TUGBOAT ENGINEER DROWNED

Cronk Knocked Overboard by Collision in the Atlantic Basin.

Vosburgh Crashed Into the Wright, Almost Upsetting Her.

At 6.30 o'clock this morning the tugboats F. O. Vosburgh and George W. Wright were moving out of the Gap in Atlantic basin, with the Wright in the lead. Capt. David Henderson, of the Wright, blew his whistle as a signal to the Vosburgh, which was not understood, and the Vosburgh crashed into the Wright, striking her amidships and careening her to one side. Engineer John Cronk and his fireman, whose name could not be learned, were sitting on the rail of the Wright when the collision threw them both into the water. Cronk sank immediately and was drowned, and the fireman was picked up by the tug H. S. Nichols, and taken ashore. He went to his home without any information to the police.

The Wright was damaged somewhat and was tied up to her dock for repairs. The Vosburgh continued on her trip. The Vosburgh, which was commanded by Capt. Frank Cutter, is owned by Michael Moran, of 14 South street, and the Wright, which had Capt. David Henderson at the wheel, by B. F. Stebbins, of 100 West 12th street.

Cronk was about twenty-seven years old, and had been an engineer for five years. He lived at Fort Montgomery, N. Y., and it is said he was married only a few weeks ago. He was an able and efficient and very popular among his associates.

The Vosburgh seems to be very unpopular with the waterfront. Last winter she collided with a City Department scow in Gravesend Bay and was sunk. It cost the owner a large sum to raise her.

Capt. Henderson also has figured in a collision a few weeks ago while in command of the tug James A. Garfield, he crashed into the freight boat Anna, of Farrover of Providence. Both boats were somewhat damaged.

ARRESTED IN COURT.

Richardson Was a Complainant, but Got Quarrelsome.

A big colored man found his way into the corridor near the pens in Jefferson Market Police Court today. Policeman Woods was on duty, and asked him what he wanted. The colored man's reply did not satisfy the officer, and he ordered the intruder out.

The man refused to go and threatened to wipe the floor up with him. Woods claimed, so he placed the man under arrest and arraigned him before Judge Hogan.

The prisoner gave the name of William Richardson, of 122 West Twenty-fourth street. He said he was arrested because he had a quarrel with a colored man, who he said he knew the man to be a notorious character and one who could not be relied upon to interpret truthfully.

As a result, Dr. Charles Singleton, a Christian Chinaman who practices medicine in Brooklyn, was substituted as the collector for service when the collector arrived. Dr. Singleton is one of the arrested in the East of the collector and the Gary law, and has advised Chinamen not to register, declaring the law unconstitutional.

MISTAKEN FOR A BURGLAR.

Butler Borrowed a Ladder to Get Into His Own House.

John J. Butler, a young man, living at 228 West One Hundred and Twentieth street, going home at 3 o'clock this morning, discovered that he had lost his latch-key.

His window on the second floor was open, however, and, not feeling daunted, he went across the street, where a bull-dog barked at the intruder, but he rowed a ladder in the dark, carried it across, and standing it up against his home, opened to clamber up and into his own window.

He had been in his room but a moment when the window was darkened by the figure of another man. He demanded to know the man's name, and the intruder, a husky fellow, said: "I just thought I'd come up and help you to do the job. It's an easy job to crack."

Butler tried to convince the maker of this friendly offer that he was not a burglar, but the stranger knew him and knew his window, whereat Butler tackled the intruder. There was a brief struggle and then the would-be assistant burglar tumbled to the sidewalk fifteen feet below.

He wasn't much hurt, and picking himself up, started to run. Butler hauled down the ladder and gave chase. The chase was exciting till the ladder fell into the arms of Patrolman Mulligan, of 100 West One Hundred and Twentieth street square.

Butler came up and narrated the story of his recent experience. The intruder was taken to the police station, where he was held for a few days, and then was released.

CHINESE PUGILISTS FINED.

They Had a Rough and Tumble Fight Over an Unpaid Debt.

