

PAWNEE THE ORANGE GEM.

Grounds on Which Carroll's Claim To the Diamond Is Disputed.

Litigation Over the Queen's Famous Present Is Still Unfinished.

Chapter two in the complicated story of the big Orange diamond, famous for its great size and because of having been once purchased for Queen Victoria, was unfolded this morning in the Tombs Court.

Joseph W. Carroll, the Duane street hoochier, is complainant against Charles Healey, a diamond dealer at 307 Broadway, for the alleged larceny of the big gem. Saturday he admitted to Justice Hogan that he owns only one-quarter of the orange diamond, the remainder belonging to Mrs. Madeline Bruce.

A bill of sale, dated at Montreal, Feb. 10, from Mrs. Bruce to Carroll, for $15,000, was produced in court Saturday.

The defense requested the production of a second paper, executed on the same day, in the nature of a contract, which showed that the transfer of the stone to Carroll was for the purpose of enabling him to sell and transfer it more easily.

When the case opened today Lawyer McKelvey put the contract referred to above in evidence. It permitted Carroll, who paid $10,000 down for his one-quarter share and was to pay $5,000 more after importing the stone into New York from Montreal, to retain possession of the gem for the purpose of sale.

It was stipulated that Carroll was to get $20,000 during the first two months of the stone for sale, $25,000 the next two months and $30,000 the last two months of the period of six months, for which it was agreed that Carroll should have the gem for selling purposes. Carroll admitted that he had signed this agreement.

"Have you ever tried to sell this stone?" asked Lawyer McKelvey.

"I have," replied Carroll, "I tried to sell it to Mr. J. C. Smith, of the Tombs, but he refused to buy it. I then tried to sell it to Mr. J. C. Smith, of the Tombs, but he refused to buy it. I then tried to sell it to Mr. J. C. Smith, of the Tombs, but he refused to buy it."

"Do you know who pawned it?" asked the lawyer.

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I pawned it at William Simpson's, 11 Park Row. He got it from Mr. Newman, my clerk."

"Was the stone pawned with your knowledge?" asked the lawyer.

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Carroll, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

DR. NEWELL'S BIG SURPRISE.

He Tells How His Wife Left Him, and Says She Fired the House.

Her Friends Say She Has Not Eloped but is Seeking Divorce.

Dr. William H. Newell, a well-known physician of 201 Palisade avenue, Jersey City Heights, this morning told an EVENING WORLD reporter a sorrowful tale of wrongdoing, desertion, elopement and robbery on the part of his wife and of his frustrating attempt to burn him out.

Mrs. Newell, who is also a physician, was a Miss Newton before she married Dr. Newell, seventeen years ago, and her parents live in Brooklyn.

Up to ten years ago she was prominent in Jersey City society circles, but since then, her husband has been a secluded life, except for the frequent calls made upon her by him, whom she called her patients.

Her husband says her conduct caused him to place her in the Morris Plains asylum some years ago, but he took her out again because she was entirely cured because he felt pity for her.

For years they have been virtually separated, the doctor says, although living in the same house, and the husband allowed her to have an independent mail box, on the front porch, in the name of the doctor.

Newell drew a revolver and she had him arrested, but the case was settled in a police court.

Last Thursday night Dr. Newell says he surprised his wife with a man of whom he had been suspicious for a long time.

"I have," said Newell, "I have, though," said the doctor this morning, "and his wife was showing an inch-long cut on the top of her head—with a hammer or hatchet, I don't know which. The man got away."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

"I do not know," replied Newell, "I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it. I do not know who pawned it."

FOREIGN NEWS OF THE DAY.

Will Sir Edward Clarke Suffer for "Disloyalty" to the Prince?

Bismarck Suffers Intense Pain From Rheumatism of the Spine.

(BY CABLE TO THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.) LONDON, June 15.—A movement is on foot in several London clubs to bring about the resignation of the expulsiator Solicitor-General Sir Edward Clarke, in consequence of what is termed his "disloyal" speech in the baccarat scandal trial, wherein he attacked and stigmatized the Prince of Wales.

It is rumored that a council of the royal family has been summoned for Saturday by the Queen, when the situation which has resulted from the baccarat case will be discussed.

This is mentioned in connection with the Continental rumors of the abdication of the Prince of Wales, and it is said that this matter will come before the Council.

Chief Justice Coleridge announces that he will take official notice of the imputation of gross partiality and bias in his summing up in the baccarat case, which was made by Sir William Gordon-Cumming in his speech at Forres, Scotland, on the occasion of his public address there.

It is rumored that Mr. William will be nominated for Parliament by his Scottish constituency at Forres.

HE IS A RICH POLICEMAN.

Patrolman Hayes Retires To-night Worth Over $40,000.

Patrolman William Hayes, of Capt. Short's Brooklyn squad, is the wealthiest patrolman in either of the cities that compose the metropolis.

He is patrolling his post in North Third street, Brooklyn, to-day for the last time, retiring to-night on half pay, $550 a year, having resigned June 6, at the expiration of his twenty-years' service, the resignation to take effect to-day.

Hayes was born in Limerick in 1838, the year Victoria was crowned Queen of Great Britain. He came to New York twenty-seven years ago, working as a carpenter. He was appointed patrolman in 1871. He had $300 saved up then. He has been thrifty, working in his leisure hours and saving his earnings.

He has been twice married, and is now a widower with four children by his first wife. He bought ten lots in North Tenth street on the installment plan. Father Yodyszyn's church stands on four of them, and Hayes built on the others.

He lived in one and rented the others. Now he owns nearly the whole block of four-story double tenements and has 150 families on his tenant roll.

He has a couple of nice bank accounts and $40,000 worth of real estate.

Hayes has always been a Democrat. He is a big, powerful man of even temper. He will visit old Ireland and hunt up some relatives there, sailing to-morrow on the Majestic.
