

PECK'S HEAD IN THE BASKET.

Gov. Flower Makes Some Important Appointments.

Republican Kickers Beaten in Their County Reorganization.

The man who said "I told you so," referring to the appointment made by Gov. Flower yesterday, was much in evidence this morning at all political centres, telling people that he knew there was no break between the Governor and Senator Hill. The Senator still had his hands on the machine, and it was working fine.

To the readers of "The Evening World" the appointment of Hill men is no surprise. It was stated in the paper Dec. 11 last, on the authority of one who knew that none but Hill men would be appointed by Gov. Flower.

The chief appointments made yesterday was that of Frederick Schrauba, of Lowell, Lewis County, to succeed Joseph K. Hiram as County Commissioner. Schrauba is a friend of Senator Hill.

Michael Richard, who will succeed himself as Railroad Commissioner, is a trustee of Senator Hill and an ally of Murphy. The appointment which gives the most general satisfaction to Democrats, however, is that of Thomas J. Dowling, of Albany, as Labor Statistics Commissioner, in place of Charles F. Peck.

The story that the appointments are in the nature of a hostile demonstration towards Mr. Cleveland is pronounced silly, even by Mr. Cleveland's friends. Mr. Cleveland, they say, has nothing to do with filling State offices, and did not expect recognition of his followers in the distribution of offices by the Governor.

He had a conference with Secretary of State Rice, at the Hotel Normandie. He would not discuss Gov. Flower's appointments or politics in any way. The programme of the Republican machine managers in the organization of the party's county committee was carried out without a break.

The other officers of the General Committee elected were: Louis McLean, First Vice-President; Thomas L. Hamilton, Second Vice-President; William H. Bellamy, Recording Secretary; Edward M. Morgan, Reading Secretary; Alexander Campbell, Treasurer; Charles H. Wheeler, Sergeant-at-Arms.

President Smith, in a speech referring to the recent defection of Republicans who went over to Tammany Hall, said: "We have just got rid of the gangrene, the dead matter of the party, by lopping them off into Tammany Hall."

ON A DISSECTING TABLE.

Thomas Collins' Sister Found Her Corpse Just in Time.

The body of Thomas Collins, a competitive cricketer, who died in Harlem Hospital, Dec. 27, from the results of exposure, and which was removed from the dissecting table in 12-1/2 days, was found yesterday, just as the students were about to operate upon it. It will be given a Christian burial.

The Emma relative never replied to the notice, and after forty-eight hours an autopsy was held, and then the body went to the morgue. It lay there all day, awaiting a claimant, and then, under the name of "John Doe," was placed on the dissecting table.

Three days ago this sister learned, accidentally, of her brother's death, and visited the morgue, and was horrified to learn the facts. But, with the aid of a Warden of Harlem, she got the body and took it home. She said she had a feeling that for the fact that she had been buried in Potter's Field two weeks ago.

HIS DOG BIT OFF MAY'S FINGER.

James Corrigan Is Arraigned for Harboring the Brute.

Justice Voorhis Is Unable to Give May Any Redress. James Corrigan, a carpenter, of 179 West Thirtieth street, was arraigned before Justice Voorhis at Jefferson Market Court this morning, charged with harboring and protecting his bulldog, after the latter had mangled and assaulted George D. May, of 26 West Twenty-ninth street, on Wednesday.

While passing No. 8 seventh avenue Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. May's carriage, the dog made a jump for my dog and fastened his teeth into the poor little creature's neck. I tried to separate the dogs, when Mr. Corrigan's dog merely turned upon me, and in the twinkling of an eye had his fangs fastened to my middle finger. I coughed and yelled and punched, but the brute did not let go. He held on to that finger, until he had bitten off the tip.

"And all this while," continued Mr. May, "that man Corrigan was looking on and laughing as if his sister would split. And afterwards, when the bulldog dropped off my finger, he picked it up, and I called him away, and dragging him into a house, slammed the door in my face. That was the last I saw of him."

"Well," asked Justice Voorhis, "what do you want Justice to do?" "I want you to punish that dog," said Mr. May. "I want you to punish that dog," said Mr. May. "I want you to punish that dog," said Mr. May.

Diagnosed on Jan. 18, dog bite, removal of bone, removal of portion of exterior of hand, Jan. 19, cellulitis. "That means, sir, that I am a very sick man, and all on account of that dog's bite," spoke up Mr. Corrigan. "I am very sorry indeed that this accident has befallen Mr. May, but I really was not responsible for it, and although I dragged my dog away after the attack, it was only to prevent a recurrence of it."

