

BROOKLYN EDITION OF THE EVENING WORLD--ONE CENT.

LAST EDITION. ASTOR NOT DEAD.

The Report of His Death Was a Cruel Canard.

Some One Forged the Cablegram from the London Agent.

Mrs. Astor Tells "The Evening World" Correspondent that Her Husband Is Better.

No Correction of the Reports Yet Received at the Astor Offices Here.

Head Manager Abner Bartlett, of the John J. Astor property, yesterday:

After a release Mr. Astor died to-day, between 4 and 5 o'clock. Sent notices of death to the papers.

That cablegram was received at 23 West Twenty-sixth street about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and it was the first official news direct from the Astor circles announcing the death.

Mr. Astor's physician denies the story most emphatically and pronounces it a base canard. The servants at Mr. Astor's house all wear white ties, and a card sent in by THE EVENING WORLD correspondent was brought back with the answer written upon it: "Mr. Astor is alive."

THE EVENING WORLD correspondent afterwards sent a note to Mrs. Astor explaining the situation in New York and the contradicting reports that had been received from London in regard to her husband.

In reply Mrs. Astor sent out word that Mr. Astor was much better.

This is perfectly authentic, and there is no doubt that the stories of his death were without any foundation whatever.

A cable just received from New York states that Manager Bartlett, of the Astor estate, received the announcement of Mr. Astor's death by cable from Mr. Adams, Mr. Astor's agent in London. At least the cable was signed by him, and Mr. Bartlett supposed that it was authentic.

Mr. Adams was immediately called upon by THE EVENING WORLD correspondent, and he denies very positively that he sent any cablegram to Mr. Bartlett announcing Mr. Astor's death. He says it must have been the work of some miscreant, who knew the sensation that such a report would create.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS DENIAL.

LONDON, July 12.—(By Associated Press.) Secretary of the American Legation, said Mrs. W. W. Astor yesterday and was informed that Mr. Astor was making rapid progress towards recovery. Mrs. Astor denied that her husband had never been in the slightest danger.

Mr. Astor's physician confirms the statements that Mr. Astor's illness was not dangerous and that he is now recovering.

Mrs. Astor went out driving yesterday afternoon.

The Astor family have become so annoyed and hurt by the persistent inquiries that have been made of them by various persons that they refuse to make any further answers to questions regarding Mr. Astor's health.

Mrs. Astor says she would be glad to know who originated the cruel report of her husband's death.

In response to numerous telegrams from the United States saying that it was circulated that Mr. Astor had died in London yesterday afternoon, the representative of the Associated Press called at Lansdowne House, Mr. Astor's London residence, at an early hour this morning and learned that Mr. Astor was not dead. He at once called this information to the United States, but further inquiries were received stating that it was generally published in the United States that Mr. Astor was dead.

Again the representative of the Associated Press went to Lansdowne House, thinking that perhaps Mr. Astor had died since his last visit. As he approached Lansdowne House the cheerful appearance of the mansion belied the story that death had stricken the head of the family.

The windows were open and a lady was sitting out on the veranda reading.

Mr. Astor's valet informed the Associated Press representative that his master had passed a good night, and that he had partaken of a hearty breakfast. The condition of Mr. Astor, he said, was so much improved that he intended to rise from his bed during the day.

Inquiries made at Mr. Astor's office in Surrey street elicited the information that his agent saw Mr. Astor last night. He was suffering from a severe cold which at one time threatened to develop into pneumonia.

Further inquiries were made at Lansdowne House at noon to-day as to Mr. Astor's condition. The butler said that Mrs. Astor was not at home and that Mr. Astor's nurse had not left the house for a walk.

It is reported that Mr. Astor's health has so much improved that he will go out tomorrow.

The Cable Announcing Death. Manager C. W. Baldwin, of the office of the estate of John Jacob Astor, 23 West Twenty-sixth street, had received no information whatever this morning to contradict yesterday afternoon's cablegrams that Mr. W. W. Astor was dead.

Manager Adams, of the London office of W. W. Astor, sent the following cablegram to London, July 12.—It is now absolutely certain that the false report of Mr. Astor's death was sent out by some maliciously disposed person who wished to annoy and distress the family.

