

HE FAVORS A CHANGE.

Commissioner Gallup on the East River Park Concerts.

Some Needed Improvements Should First Be Made, He Says.

Lawyer Frederick A. Botty Writes a Letter on the Subject.

The plan to change the hour of the Thursday concert at East River Park from 4 o'clock in the afternoon to 8 o'clock in the evening, received today support...

Since the EVENING WORLD espoused the cause of the working people who live in the neighborhood of the park, only a few movements become popular among those who frequent the pretty pleasure spot...

In an interview published in yesterday's EVENING WORLD Commissioner Nathan Straus expressed the opinion that the request of the people who frequent the park should be heeded...

Today Commissioner Albert Gallup, formerly President of the Board, comes out in favor of evening concerts. Commissioner Gallup is one of the most energetic and industrious members of the Park Board...

"From the very first I was strongly in favor of the concert at East River Park in the evening, and I believe now, as I always have, that the evening is the proper time for them, because it is impossible for the people of that locality to attend the concert in the afternoon. Their work keeps them away."

"But with concerts in the evening would come immense crowds to the park, and consequently a great number of children, and right here comes in the only possible objection to evening concerts at present."

"The railing along the esplanade next to the river is artistic and pretty, but it is not safe when children are present in large numbers, because they can easily crawl through or possibly fall through and tumble into the river."

"Then, too, the north end of the park is unprotected at Eighty-fourth street, which is not under our control. Boys are constantly crawling through the railing or around the end and getting down on the rocks below, and it keeps the policeman in the Park busy keeping them away from danger. One or two cases of drowning have occurred there, but I am glad to say that they were not the fault of the department."

"The danger, however, is constant and threatening. The tide is very strong along there, and should any person fall in they would almost sure to be swept away. It would be impossible for policemen to keep children away from the railing with the crowds that would flock there to evening concerts."

"But cannot this danger be averted?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, it can and will be. Plans and specifications for the improvement of the northern end of the park are now ready, and work will be begun as soon as possible. While we are spending money in that way we can just as well make the railing more secure by putting up a wire netting along its entire length, but it will destroy the artistic effect, but it will make it perfectly safe for children. There will be no reason for not giving the concert in the evening, as should be done."

"East River Park is a beautiful spot, and when the improvements which are to be made there are completed it will be one of the most popular of the smaller parks in the city."

The following letter from Lawyer Frederick A. Botty, who has been a most earnest champion of the bill to change the hour of the concert in the vicinity of East River Park, shows how much the park is appreciated and how earnestly evening concerts as well as other improvements are desired by those who frequent the park:

"In your valuable issue of Saturday evening, May 21, there appears an article about music in the East River Park, and you kindly mention to us among those who are in favor of having music in the park, evening instead of afternoon, and a decidedly in favor of having music evenings."

"What is the use of having the concert in the afternoon? Who attend the same? Women with baby carriages, have the workmen and their families an opportunity to listen to the music? No. At 4 o'clock, about the time the workmen come home, the musicians pack their trunks, and, like the Arabs, silently steal away, and the workmen who help to pay for the music, can only imagine the pleasure of the children who are left behind."

"Last year I called the attention of the Park Commissioners and others to the desired change and other important matters relative to the improvement of the park. The people are thankful to have such a beautiful place to go to, but as to the politicians in whose power it is to improve the place, they should take their heads for they have shamefully neglected this park."

"From Eighty-third street up on the East side there is no other park than East River Park. The sidewalks around the park are beautiful and improve the appearance of the rich residents, but here in the midst of the workmen's homes the Park Commissioners neglect their duties."

"There is not a single bunch of flowers in the park. The sidewalks around the park are not only bad, but dirty, dusty and dangerous. The old ruin in the park is an eyesore and should, together with the old building adjoining, be removed."

"The Park Commissioners will never do this unless your valuable paper will assist in obtaining for the people their rights. The Park Department should use some of the $101,500 appropriated for park purposes in improving East River Park. Respectfully yours, Frederick A. Botty, 100 West 14th Street, New York, May 23, 1892."

James Stays in Ludlow Street. President William G. Jones, of the United States Commercial Agency, arrested on complaint of Lawyer H. H. Hays in a suit for $30,000 damages for persecution and false imprisonment, has not been able yet to procure $30,000 and remains a prisoner in Ludlow Street Jail.

MR. BLAINE HAS A QUIET DAY.

Reads the Papers, Then Visits His New Grandchild.

A Rumored Conference with Mr. Platt—Ex-Speaker Reed in Town.

Secretary Blaine took things very quietly at the Fifth Avenue Hotel this morning. He had few callers, and these were all personal friends, and although the editors of the hotel were filled with politicians none of them made any effort to see the Secretary.

