LAST EDITION. WASHINGTON'S DAY.

Patriotic Citizens Are Celebrating It in Various Ways. Volunteer Firemen Gather in Brooklyn to Parade.

Many Banquets and Entertainments to Be Held To-Night.

Washington's Birthday is being observed by all patriotic New Yorkers in a quiet way. It is a day of rest for the toilers, a day of quiet in the busy marts of the city.

The starry flag floats from the peaks of the city hall, Post-office, Custom-House and a thousand private buildings.

Parades and Receptions. Many parades, drills, meetings, social gatherings, receptions, banquets and balls have been planned for the day and evening to give expression to the patriotic feelings of the participants.

Old Glory was raised, in accordance with immemorial custom, at Battery Park at sunrise. The raising of the great-grandson of Capt. John Van Arsdale, the Revolutionary hero, performed that honorable service, surrounded by representatives of several organizations, and a 100-gun salute was fired at the same moment.

At breakfast, Capt. John G. Norman, supported by the Washington County Guard, the two associations organized in 1792 and 1812, gave the Stars and Stripes to the crisp breeze and the bright February sun.

Firemen Assemble. The Exempt Firemen's Association of the city of New York made the earliest manifestation of the day in the streets of New York.

There were ninety-five of the New York firemen, who gathered in the plaza in City Hall Park, where it was the cynosure of all eyes.

Among the New York exempt were their President, Commissioner of Jurors, Henry B. Brown, and his associates.

Their uniform is similar to that of the New York men, a tan-colored overcoat, blue trousers, red shirt and cap.

Workingmen's School. The Workingmen's School, 106 West Fifty-fourth street, celebrated the day with its annual inspection and exercises at 11 o'clock.

JURY DID NOT AGREE. NO BAIL FOR WIMAN.

The Ex-Banker Spent the Night in the Tombs.

After a conference lasting seventeen hours the jury disagreed in the case of Joseph T. Blaut, charged with perjury, in falsely swearing to the June, 1893, quarterly report of the Madison Square Bank.

The twelve men selected to pass judgment on the ex-bank President filed into the Court of Oyer and Terminer at 11:15 this forenoon.

Justice Barrett then said that under the circumstances, the fact that they had been in consultation so long without arriving at a conclusion, and the probability that they would not, he could do nothing but discharge them.

He made a mistake and delivered the coal to Miss Leona Berger, who lives at 112 West 112th street.

Erastus Wiman, the autocrat of Staten Island, passed a cheerless day in the Tombs. For the first time in his life, he finds himself behind prison bars.

His arrest yesterday afternoon was a great surprise to the community, although ever since Mr. Wiman's failure a year ago there have been rumors that matters were not altogether satisfactory between him and his former partner, R. G. Dun.

According to R. G. Dun & Co., these are only a sample of the business methods which Mr. Wiman pursued during his connection with the firm, and when he was separated from it, over a year ago, the amount of his shortage was $25,000.

The firm has evidently kept the matter hanging over Mr. Wiman's head for the last year, in the expectation that he might reimburse them for the money which he had appropriated, but having become tired of waiting, the members have finally resolved to turn the matter over to the criminal courts.

JEALOUS POTTER MARTIN TRIES TO MURDER HIS WIFE.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 22.—Erza Martin, a potter, thirty-five years old, attempted to murder his wife, Clara, twenty-eight years old, at 2 o'clock this morning, and then gashed himself in the throat so severely that he died soon after. The couple had been quarrelling and Martin jumped out of bed, and, seizing a butcher knife, stabbed his wife in the cheek.

SHE IS STILL UNIDENTIFIED.

No Claim for the Body of the Grand Union Suicide.

"D. J." in Her Handkerchief and a Milliner's Name in Her Hat.

Nobody had come up to noon to-day to claim the body of the woman who showed her name last night at the Grand Union Hotel as Mrs. Jennie Miner, of 2300 Conn. ave., and who was afterwards removed, suffering from laudanum poisoning, to Bellevue Hospital, where she died.