Mr. Astor's physician denies the story most emphatically and pronounces it a base canard. The servants at Mr. Astor's house all wear white ties, and a card sent in by THE EVENING WORLD correspondent was brought back with the answer written upon it: "Mr. Astor is alive."

THE EVENING WORLD correspondent afterwards sent a note to Mrs. Astor explaining the situation in New York and the contradicting reports that had been received from London in regard to her husband.

In reply Mrs. Astor sent out word that Mr. Astor was much better.

This is perfectly authentic, and there is no doubt that the stories of his death were without any foundation whatever.

A cable just received from New York states that Manager Bartlett, of the Astor estate, received the announcement of Mr. Astor's death by cable from Mr. Adams, Mr. Astor's agent in London. At least the cable was signed by him, and Mr. Bartlett supposed that it was authentic.

Mr. Adams was immediately called upon by THE EVENING WORLD correspondent, and he denies very positively that he sent any cablegram to Mr. Bartlett announcing Mr. Astor's death. He says it must have been the work of some miscreant, who knew the sensation that such a report would create.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS DENIAL.

LONDON, July 12.—(By Associated Press.) Secretary of the American Legation, said Mrs. W. W. Astor yesterday and was informed that Mr. Astor was making rapid progress towards recovery. Mrs. Astor denied that her husband had never been in the slightest danger.

Mr. Astor's physician confirms the statements that Mr. Astor's illness was not dangerous and that he is now recovering.

Mrs. Astor went out driving yesterday afternoon.

The Astor family have become so annoyed and hurt by the persistent inquiries that have been made of them by various persons that they refuse to make any further answers to questions regarding Mr. Astor's health.

Mrs. Astor says she would be glad to know who originated the cruel report of her husband's death.

In response to numerous telegrams from the United States saying that it was circulated that Mr. Astor had died in London yesterday afternoon, the representative of the Associated Press called at Lansdowne House, Mr. Astor's London residence, at an early hour this morning and learned that Mr. Astor was not dead. He at once called this information to the United States, but further inquiries were received stating that it was generally published in the United States that Mr. Astor was dead.

Again the representative of the Associated Press went to Lansdowne House, thinking that perhaps Mr. Astor had died since his last visit. As he approached Lansdowne House the cheerful appearance of the mansion belied the story that death had stricken the head of the family.

The windows were open and a lady was sitting out on the veranda reading.

Mr. Astor's valet informed the Associated Press representative that his master had passed a good night, and that he had partaken of a hearty breakfast. The condition of Mr. Astor, he said, was so much improved that he intended to rise from his bed during the day.

Inquiries made at Mr. Astor's office in Surrey street elicited the information that his agent saw Mr. Astor last night. He was suffering from a severe cold which at one time threatened to develop into pneumonia.

Further inquiries were made at Lansdowne House at noon to-day as to Mr. Astor's condition. The butler said that Mrs. Astor was not at home and that Mr. Astor's nurse had not left the house for a walk.

It is reported that Mr. Astor's health has so much improved that he will go out tomorrow.

The Cable Announcing Death. Manager C. W. Baldwin, of the office of the estate of John Jacob Astor, 23 West Twenty-sixth street, had received no information whatever this morning to contradict yesterday afternoon's cablegrams that Mr. W. W. Astor was dead.

"worked his way up." After three years of steady plodding his father, the late John Jacob Astor, one day rewarded him with this remark:

"William, I think that your business education is now complete, and I think you know how to take care of a bit of the property. Now you may take a rest."

Young Astor then needed it. He had showed considerable aptitude but no fondness for finance, and he turned to his literary pursuits with much fervor. He did not, however, neglect his physical welfare. He was very fond of outdoor sports and boasted of his skill as a swordsman, boxer, horseman and rifle shot. He was passionately fond of the water and twice circled the globe on his yacht. Indeed, his fondness for aquatic sports was indirectly the cause of his death, the fatal attack of pneumonia having been brought on by a drenching he received on the water.

