The Evening World Prints Associated Press News.

CHRISTMAS OPPORTUNITY YET.

The last Saturday before Christmas. Holiday preparations are at their height.

On the Friday of the coming week Santa Claus will have completed his round of the households.

On that same day The Evening World Christmas Trees will yield their precious harvest to the children of the poor.

There is brief space now to see to it that this harvest shall be marvellously complete.

But these are no reasons for not adding those names. It is never too late to be generous until the opportunity is forever past.

What a pleasant culmination it would be if in the opening days of next week that Tree Fund could see so splendidly boomed that even its projectors would be amazed.

The clock struck one and down he ran, according to the old nursery legend of the mouse who ran up the clock.

The clock struck three and down went he, was the case with a Tennessee Professor who, with his head turned by much drink, leaped to death from a high bridge yesterday.

Another foolish one to his fate. But will the example make another man wiser?

A "violent" mania terrifies a household in New York and is besieged two days by determined policemen, to whom he finally surrenders meekly as any lamb.

A "harmless" lunatic in Brooklyn suddenly shoots a friend dead, wounds his sister and blows his own brains out.

Who shall presume now to classify the safe and the dangerous among crazy men?

Tax Evening World will give a Christmas dinner to the newboys. At least 600 of the little fellows will sit down to the hospitable boards.

Black Noah Richards literally a dog for his life yesterday in the public courtroom when he crooned over the negro melody he claimed to have been singing at the time he is declared to have been murdering Policeman SHERMAN.

Two green-pools victims meet in town and condole. One from far Washington State, the other of Jamestown, N. Y. Their nibbling at the bait cost one of them $140, the other $285.

Strange sight, that in Cincinnati, of their anxiety to get each other in their taxes. Strange, that is, until you reflect that it was not anxiety to pay the money, but to avoid the penalties for delay, which actuated the crowd.

It is a good deal more than a mile that GEORGE W. CHILDS adds to the riches of the Dress Institute, at Philadelphia in presenting almost his entire collection of rare prints, autographs and manuscripts to the new establishment's library.

A World's Fair dinner in York New next Monday night is expected to do much for the Exposition in Chicago next year. Whether through a dinner or otherwise, New York certainly must do all it can for that enterprise.

If base all is to be restored to its old position of prestige, the public must pause long for its good-by to the old order of leagues and associations. It is the good of the genre, the people want.

To dispossess BILLY McGLORY? Yes, dispossess him of the idea that he can longer flourish in New York despite the call of law and order.

So busy with his committees he hasn't time to have the grip. Happy Spunker Cass, after all!

The river police ought to do lightning work when they get their new electric launches.

Billy McGLODY held for trial. So far, all right. Let the law keep its grip.

Room the Christmas-Tree Fund.

For the National League and American Association of Professional Baseball Players is the title of the consolidated organization?

The organization of the new League is on an iron-clad ten-year basis, and will be composed of twelve clubs.

Manager Pat Powers, of the New Yorks, thinks the consolidation is the greatest thing that could have happened for the good of the National game.

The following has been given out as a probability of the season of 1902.

Thanks to protective tariff it is not possible to buy an all-wool coat for dressmaking that the firm will warrant for less than $250 a yard.

Mrs. Frank J. Parker, of Chicago, who is at the head of a Women's Dress Reform Club in that city, is organizing an exhibition of the various reforms proposed or adopted in fashionable costumes.

ELECTRICIAN EARLE WAS A WRECK.

FOR FIFTEEN YEARS HE SUFFERED WITH CATARRH.

Patent Medicines Didn't Do Him Any Good, but He Took a Reporter How Doctors McCoy and Wildman Rescued Him.

The remarkable story that a person who has suffered from catarrh tells a reporter is that he spent a lot of money in taking a lot of patent medicines that did him no good, and the trouble finally broke the story in 1876 at just 17 years of age.

Mr. Earle is an electrician, and now I want to tell you a story that is a lot of money on patent medicines, but no good.
