THE BARTHOLOMEW MISSION.

Night Dispensary Established by Vanderbilt Charity.

A Balm to the Afflicted Poor Who Must Work All Day.

Within the last few weeks a charity has been established in this city which has already proved a blessing to the sick poor. It is a free night dispensary for the treatment of diseases of the eye, nose, throat and ear.

Dr. Greer, a physician of the Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, immediately steps were taken to provide for the emergency. A small house was rented on Forty-second street, near Third avenue, and a free night dispensary established. This was two years ago. The poor, who suffered from the ailments which were especially treated at the dispensary, were not slow to take advantage of the new condition of affairs. At first a few weeks it was apparent that larger quarters should be provided. The Bartholomew Mission House was then erected at 209 East Forty-second street by Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt and her son Cornelius. The new building was adequately equipped for the accommodation of the various diseases and charities connected with the church. Quarters were set apart in the new edifice for the night dispensary and every provision for carrying on the charity was furnished. Two physicians, Drs. Adams and Whiting, both specialists in diseases of the eye, nose, throat and ear, were placed in charge.

There are a number of free dispensaries in the city where the poor can receive medical and surgical attention, but they are only open during the day, and the time spent in visiting the institutions must be taken from the time when the patient is apt to be at work. This entails a loss of wages which the poor people can ill afford. The result is that in many cases diseases which might be cured at their beginning, are allowed to obtain a foothold through the inactivity of the sufferer to spare the time from labor to visit a dispensary. His fact having been called to the attention of the Rev. Dr. Greer, rector of St. Bartholomew's, a number of a thousand patients have received treatment, both medical and surgical, from 8 to 10 o'clock every evening there is a steady stream of applicants for relief, and the operating-room is a scene of constant activity. An arrangement of electric lights makes it possible to perform the most delicate operations upon the eye with as much facility as they can be done by day. Dr. Adams and Whiting are credited with some remarkable cures since they have been in charge, and share the thanks showered upon the persons whose misfortune has made it possible for the charity to exist. The appreciation felt by the poor people who have come under the care of the new institution can be better expressed than in the words of a mother who was waiting last night to have her four-year-old boy treated for an affection of the eye. Said she to an Evening World reporter: "Every night I pray for the good people who have given all the money to this charity, and I am only one of hundreds who have been benefited by the good doctors' treatment. Little I heard of their night dispensary until the treatment he has received here. "Since my husband died," she added, "I have had to work early and late to keep a roof over our heads and could never find time during the day to take my boy to a hospital. When I heard of their night dispensary, I came here immediately, and my boy's eyes are saved."

The wedding of the belle of Essex street and daughter of the author of that locality will be celebrated tonight at 45 Vienna Hill, Lexington avenue and sixty-eighth street, and the white east side, which until recently bore the proud title of "De Ate District," is in a flutter.

MATILDA SMITH, the tall, slender, graceful and really pretty daughter of the "Silver Dollar" Smith, is to become the wife of Isidor Dreyfus, the Essex Market Court reporter.

ISIDOR DREYFUS. There are not two more popular young folks in their circle, if there were ever a more popular Alderman than the man who saved his gorgeous Essex street saloon with silver dollars, and thus earned the soubriquet which has been the talisman of his success, politically, socially and otherwise, whether he was a Republican or a Democrat.

They met by chance, Isidor and the fair Matilda, and their courtship is a love romance of the purest water.