Lee Hong and Wing Gee, two Chinese laundrymen, were arraigned in the Tombs Police Court this morning by Policeman Kehoe, of the Sixth Precinct. The policeman found them fighting in Pell street last night, rolling over each other on the street.

Wing Gee told Judge Martin that in June of last year Lee Hong borrowed $25 from him, and he had paid him back. They met last night and had a fight over the non-payment of the $25.

They were fined $5 each.

KRUX AND THE JAEGERERS GONE.

Mysterious Disappearance of Two Men and One Woman.

A strange case of disappearance was reported at Police headquarters today by Mrs. Anna Krux, who lives at 227 East Fifteenth street. She called at the Central Office to ask the authorities to search for her husband, Franz, who has been missing since last Monday under strange circumstances.

In connection with his disappearance, Fritz Jaeger also a machinist, and his wife, who were friends of Krux, are also missing.

Franz Krux is a machinist forty-two years old who came to this country two years ago from Germany with his wife and two children. In the machine shop where he obtained employment he became acquainted with Fritz Jaeger also a machinist.

Jaeger is a young man and was married a little over a year ago, his wife being a young Englishwoman.

They lived recently at 300 East One Hundred and Eleventh street. Krux used to visit Jaeger frequently and spent much of his time at Jaeger's house. For a few weeks past his wife noticed that he seemed to be dissatisfied at home.

He went out at night than formerly, saying that he was going to have a good time. Monday last he left home in the morning, saying he was going to work and she has not seen him since. Krux was told that her husband had not been to work since Saturday.

Mrs. Krux then went to where the Jaegers had lived and found that Mrs. Jaeger had run away with her husband. She said that Jaeger himself had moved away.

The neighbors told her that Jaeger's wife packed up her things one day during the absence of her husband and then went away.

When Jaeger came home at night he found his wife and child in a room. Krux was stated that she was tired of the life she was leading with Jaeger, and that she had made up her mind to leave him.

WYOMING IN KANSAS MINES.

Two Explosions Fail to Shatter a Stockade Wagon Gate.

LITCHFIELD, Kan., July 27.—Two dynamite bombs were exploded at the corner of the Kansas and Texas Company's property between 5 and 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The roar of the explosion aroused the guards within the stockade of shaft 22, and all hands were called to defend the property.

Little damage was done by the bombs, however. The negroes were thrown into panic by the explosions, and many of them begged to be sent to their Alabama homes. The bombs tore great holes in the ground, but did not shatter the gate.

When the guards reached the gate the minecarts had fled.

The Kansas and Texas served notice on the strikers to leave their houses at daybreak to-day. One Italian striker was drowned here yesterday while bathing in the strip pit pond.

LITCHFIELD, Kan., July 27.—A big mass meeting of the striking miners from all over this district was held here last evening. The strikers seemed confident and delivered much hope from the assurances they have received from Missouri, that the miners there will come to the aid of the miners here.

There were no disturbances to-day. Today is the time set for the election of one striker to represent the miners from their homes at Litchfield, and trouble is feared.

COLORADO MEN MUST MOVE ON.

Kansas City Can't Provide for the Unemployed from the Silver State.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 27.—Three freight trains arrived here last night bringing 215 men, who claim to be from Colorado and who have been thrown out of work by the closing down of various industries there. They were in box cars and the railway men let them ride free.

One hundred of them in a body went to the Central Police Station and asked Chief Spears for a night's lodging and a hot meal. He said that the city could do nothing for them, as it was having trouble in getting its own poor, and that they would have to get out of town within four hours in the same manner they had come.

THOMAS FOR COLLECTOR? SAYS SIGNATURE IS HIS.

W. H. Aspinwall Testifies in Favor of His Brother Lloyd.

Lloyd Aspinwall was arraigned for examination in the Yorkville Police Court this morning for a hearing on the charge of having forged his brother's name to a note for $2,400, given to Banker Delahunt, attorney for the Law-Office of the Metropolitan, to cover checks given in payment of debts. The checks were protested.

HE ESCAPED FROM THE POLICE.