The hospital authorities are inclined to believe that the name Miner is fictitious, although a card with that name engraved upon it was found in the woman's pocket. There are some initials in ink on a corner of a handkerchief found among the suicide's effects.

After a long scrutiny, Deputy Warden Hickard pronounced these initials to be "D. J."

It is principally on account of this that he based his belief that the name Miner had been assumed. In further support of this theory it has been learned that there is no person of the name of Miner in Shelton, Conn., although there are several prominent persons of that name in West Ansonia, Conn., and in Shelton, Conn.

The only other marks on the woman's clothing were the date Jan. 24, 1894, stamped with red ink in her shoes, and the name of a milliner in gilt letters in the side of her hat.

In her pockets were also found a silver watch valued at $50 and a small key. The woman went to the Grand Union Hotel late last night. Apparently she had arrived by the local express from the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, which got here at 10 o'clock.

She was assigned to room No. 101, Hall an hour afterwards. Watchman McManus discovered her in the room at 11 o'clock, when she was found in a position that prevailed many years ago.

Who was the woman? Suicide Hyles Clutched Her Photograph in His Hand.

LAST EDITION. MOEHLING A SUICIDE.

Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co.'s Old Bookkeeper Shoots Himself.

His Dead Body Found on a Knoll in Central Park.

He Had Few Friends and No Cause for His Act Is Known.

Charles Moehling, for many years a bookkeeper for the well-known banking firm of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., 46 West street, committed suicide this morning in Central Park by shooting himself in the right temple with a revolver.

Park Policeman John F. McKenna shortly after 11 o'clock found Moehling's body on a knoll near Eighty-first street, on the west side.

An open letter lay on the snow near the body. It read as follows: My name is Charles E. Moehling, and I occupy a furnished room in the house of Dr. H. W. Muller, 123 East Tenth street. I desire that my remains be taken to Undertaker Charles Diehl's shop in Essex street.

McKenna was notified by Policeman Morgan and the body removed to the Morgue.

Dr. R. W. Muller told an "Evening World" reporter that Moehling had roomed at his house for the last two and a half years, and that during all that time Moehling had not exchanged twenty words with the other residents in the house.

He was the most reticent and retiring of men. Beyond "Good morning" or "Good evening," he never noticed any one.

Dr. Muller could give no definite reason why Moehling should have killed himself, as he always seemed to have plenty of money and kept the most regular hours until about three weeks ago, when he went in and out at other than his usual hours.

Dr. Muller said he thought Moehling had possibly lost his position, which would account for his irregularity.

Dr. Muller said he supposed Moehling was single. No friends ever called on him.

From a card received at the house it was known that Moehling was a member of the Afion Society.

Mrs. Muller said that Moehling left his room rent every Monday morning on his bureau, and until yesterday he had never appeared to her all the time he was in the house.

Then he said he would like another towel in his room.

He was always polite, and every Christmas made the servants a handsome present.

Moehling was so shy and retiring, Mrs. Muller said, that she believed he was a woman-hater.

Moehling was a highly educated and refined man about fifty years of age and quite portly.

He had a taste for literature, and was a contributor to local German papers on banking and political subjects.

The only acquaintances he is believed to have had in New York were the Laue Brothers, gun dealers, 75 Chambers street.

DEPEW NOT ILL.

Another of Those Philadelphia Rumors Circulated.

There was a rumor from Philadelphia this morning that Chauncey M. Depew was seriously ill from the grip. Only a few days ago a report was sent out from Philadelphia that Mr. Depew had been assassinated.

Both of these reports are evidently originating these rumors concerning Dr. Depew for a purpose.

At Dr. Depew's residence, 6 West Fifty-fourth street, this morning, an "Evening World" reporter was informed that Mr. Depew was not suffering from any illness, and was out of the city to-day celebrating a Washington's birthday oration in an interior town.