Mr. Astor was a man of athletic build, fully six feet in height, with broad shoulders and deep chest. While abroad he became a fluent linguist, and the results of his studies were seen in several magazine articles, which showed great thought and study, although not remarkable for originality.

In October, 1877, William Waldorf Astor, father shocked the family by going into politics. He was elected to the Assembly in 1878, from the Eleventh District, as a Republican, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson. He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

He was elected to the Senate in 1881, and served with such satisfaction on the Committee on Civil Expenditures of the House, and as chairman of the Committee on the Militia, that he was elected to the Senate in 1879, by a majority of 5,000 over his opponent, Charles A. Jackson.

He was the youngest member of the Senate of 1880-81, and served on the Committees on Commerce and Navigation, Militia and as chairman of the Committee on Public Expenditures.

IN THE BIG GARDEN.

Whitney Favors Public Notification to Cleveland and Stevenson.

Committeemen Indorse The World's Plan of a Public Meeting.

Organization of the Committee of One Hundred Elected To-Day.

The one hundred prominent Democrats appointed by Mayor Grant to make arrangements for the reception, July 20, of Candidates Cleveland and Stevenson, and the Committee selected by the Democratic National Convention to notify the nominees officially of their nominations, met at noon to-day in the governors' room of the City Hall for organization.

Ex-Secretary Whitney stated the object of the meeting, saying that it had been the custom to notify the Presidential candidate at his residence. In this case circumstances are different. Mr. Cleveland has no home here at present. He had been invited to hear the official news at a club, and the unique plan of a public reception at Madison Square Garden had been suggested by THE EVENING WORLD.

Organization was then effected by the selection of Samuel D. Babcock as Chairman and David McClure as Secretary.

Mr. Babcock took it for granted that the popular plan of notifying the candidate at a public meeting, suggested by THE EVENING WORLD, met with popular favor, and at once invited discussion on the subject, without making reference to the exclusive club banquet scheme.

Robert E. Roosevelt spoke briefly, and then Mr. Whitney remarked that it would be proper to consult the wishes of sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Chairman Babcock, Secretary McClure, Mayor Grant and Mr. Whitney were then designated to confer with the sub-committees of the National Executive Committee, which would be in the city to-morrow. Personally, he said, he favored a public meeting. He thought it was a capital idea, and that seemed to be the opinion of all the committeemen he had seen.

Lost Some Feathers but Won the Fight.

TOOK HIS LIFE IN A PASSION.

A Staten Island Barber Hangs Himself in a Furious Rage.

His Little Ten-Year-Old Daughter Found Him Dead.

Henry V. Mathes, aged fifty-four, a barber, committed suicide at a late hour last night by hanging himself in his barn at his home, "Woodrow," Westfield, S. I.

Mathes was of an excitable disposition. He had been to school last night, and when he returned he expected to meet his son with a horse at the Huger station to drive him home. His son, however, failed to put in an appearance, and Mathes was compelled to walk home in the rays of the hot sun for more than a mile.

This enraged him, and when he reached home he quarreled with his family. He finally threw himself on the lawn and began to pound his chest violently with his clenched fist. He then disappeared unknown to his family. When he failed to appear for his evening meal his family became alarmed and search was made for him.

About six o'clock his little ten-year-old daughter went to the barn and discovered the body of her father hanging in the air. The child ran into the house crying, "Papa is dead! Papa is dead!" Then Mathes's wife and the neighbors went to the barn and cut the body down.

Mathes had died a few minutes before the neighbors and dropped himself from the top of the stock of hay. Mathes was for many years engaged as a barber on the White Star steamship Adriatic. Coroner E. A. Harvey, of Rossville, will hold an inquest.

LOTIE COLLINS NOT DEAD.

The "Tara-Ra" Singer Alive and Well in London.

LONDON, July 12.—The report that Lotie Collins, the well-known concert-hall singer, died suddenly last night was incorrect. She is alive and well in this city.

CAMPBELL ISSUES A CALL.