Little Willie Gromlich Was Held as a Lost Boy.

Willie Gromlich's mother is almost heart-broken. He disappeared Monday, after falling into the hands of the police, and she has been unable to get any trace of him since.

Willie is seven years old, and his home is at 350 East Forty-sixth street. Last Monday the Sunday-school in Fifteenth street, which Willie attended, gave the scholars an excursion to Bay Ridge. Willie and his little brother, Charlie, had permission from their mother to accompany the excursionists, but through some misunderstanding they arrived too late at the starting place and were left behind.

Charlie returned home and told his mother that Willie had said he would follow the excursionists to the City Hall, where he thought he might find the excursion party before it started. Willie reached the City Hall all right, but there he became confused, and finally was taken to the Church street police station as a "lost boy."

About noon Mrs. Gromlich was notified by the police that Willie had been found at 10 o'clock, and the Sergeant, she says, told an officer to bring in the boy from the back room.

Presently the officer returned and reported that the boy was not there. The Sergeant was amazed. He ordered a search, but it was fruitless. The boy could not be found.

Mrs. Gromlich waited until 5 o'clock, and then she went home, but the police would inform her as soon as Willie was found. In the evening an officer called to inquire whether the boy had returned, but he had no information himself to give.

She thought Willie had become frightened at finding himself in the police station, and that he was waiting for her to come and take him home. She was dressed in a sailor suit, and she was afraid that the police would see her and might lock her up.

W. H. Aspinwall put on the stand and swore that the signature on the note was that of his brother, W. H. Aspinwall, and that the note was one of the many notes that he had signed for his brother to pay bills contracted in the sugar business.

LIVES WITH THREE WIVES.

Sculptor De Lucca's Peculiar Matrimonial Arrangements.

"De Lucca's three wives make so much noise quarrelling that I cannot sleep, and I want them kept quiet," remarked a well-dressed Italian woman to Clerk Eberth, in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day.

Questioning revealed a rather remarkable fact. Some months ago Joseph Constantino De Lucca, a sculptor, was arrested in Mulberry street, on a charge of bigamy, and taken to Williamsburg. When the case first came up three women appeared to prosecute the sculptor, all of them claiming to have been married to him. De Lucca was first married in Italy about ten years ago to Constantina Salento, but he afterwards tired of her and took two other wives, the last being a fourteen-year-old girl.

Shortly after the trial there was brought all three of his wives to Williamsburg, and found homes for them. While he was absent from New York on business the three wives were introduced to one another, and the warrants for De Lucca's arrest followed.

The case was not tried at the time, however, and on subsequent occasions the women were brought to court to prosecute. Why this was so was not learned until to-day.

De Lucca and his three wives have apartments in the house of Havenmeyer street, where they live. De Lucca is a man who has been named as Mrs. Mantaloni's third wife.

Each wife has a room to herself, and if they kept quiet no one could object, but they persist in fighting all the time and disturb the neighbors.

"Occasionally they unite in a combined attack upon De Lucca, and as he is a man of high standing in the community, it is something to be feared."

Mrs. Mantaloni thought De Lucca could be pushed for bigamy, but was told that nothing could be done unless some one of his wives objected.

BROOKS IS A CRIPPLE.

Despite His Affliction He Was Able to Beat His Wife.

Frederick Brooks, employed as a bartender at Coney Island, was held for examination in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day on a charge of beating his wife.

Mrs. Brooks, who lives at 53 North Tenth street, says that about a week ago Brooks deserted his family, after having beaten her into insensibility and thrown her downstairs. Besides that she added he had not supported her.

EXTRA.

2 O'CLOCK. EIGHT PAGES.

OPENS WITH A RALLY.

The galleries of the Stock Exchange were crowded with spectators when the gong sounded for the opening, and business commenced with much less excitement than had been anticipated, although a considerable degree of feverishness was manifested.

The opening was rather irregular, some of the leading stocks showing a slight decline and others an advance over last night's closing prices, while the rest were practically unchanged.

