

not with the degenerate Republicanism of 1860. To the National Convention, representing thoroughly this order of Republicanism, Harrison appealed irresistibly.

MAINE UNDESERVEDLY REHABILITATED. (DET.) June 11.—The Free Press (Det.) says: "While the Republican party cannot honestly be congratulated on this outcome of the convention, which fastened on it the reproach of degrading most shamefully the civil service, it can be congratulated heartily on one of the side results. We mean by the exit of ex-secretary of state Blaine from politics."

COMFORT FOR THE COUNTRY. PORTLAND, ORE., June 11.—The Ore. Union says: "If the electors will nominate Cleveland we shall have an administration safe and sound on these questions of financial policy upon which the country has been much disturbed, whether the one or the other be elected."

REHABILITATED. CINCINNATI, June 11.—The Enquirer (Cin.) says: "Upon Secretary Blaine the leaders of the opposing faction placed an unmerited humiliation for using his name before the Convention, when it was patently to the whole country that his nomination was an impossibility."

HARRISON THE FITTEST. DENVER, COLO., June 11.—The Republican says: "The Democratic nomination means another great victory for the Republican party in November. Among all the men spoken of for this nomination during the past year he was by far the fittest."

A THREAT TO NATIONAL HARMONY. MEMPHIS, TENN., June 11.—The Appeal (Mem.) says: "The Democratic party has now only to defeat a man who has arrayed against him the powerful chiefs of his party, the man who has thrust us on the verge of war with absolutely no warrant, the sponsor for Wadsworth and Haun, the typical narrow-minded representative of all that is objectionable in his party. The nomination of Benjamin Harrison is a threat to the harmony of the country and the old Blaine yell has been heard for the last time."

THE POWER OF A MACHINE. NEW ORLEANS, June 11.—The Picayune says editorially: "The nomination of Harrison is an illustration of the power of the political machine created by executive patronage."

THE RESULT LOGICAL. THE TIMES-DEMOCRAT says: "Harrison was logically his own successor for the nomination. He has made a passably good President, as far as a Republican whose chief characteristics are slender ability, liberality and sanctimoniousness could in the onerous role."

PHILADELPHIA IDEAS. PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—The North American says: "If any impeachment could have been made of the personal or political integrity of the President, the nomination would have been impossible."

THE INQUIRY. "The Republican party never had more reason to be satisfied with its prospects."

THE REVEREND. "The nomination of President Harrison will enforce the obligation of the coming Chicago convention to meet it with a candidate possessing in a greater degree the confidence of the masses of the country."

THE LEADER. "Those who made this admirable nomination have fair reason to that which they did in the heat of a June convention will be ratified at the fall boxes in the gust of November, after the silence of deliberate judgment."

HELENA, MON., June 11.—The office of Russell Harrison's paper, the Journal, was surrounded by eager crowds, who received the news of the President's nomination with bolder manifestations of enthusiasm. The Journal says, editorially, to-day: "Harrison's nomination reflects the people's wishes and meets with the approval of the country."

THE ENGLISH PRESS. LONDON, June 11.—The burden of the comments of all the evening papers on the nomination of President Harrison and the selection of Mr. Whitelaw Reid as the Republican candidate for Vice-President is joy over the defeat of Mr. Blaine, who has accused of constant attempts to make party capital out of foreign politics.

UN-ON FRINTERS INDORSE REID. MINNEAPOLIS, June 11.—Before the nomination of Whitelaw Reid for Vice-President had been decided upon, a telegram signed by a committee of Typographical Union No. 6, of New York, stating that the difference between and Mr. Reid had been settled last Sunday, was exhibited by members of the New York delegation. The telegram read: "To the Republican National Convention and the Members of the New York Delegation. GENTLEMEN: At a meeting of the undersigned, a committee representing Typographical Union

WHO IS IT TRIED TO DIE? A Mysterious Would-Be Suicide in a Downtown Hotel. He Gives the Name of A. J. Walker, a Commission Merchant.

A mysterious attempt at suicide by gas asphyxiation was reported this morning by the Carbon street police. A stout, well-dressed, middle-aged man registered at Smith & McNeill's Hotel, on Washington street, last night as 'A. J. Walker, New York.' He was assigned to room 27 and went to bed.

At 3:30 o'clock this morning a chambermaid detected the odor of gas emanating from Walker's room. She notified superintendent Wordwick, who went to the room and knocked on the door, but received no answer. Policeman John Sheridan was summoned and burst the door open.

Walker was found in bed, dressed and unconscious, while the unlighted gas burner was burning. A hypodermic injection to the patient, removed Walker to Chambers Street Hospital. There he received sufficient care to give his name as John Walker, a commission merchant. He said he was forty-six years old, but refused to give his address or state why he wished to end his life.

Capt. James, of the Boat Eldorado, Offers Mayor Chase a Clue.

