MADMAN SUBDUED.

Policeman Has a Terrible Fight with Warren McAuley.

Thrown Downstairs Three Times While Attempting an Arrest.

Mrs. McAuley Cruelly Beaten Before Her Husband is Captured.

Policeman Hugh McLaughlin, of the lower Fulton street police station, in Brooklyn, had a fierce fight today with a man who is supposed to be insane.

Shortly after 5 o'clock McLaughlin heard a woman calling for help. The cries came from the apartments of Warren McAuley, on the fourth floor of a tenement at 110 Prospect street. McLaughlin found Mrs. McAuley lying on the floor, her husband standing over her.

Blood was streaming from an ugly wound across her scalp. She implored the officer to save her.

No sooner did McAuley catch sight of the policeman than he let his wife, and grabbing a chair made a fierce onslaught upon the officer. He dealt the officer a violent blow on the head, which sent him reeling down the stairs.

McLaughlin returned to the upper landing, and by a quick movement snatched the policeman from the floor and dropped him over the railing.

A carpet nail filled with coal was thrown after him and narrowly missed hitting him. Mrs. McAuley continued to scream, and McLaughlin, fearing she might be killed, went up the third time.

After another struggle, during which he was cut on the head with an iron bar, he succeeded in overpowering his antagonist and with the assistance of several officers who had been summoned by the neighbors, McAuley was taken to the station house and locked up.

Mrs. McAuley says her husband has been twice confined to the Hospital Insane Asylum. He was released about seven months ago. Yesterday he drank heavily, and she thinks his mind became unbalanced.

TIMMONS DIDN'T PROSECUTE.

His Wife and Young Edgerton Discharged This Morning.

The Handicap Is the Feature Early Betting.

Any one who can find fault with the programme at Gutterbach today must be hard to please. Every one of the six events is interesting, and gives promise of furnishing the best racing seen at Gutterbach for weeks.

A six-and-a-half furlong handicap in the feature and Lester, Little Fred, Kerry Gow, Virginia, Greenwich, Detroit and St. James are among those named.

An equally interesting race will be the third, at a mile and a sixteenth. In this are entered St. George, L. Panway, McCurry, Allan Hans, Laura S. Sorrento and Xenophon.

The three-year-olds include Misery, Carmine, Heads or Tails, Panzer, Earnest and Helen, and they should furnish a pretty contest.

The finding of Mrs. Timmons and Edgerton together under such questionable circumstances was the result of the efforts of the husband to strengthen the evidence against his wife in the suit for divorce pending in the Brooklyn courts.

Timmons is well known at the Winter tracks as a thorough race aficionado and he formerly owned a string of cracks and was very successful on the turf. He married Miss Edgerton in 1891, and took his bride to live at 741 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn.

Three months had passed Timmons discovered that he had caused to doubt his wife's loyalty to her marriage vows. He employed detectives to shadow her movements and by the hawkshaws that Mrs. Timmons was unfaithful.

The detectives reported implicated George F. Ahrens, of Ahrens, Overton, Rodenack & Co., shoe manufacturers, of this city, and also a man named John J. O'Brien, who had an office in the Occident Building.

Timmons brought a suit for divorce in July of last year, and after a long and bitter fight, the court granted the divorce in January of this year.

Timmons had an intimate friend of Timmons for four years, and the husband brought suit for divorce in July of last year, and after a long and bitter fight, the court granted the divorce in January of this year.

POINTERS ON THE RACES.

Grand Good Programme at North Bergen This Afternoon.

The fate of the big freight carrier, Narcosis, is still a mystery, and the day is not yet without any news from her. It is believed that she has gone to the bottom but more definite news is being awaited.

Two vessels arrived from European ports today, the Servia from Liverpool and the French liner La Bretagne from Havre. The report got about that the Servia had sighted the missing White Star ship, but this proved to be false. The Servia was on a regular route and was not expected to be in the vicinity of the missing ship.

At the office of the White Star line it is still believed that the Narcosis has met with an accident, and that she will eventually turn up all right. A glimmer of hope is afforded in the fact that two other vessels, the St. Enoch and the Italy, are some days overdue, and there is a possibility that they may be towing the Narcosis.

Again, the Narcosis may have made for the Azores, and as communication with those islands is very irregular it is not thought likely that her arrival there could have been reported to this time.

The state of the sea on the Atlantic coast is very rough, and it is believed that the Narcosis was unable to make port for thirty days after the catastrophe had occurred.

Among the many guesses which have been ventured by experienced maritime men of the city, it is believed that the Narcosis was driven to the Azores by the steamship Missouri was not known for thirty days after the catastrophe had occurred.

They Threaten to Storm the Palace and Seat Hamid.

LONDON, March 4.—Albin said, Sultan of Zanzibar, is dead.

No sooner was it known that the Sultan was dead than his son, Sultan Hamid, gained admittance to the palace by a back entrance, evidently with the intention of claiming the throne in defiance of British authority.

Kaid called the port of the palace to be barred and inside preparations to defend himself against the British. He was also very strongly built for defense.

Gen. Mathew, acting in the absence of Sir G. A. Portal, now on his way to Uganda as British Commissioner, took a prompt and vigorous course.

Proceeding to the palace with a strong force of troops he demanded that the gates be opened, otherwise the palace would be carried by storm.

Kaid was dismayed by the resolute attitude of the British, who were supported by the native authorities generally, and he saw no prospect of success if he should challenge a conflict.

Many of the natives sympathized with Kaid on account of British opposition to the slave trade, and for other reasons, but they did not dare to come out openly in defiance of the British.

Kaid and those who had sided with him concluded to fight, and the doors of the palace were thrown open and the troops admitted.

Kaid was taken prisoner from the palace under a guard of soldiers, and Hamid, who has been the designated heir to the throne, and recognized as such by the British, was proclaimed as Sultan, or Seyid, and installed in authority under the British protectorate.

Albin said, Sultan of Zanzibar, is dead.

He was born in 1832 and was a member of the former Sultan, Khalifa and Burghash. He succeeded to the throne on the death of his father in 1880.

His reign was eventful, he having in 1880 accepted a British protectorate over his kingdom, and in 1882 he had to flee to the coast of Africa, which he had to govern for a short time, and he had to flee to the coast of Africa, which he had to govern for a short time, and he had to flee to the coast of Africa, which he had to govern for a short time.