"I think, under the circumstances," said Justice Voorhis, "I shall have to discharge Mr. Corrigan."

"Good heavens, Judge," cried Mr. May, "how could you do that? I don't mean to say that I have absolutely no remedy left for my lost finger. I only mean that you have no criminal remedy. You may sue Mr. Corrigan in a civil court for such damages as you consider yourself entitled to."

"But the dog," interposed Mr. May, "can't I even have the satisfaction of seeing him put to death. Why is he not being put to death?" "Well, that is a terrible question," said Mr. May, "but he was hunted from the Justice's presence to make room for another case."

The remains were buried beside those of Charles Kemble, the father of the dead woman. The funeral was attended by many well-known actors, actresses and authors.

ILLINOIS CASH BOOKS GONE.

Containing Insurance and Banking Department Accounts.

Gen. Fayer, the Lost Incumbent, to Be Sued for Their Recovery. SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 20.—It was announced today that cash books of the Illinois State Bank, containing accounts of the insurance and banking departments, were lost by the cashier of the bank, and the loss is estimated at $100,000.

Mr. Cora took possession of the office Jan. 11, and the books were found to be missing. Mr. Fayer, cashier of the insurance department, said the books were in the safe for two days.

Mr. Fayer is now here, but the papers will not be returned to him until he has been examined by the past officers who have been summoned to the office under the laws of the State.

When asked the object of her trip to Boston she replied: "I am sorry to say it was to get what we could. Mr. Hall told me that if I would make the trip with her she would pay me for my fare."

ARCHITECTS IN COUNCIL.

Map of City Hall Park to Be Prepared for Them.

The Sub-committee of the Municipal Building Commission had another conference today. Prof. W. R. Ware, Jr., of the University of Michigan, who has been named as advisory counsel to the Commission, signified his formal acceptance.

A map of City Hall Park will be prepared and submitted to the architects to guide them in preparing the advertisement for plans.

"DOC" BLISS'S TRIAL.

Mrs. Byrne Placed on the Stand as a Witness.

The trial of Dr. George Bliss, commonly known as "Doc Bliss," on a charge of kidnapping Mrs. Byrne into the country, was resumed before Judge Fitzgerald and a jury in Room 111 of Federal Court at 11:45 this morning.

Bliss was caught with a number of others in a raid made by Federal office detectives on "the house" at 425 St. Nicholas avenue last November. Among the goods mentioned was a search warrant, issued at 1890, which authorized a search for Dr. Bliss and a woman named Mrs. Byrne.

The day the search was made Bliss and Mrs. Byrne were in the store and were supposed to be assisting in the sale of goods. Bliss was arrested and taken to the police station, where he was held for a number of days.

The same day she saw Bliss in the cloak room of the Hotel St. Nicholas. She was with Mr. and Mrs. Hall, and saw Mrs. Hall place a bundle under her coat and into the store. She did not know what was contained, and never saw a seal or tag on the bundle.

When asked the object of her trip to Boston she replied: "I am sorry to say it was to get what we could. Mr. Hall told me that if I would make the trip with her she would pay me for my fare."

BARONESS BLANC'S DEBTS.

Sworn for Examination in Supplementary Proceedings To-Day.

The Baroness Blanc was sworn to-day in supplementary proceedings on a judgment for $12,078 obtained against her by Robert L. Stanton.

Mrs. Blanc allowed judgment to be entered against her for $12,078. The judgment is for a demand note which she made Dec. 15, 1892, to the order of G. Harry Lester, an actor, for $12,000. The note was indorsed by Lester, who turned it over to Mr. Stanton.

The Baroness took the oath this morning in Supreme Court chambers before Justice Patterson.

FULFILLED HIS THREAT.

Truckman Taylor Watched His Chance to Hang Himself.

Coroner Messenger will hold an inquest in the case of Boss Truckman Isaac Taylor, who hanged himself with a window cord to the balustrade in the hallway of his house, 24 West Thirty-first street, yesterday, in accordance with a previous threat.

Taylor was fifty-four years old, and during his twenty years' business in trucking had accumulated considerable property. Of late, however, it is said that he was forced to sell a share in his business, and this seemed to make him despondent.

His wife and daughter were not particularly alarmed over his threats to kill himself, because of their frequency. Yesterday he again said he would take his life, and would wait until a clock.

He was seen by his daughter when he was at a cafe-shop at 134 Third street, yesterday, and arrested Henry Schmidt, the proprietor of the balustrade, then threw himself over the rail.

The coroner found him dangling, and before a physician could arrive Taylor was dead.
