THE L HAS IMPROVED.

Changes for the Better Effected by "The Evening World."

But Much Can Still Be Done for Patrons.

Faster Trains and Better Service Still Required.

There is not sufficient protection on the Brooklyn "L" roads during a storm for passengers waiting for trains at stations.

FOR BETTER "L" SERVICE.

AS A CITIZEN OF BROOKLYN AND A PATRON OF YOUR ROADS, I CALL YOUR ATTENTION TO THE WRETCHEDNESS OF THE SERVICE YOU GIVE. IF YOU CANNOT IMPROVE THE ACCOMMODATIONS IN OTHER RESPECTS, YOU CAN AT LEAST MAKE THEM BETTER.

NAME..... ADDRESS..... Fill out this blank and send it to Brooklyn Improvement Editor, The Evening World, P. O. Box 2,534, New York.

At nearly all of the stations along the Union line last Thursday the rain beat in through the sides so that there was hardly a dry spot to stand on.

More regularity is noticed in the running of trains, and although the waits are still too long and too many, they are much more nearly equal in length.

There should be some additional protection, the roofs either being extended further out or some kind of a boarding being put on the outer side.

While it was not necessary to wait outside in the rain, it was, nevertheless, to some people preferable to wait inside the damp, draughty and unpleasant smelling little cove of station houses.

These narrow little houses are none too pleasant to wait in during dry weather, and when the weather is stormy they become worse.

An insufficiency of cars is one of the principal sources of complaint with regard to the Brooklyn Elevated roads, and an improvement in this regard by the companies would probably do more towards satisfying patrons than anything else.

One trouble is that the long trains are taken off too soon in the morning and not put on early enough in the afternoon.

There was an instance of this on the Kings County road last Monday morning. It was 10 o'clock in the morning on a downtown train.

On another occasion on the Fifth Avenue line about 10 o'clock in the afternoon a train was on its way to the Bridge station with its two cars comfortably filled.

On a third occasion on the Fifth Avenue line about 10 o'clock in the afternoon a train was on its way to the Bridge station with its two cars comfortably filled.

Last Thursday night at Vanderbilt avenue a crowd was squeezed into a two-car train which was large enough to hold four cars, and when then all of the crowd did not get aboard, a case where passengers have been carried beyond their stations and of frequent occurrences.

They get so wedged in in the mass of squeezed humanity that it is next to impossible to get anywhere near the door in time to get off again.

Although there are still some general improvements on the Brooklyn "L" roads, it is nevertheless a fact that there have been some decided changes for the better since THE EVENING WORLD began its efforts for better service a few weeks ago.

MRS. WALDEN'S NOTE.

The Murderess Writes Her Lawyer She "Will End All."

Explains This as Meaning She Will Not Go to Prison for Life.

Satisfied with the Verdict, but Declares the Trial Unfair.

Fall Annie Walden, the slayer of her nineteen-year-old husband, declared today that she was satisfied with the verdict of murder in the second degree, pronounced against her last night by the jury before whom she was tried in the court of over and Terminal.

"I am satisfied if other people are," she said, with a defiant toss of her pretty head. "I can't do anything," she added, spreading her slender white hands out before her.

"How can I help myself? But I will never spend the rest of my life in prison. This with a tight pressure of her full lips and a dilatation of her nostrils.

The case was given to the jury in a brief but pointed charge by Judge Ingraham at 1:30 o'clock last evening. The jury was out at 10 o'clock. Then it came in to ask this question for Judge Blumenthal.

"Did it appear that James Walden struck his wife a blow before she fired the fatal shot?"

"Yes," she swore he did. But a disinterested policeman swore that he struck no blow, but was, on the contrary, turning away from her," said the Judge.

The jury retired again, and in ten minutes returned with a verdict of murder in the second degree.

Annie Walden received it without emotion. She sank down in her old place on the shoulder of a female friend, but arose a moment later and walked firmly out of court with Deputy Sheriff Brown.

Mr. Howe was given till Wednesday next to prepare his argument on a motion for a new trial. This morning the lawyer received this note from Mrs. Walden.

"Ma How, New York City, Apr 22, 1892. I am not so black as I am painted, although I have been unfortunate and weak. Thank you very much for your kind and warm letter. I have read it and I will tell you what I think of it. I am not so black as I am painted, although I have been unfortunate and weak.

JESSIE MAY GOING HOME.

An Ohio Officer Takes Charge of the Little Runaway.

Jessie May Howell, the thirteen-year-old girl who ran away from her home at Mount Union, O., last Monday, will be taken back to her mamma to-night by an Ohio officer.

The little runaway stuck to her original yarn that an uncle named Richard Johnson had left her in the Grand Central Depot, where she was found Tuesday night, and all the questions of the Ohio officer failed to shake her in the least.

Charles was caught in the depot at Mt. Union, O., but Jessie May was keen enough to escape. The boy was taken back to Mount Union, where he will be joined next Wednesday by Jessie, and both of them will be sent to the Reform School.

John Carnegie, the father of the seven little children who were left destitute and turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children at the Harlem Police court yesterday, and who were died in Harlem Hospital yesterday morning from heavy consumption, brought up for trial today.

Rev. J. McGowan, of the Emmanuel Church, who has taken a deep interest in the case, was in court this morning to confer with Justice Welles as to the best course to pursue relative to the removal of the body of Mrs. Carnegie.

He said the husband had taken no interest in his wife, and that she had died in the hospital for the poor. He said that the children were in a deplorable condition, and that the wife had died in the hospital for the poor.

BEAT HER WITH A HAMMER.

Piano-Maker Keck Charged with Brutality to His Little Girl.

She and Her Brothers Taken in Charge by the Children's Society.

Caroline Keck, a sad-faced girl of thirteen years, whose back and arms are covered with bruises, and her two brothers, Joseph and Alexander, aged twelve and seven years respectively, were committed to the care of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children by Justice Welles, in the Harlem Police court today.

Joseph Keck, their father, is a piano-maker, living at 513 East One Hundred and Fifteenth Street. According to the girl, she was beaten by him with a hammer about her arms and body on the 10th and 20th of April, the first time because she lost the room key and again because she had failed to say good-bye to a visitor.

Mrs. Louisa Keck, the mother of the children, died on Washington's birthday of heart disease; since then Keck, it is said, has neglected and beaten his children, sometimes without the slightest reason.

Last Wednesday evening a female friend of Keck's paid a visit to the house. The children did not like the visitor, and when she finally left they did not bid her good-bye. For that trivial reason, it is alleged, Keck gave his children a terrible beating, and wound up by locking them in a room.

Caroline's cries on this occasion were heard by neighbors, who interfered and made the father stop by threatening him with arrest. Yesterday Agents McManus and Moore, of the Children's Society, heard of the case and they took the children away.

On the evidence of the Children's Justice Welles issued a warrant for Keck's arrest.