Republican Executive Committee to Meet in New York Saturday.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—A call has been issued by Chairman Campbell of the Republican National Committee, for a meeting of the Executive Committee to be held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, next Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

Ran Down Two Italians.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., July 12.—Two Italian laborers at work on the new railroad near Hilton Park yesterday were struck by a passenger train. Michele DeLillo died from his injuries. The other, known as "Mike," and his leg broken and sustained other injuries.

Proposed New Niagara Bridge.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 12.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Company proposes to establish an independent company in New York State by building a line from Woodstock to Niagara Falls and crossing the gorges by a bridge of four arches.

Excitement in Woodbridge.

WOODBRIDGE, N. J., July 12.—There is excitement here over the incendiary fires of yesterday morning. Last night the Township Committee and the prominent citizens held a meeting and decided to offer a reward for the capture and conviction of the incendiaries.

Razor Slashing That May Be Murder.

Frank Colcher, an Italian barber, is being sought by the police of the East Fifty-first street squad to-day, being wanted on an assault with a razor upon Henry Bestweaver, of 847 E. 51st street, who is in Bellevue Hospital seriously wounded in the right arm and breast.

DID BLOWS HASTEN HIS END?

Col. Green Asks the Coroner to Investigate His Son's Death.

Col. Augustus Green called at the Coroner's office this morning and requested Coroner Levy to investigate the death of his son, William H. Green, forty-three years old, who died suddenly last night in his room at 92 Sixth avenue.

John Green, a fire insurance salesman of Patrol No. 1 and son of the dead man, informed the police last night that he believed his father's death was accelerated by a beating which he received from William Fraser, a cousin of 49 Christopher street, in a saloon at Greenway and Christopher streets last Wednesday.

Coroner Levy directed Col. Green to send his grandson to the coroner's office to make a sworn affidavit to his charges.

The coroner said that if the affidavit justified such action he would promptly issue a warrant for the arrest of Fraser.

ST. JOHN'S FEARFUL PLIGHT.

Death and Inanity in the Track of the Conflagration.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., July 12.—Every lawyer's office, doctor's residence and office, and every Protestant clergyman's residence is burned. Every daily newspaper and every printing office is destroyed. Not enough type, paper, or ink remains in the city sufficient for single posters.

Several houseless persons have died in consequence of flight and exposure. Many people are temporarily housed in sheds and tents now, but provisions and clothing are needed and desired about the city.

The insurance agents held a meeting to-day. Their reports showed losses insured in agencies here to amount to $4,250,000. Total losses estimated, $15,000,000.

PROUD MOTHERS OF TRIPLETS.

One in Long Island City and Another in West Astbury Park.

Mr. William McKay, of 175 East seventh-street, Long Island City, has just presented his husband with a bouncing set of triplets.

They are all girls and have been named Kathleen, Leah and Annie. Each one tipped the scale at almost exactly seven pounds. There was not an ounce difference between them.

Both the mother and babies are doing well. Mr. and Mrs. McKay were married last October.

Another set of triplets was born on Sunday at West Astbury Park. Their mother is Mrs. Jean Barnes, of Frazerden, N. J. They are all girls.

Another set of triplets was born three days ago at a great place for triplets, Asbury Park. Three colored babies were born there last week, and both sets will figure in the coming baby show.

Mrs. Della T. S. Farnell at Home.

BUENOS AIRES, N. J., July 12.—Mrs. Della T. S. Farnell, mother of the late Charles Stewart Park, died here on a late train last night. She was accompanied by Miss Della Farnell, her grand daughter.

He Was a Waiting Luggage Store.

Isaac Colchery, of 10 Huger Place, was held this morning in the Essex Market Court on a charge of violating the Excise law. He was found in a full shirt and another with bottles of whiskey, which he sells at the corner of the street.

Did Willie Wait for the Doctor.

Mrs. Wagner, of 707 Seventh avenue, last night carried her three-month-old baby Augustus to Dr. De Kratt's office at 242 West Forty-second street, to have the little one treated. While waiting for the doctor the baby died in the mother's arms.

Ignatius Doiny for Governor.

St. Paul, Minn., July 12.—It is stated here that Ignatius Doiny will be nominated for Governor on the People's party ticket next Wednesday.