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Blaine ordered a carriage and drove uptown to the house of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Damrosch. It was rumored that Mr. Blaine was afterwards in conference with the Senator of Connecticut, who has rooms in the hotel adjoining those of the Secretary of State. This, however, could not be verified. Nothing was seen of Mr. Platt about the hotel during the morning, although dozens of watchful eyes were on the lookout for him.

Field Marshal Murat Halstead called and sent up his card to Mrs. Blaine, but went away when informed that she had gone out.

Another person who attracted considerable attention was the other big man from Maine, ex-speaker Thomas B. Reed. His stalwart form loomed up in the corridor just before 11 o'clock, and he stood for some time conversing with Col. Parker, member of the Republican National Committee from Vermont, and several other politicians.

Mr. Reed did not venture for Mr. Blaine or even send up his card. It is said that the two big men had taken a walk together in the park, and that they had a long talk about the Republican tactics. He refused to answer any questions put to him by reporters.

"It is useless to ask me any question," he said, "I have absolutely nothing to say, and here I am in the middle of a walk with my dog and my gun."

"Well, I am going up now to see my daughter, and what will I do this afternoon? I do not yet know myself."

With a few minutes to spare, he started at a brisk pace for his carriage, which was waiting at the hotel door. He was apparently in excellent health. His step was firm and his manner bright and cheerful. The ex-speaker is not a Hartford man either, and it is difficult to say just where he is to be seen in the city. He is in the city, and he is in the city, and he is in the city.

HELD AS A FLIM-FLAMMER. Many People in Paterson Said to Have Been Fleeced by Carlton.

Frank F. Carlton, a tall, well-dressed man wearing a silk hat and a badge of the Knights of Pythias, was arraigned in the Jefferson Market court this morning as a ringleader from Paterson in a case of fleecing.

Carlton is charged with having induced many people in Paterson to invest in a scheme which he called the "Paterson Loan Office." He is charged with having induced many people to invest in a scheme which he called the "Paterson Loan Office."

MRS. HATTIE ADAMS SOLD OUT.

Mortgages Auction Off the Furnishings of Her Houses.

A Stuffed Dog and Some Statuettes Among the Articles of Value.

The furniture and contents of the houses at 21 and 23 East Twenty-second street, owned by Mrs. Hattie Adams, were sold at public auction today by J. Ullmann & Co. to satisfy a mortgage held by them on the goods.

Mrs. Adams is a well-known dealer in bargains and reliable hunters and women whom she knew personally because of their similar ways in life, all looking about the house examining the furniture, or had she heard the comments made by them on the same, her ready wit and shrewdness have made many warm friends.

But she was there, neither was Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst, of whose celebrated visit to her house today's sale was a result, but his name was in the mouths of many of the persons present.

When some one remarked, "Well, this is Parkhurst's work," the faces of more than one fashionably attired woman took on a sort of white-to-the-neck expression that was probably an index of her thoughts.

The furniture had all been removed from No. 21 to No. 23, where Hattie Adams kept a boarding-house for "actors and bicycle people." As a result the latter house appeared overcrowded, and more than one man remarked that the house was "stuffed" for auction purposes, and that Hattie had really done her best to get rid of it.

Herberg, however, denied this, and said that everything was there except a few articles of bric-a-brac. He also said that she had refused the offer of $100,000 for the house, and that she had refused the offer of $100,000 for the house.

The room in which the "notorious" couple was held was crowded with the best furniture of the city, which had been sold at a public auction, and the proceeds were used for the benefit of the poor.

CONFESSED UNDER TORTURE. HER BABY STOLEN FROM HER.

Mrs. Hayes heartbroken after her fruitless chase. The details of the Hayes kidnaping case are being discussed today in nearly every household in Elizabethport, N. J.

Sunday morning at 7 o'clock Mrs. Hayes left the house to attend Mass. She had no sooner done than her husband, from whom she had separated, and who had come from Hoboken for the purpose, entered the house and ran off with the child. At that instant Mrs. Hayes returned and, appreciating her husband's resistance to her husband ran out for help.

Hayes made haste to Arnold's boat-house to secure a boat to row across Newark Bay. Mrs. Hayes arrived just as the boat was being launched, and persuaded the keeper to row her to the boat.

Hayes, still holding the child in his arms, ran to the railroad bridge, which spans the bay, and looked at the child in the hands of a man who was standing on the bridge. Mrs. Hayes was close behind, and when she saw the child in the hands of the man, she ran to the bridge, and when she saw the child in the hands of the man, she ran to the bridge.