Transactions were not so brisk as the market showed considerable activity. Shortly after the opening there was a rally all along the line of from 1/2 to 1 1/2 per cent. from the first prices, which was unaccountably weak.

This stock closed yesterday at 121, and the gong sounded at 120. Subsequently the price dropped to 121, to the surprise of some of the operators. The market was explained. The rest of the market declined in sympathy, but began to pick up after the close of the morning, and advanced again to 120. The fluctuations in this stock were rapid, and before 11 o'clock it was at 121.

Haute was a feature of the market. Yesterday the stock sold down to 70 and closed at 71. The first sale this morning was made at the latter figure, but from this point onward the price advanced rapidly. The first sale this morning was made at 88. Soon after 90 was bid and 100 asked.

It will be remembered that it was the sharp decline in this stock which caused the failure yesterday of H. I. Nicholas & Co. of 110 Wall street. The stock was secured chiefly by Evansville as collateral. The banks, becoming alarmed at the sudden rise in the price of the stock, their loans and forced both firms to close.

In the rest of the list Chicago Gas advanced 2 points, to 91 1/2; Big Four declined 1/2 point, to 113 1/2; Erie declined 1/2 point, to 71 1/2; Rock Island declined 1/2 point, to 61 1/2; General Electric 3 points, to 41 1/2; Illinois Central 1/2 point, to 101 1/2; Manhattan 3 1/2 points, to 104 1/2; Erie preferred 3 points, to 18; Omaha 1 1/2 points, to 28 1/2; during the first hour of trading.

The Governors of the Stock Exchange have decided to close the market for a number of brokers and suggested to the brokers that they should be more careful in their dealing, and to prevent any further disaster.

CHINESE SMUGGLING.

Scharf Convinced that Havana Is Being Made a Station.

Expect to Produce Evidence of Customs Officers' Collusion.

He Writes Another Letter to Collector Hendricks.

Collector Hendricks's office in the Custom-House has seldom presented a more animated scene than this morning.

The unusual stir was the result of the sensation caused by the charges of fraud in the admission of Chinese into the port, and the broad and almost universal anticipation of hearing of some new evidence of alleged fraud and perhaps a specific charge of bribery.

Special Treasury Agent Scharf, who caused the report to be submitted to Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle that the Chinese Exclusion act was being openly, flagrantly and frequently violated with the connivance of the New York customs officials, and that the almost-every chestnut was being smuggled into the country through this port by the wholesale, was at his desk as early as 8 o'clock.

Upstairs in the Collector's office were a group of Chinamen who were to be examined as to whether they had a right to be admitted under the law into the country. They were five of the six Chinamen who arrived on the Ward line steamer Simen, from Havana, on Tuesday, and who said they were students.

Mr. Scharf believed that their passports are fraudulent, and yesterday objected to the interpreter provided by the Customs. He said that he had a right to be heard, and that he had a right to be heard, and that he had a right to be heard.

As a result, Dr. Charles Singleton, a Christian Chinaman who practices medicine in Brooklyn, was substituted as the collector for service when the collector arrived. Dr. Singleton is one of the arrested in the East of the collector and the Gary law, and has advised Chinamen not to register, declaring the law unconstitutional.

Mr. Scharf began the work of the day by writing the collector a letter, in which he referred to four Chinamen detained at Montreal: "Hou, Francis Hendricks, Collector of Customs."

AFTER TORRE'S $7,000.

A Young Woman Says He Had Another Name and She's His Daughter.

BALTIMORE, July 27.—John Torre, a shoemaker, who lived in Baltimore for twenty years, died last October. In his will, which was made in December, 1891, he gave all his property to his friend, August Krenien.

Miss Maria Handbuch, of Germany, has advanced a claim to Torre's money, on the ground that she is his daughter, and that his real name was Hermann Handbuch. It is claimed that Torre, as Hermann Handbuch, was married in Philadelphia in 1891 to a woman named Victoria.

The administrators produced testimony to show that Torre was considered a single man by his friends in Baltimore, and that he never spoke of having a wife. Seven thousand dollars is the amount at issue.
