleep for an hour. If on presentation Lobengrin does not remark on your charming appearance it will be because you have omitted high hair.

Frisky clothes are wonderfully refining, too.

Miss Geraldine Ulmer, more charming than ever, is once again in this city. She will shortly sail for Paris, where her new play is to be produced.

This pathetic little letter, addressed "To My Dear Mama in Heaven," was found at the Cincinnati Post-Office:

Dear Mama: I am so lonesome, and you don't want to leave. I want to go to you.

The time seems so long. You said I could come to you. You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and live with me.

You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and live with me. You said you would come and

LONG BRANCH ENTHUSED.

To-Morrow Evening's Entertainment

Already an Assured Success.

Everything indicates that the entertainment at the West End, Long Branch, tomorrow evening, in aid of THE EVENING

WORLD'S Sick Babies' Fund, will be an unqualified success, artistically, socially and financially.

The committee of ladies, at whose head is the stately and charming Mrs. A. J.

Dittenhofer, Mrs. Dr. S. Baruch and Mrs. Gernsheim, have placed $ large number of tickets, and the auditorium is certain to be filled with a brilliant and appreciative audience.

The West End Amusement Hall, by the kindness of Landlord Meredith, will be the scene of the entertainment. The programme of the affairs at Avenue C, Tackapona and Katerkill have been enlarged and varied, and assures a treat to its spectators and auditors.

Miss Marguerite St. John, as in the other entertainments, will be the central

ton in the bright comedieta, "Man Processes," with Miss Helen Mowat as Dinah and Walter J. Brooks as Capt. Huntington. Miss St. John will also appear as Kate Harcourt in a scene from "She Stoops to Conquer," with George M.

Wood as Charles Marlow.

Recitations of rare interest will be given by the deservedly popular Miss Emily

Rayner, and songs by Miss Jessie Olivier Feeley. There will be other recitations by Mr. A. C. Feeley and illustrations of "Familiar People" by Thomas J. Hayner.

Little Dot Clarendon will, of course, wit all the hearts that she has not already filled to the full.