PERTHAMBOY, N. J., June 11.—Another arrest has been made in connection with the murder of Hester Mary Anderson, the pretty Danish servant-girl who was butchered Wednesday afternoon in a patch of woods about a mile north of this place.

PERTHAMBOY

Mayor Chase, of Perth Amboy, has come into possession of information which may furnish a clue to the murderer. W. R. James, of Perth Amboy, who is a friend of the boat captain of the boat, Evan Hansen, called at Mr. Chase's office, South and Broad streets, this city, yesterday morning on business. During the conversation Capt. James took the Mayor aside and told him he thought he could tell him something of the Perth Amboy crime.

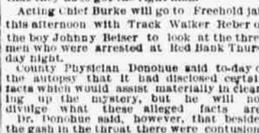

The water was up to his waist. Cedar blocks dangled round him like corks, and huge piles of drift passed dangerously near him as he struggled in the current.

He staggered on, holding all that was clear to him safe and dry above the whirling deluge. His strength is falling now. His grasp seems ready to loosen. A thousand eyes were focused on a struggling figure in the flood.

John Walker, a middle-aged man, attempted suicide at 10 o'clock this morning by turning on the gas in his room at 109 Washington street. He was removed to Chambers Street Hospital. He will recover.

Hamilton had a narrow escape from being killed on Tournament yesterday. While going to the post he lost control of his mount, and the horse went up the bluff a lightning pace. At the end of the chute there is a small passageway out in the fence to admit of the starter's wagon being taken from the track and for this Hamilton struck the crazy brute. He got through safely and Hamilton soon after regained control of him. Had there been no passageway Hamilton would have struck the fence and, in all probability, killed himself and his jockey.

Tournament's Faint Heart, Not Hamilton's Riding, Lost the Race. PLUNGES ON MADSTONE. Mendicant Proves Herself to Be a Very Fast Filly.

Tournament, the faint-hearted and cowardly son of Sir Madrigal, made his first appearance of the season yesterday. He was plunged upon to an extraordinary degree and went to the post a hot favorite over Fairy, Russell, Madstone, Tormentor and others. Jockey Tony Hamilton rode him. Tournament lost the race, and Hamilton was most unjustly abused by those who lost their money on the horse. In view of the circumstances Hamilton was not to blame for Tournament's defeat. The stories of his turning in the saddle and jerking at Garrison are ridiculous. The horse would have performed no better with any other jockey up, for Hamilton is admittedly one of the most skillful riders in the country. He has his streaks of bad luck, it is true. The same can be said of other jockeys. The writer has seen Garrison, Tara, Bergen and others ride like shoemakers at times, but because a boy slips up once it is no reason why he should be roundly abused for the rest of his life. Hamilton did the best he could. He may have been a trifle over-confident at the end of the last sixteenth pole, for there Garrison was whipping Madstone and Tournament was going easily. The critics who cry, 'why didn't he go on with Tournament?' would have been the first to cry against Hamilton had he gone on, that the boy was crazy in exposing the horse's form. The truth of the matter is that Tournament is the rankest coward that ever stood on four legs. His heart must be a curiosity if he possesses such an organ, and it is extremely doubtful if he does. He ran easily yesterday up to the last thirty yards. At the point he was two lengths in front of Madstone, on whom Garrison had been working for a sixteenth of a mile. Then Tournament stopped so suddenly that in three or four jumps Madstone had made up the gap and had won by daylight.

Tournament always possessed a great turn of speed, and won his races by getting so far in front in the first part of the journey that his heart was never working as he disappeared from the sight of the others close behind him. The writer remembers the instructions given to George Taylor by Green B. Morris when that jockey rode Lily in a race against Tournament at Morris Park two years ago. Mr. Morris said: "Don't attempt to race with Tournament in the first mile. Take things easy, pick out the dry spots and let the horse settle along in a good position. At the end of a mile begin to move up. You'll catch Tournament when you get near him he'll be beaten." Taylor followed instructions and beat Tournament in hollow style. The son of Mr. Morris went out in his usual style and opened up a big gap. As soon as he really caught him he stopped like a car, and so fast that Captain beat him out for the place. Time and time again has Tournament shown himself an arrant coward. His proper place is in the half-mile dashes at Gloucester.

The weights of the prominent entries for Vreedland Handicap at seven furlongs for three-year-olds, to be run at Morris Park on Monday, are as follows: Tammany, 127; Patron, 123; St. Florian, 122; Lochachese, 118; Lamplighter, 117; Yorkville Belle, 115; Sir Matthew, 113; Leonawell, 115; Dagonet, 114; Nomad, 113; King Cadmus, 112; Pickpocket, 112; Addie, 110; Mars, 108; Chas. Fide, 108.

Turkman Edward Corrigan has decided to bring on Riley and Huron as soon as the month-month meeting begins. Corrigan is reported to be saying that he would race over the Eastern tracks in spite of the Board of Control. From all accounts there will be a monkey and a pair of a team when he arrives.
