LAST EDITION. WHEW! BUT IT'S HOT!

Nevertheless, New York is the Coolest Place in the East.

The Hottest and Most Humid July 25th in Many Years.

Showers To-Night, but No Prospect of Relief Until Wednesday.

Sweetening New Yorkers may console themselves to-day with the reflection that New York is the coolest spot in the Union east of Kansas, excepting cities in the immediate vicinity of the upper lakes. When Farmer Dunn felt the temperate's pulse as a clock this morning he found that it was 25 degrees in Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Lynchburg, and almost everywhere else throughout the Atlantic States, while in New York it was only 78 degrees. Old Humidity, too, was getting in some fine work and registered 83 degrees at 10 o'clock. Even Farmer Dunn admitted that the next hottest 25th was in 1885, when it reached 91 degrees. On July 14 last the thermometer got up as far as 92 degrees, but old Humidity did not escort the mercury in its upward journey with as much persistency as to-day.

"By 2 o'clock this afternoon," he said to an Evening World reporter, "I expect to see the temperature go up to 92 degrees, which will make this the hottest 25th of July we have ever had. The next hottest 25th was in 1885, when it reached 91 degrees. On July 14 last the thermometer got up as far as 92 degrees, but old Humidity did not escort the mercury in its upward journey with as much persistency as to-day."

"This evening we may look for a thunder shower, but it will bring no cessation of heat."

"This morning there were showers in the East Gulf States and in the vicinity of Lake Superior."

The normal humidity is 72 degrees. The thermometer at Perry's registered 87 degrees at noon.

At 3 o'clock Perry's thermometer registered 91 degrees.
