Furgeson and His Gang Said to Have Levied Tribute on Harbor Men.

HERE ARE THE DOCUMENTS.

Checks and Receipts with the Names of the Boss and His Man Church on Them.

BEFORE THE LEGISLATURE.

Kings County Grand Jury Expected to Indict the Rapacious Sheik of New Utrecht.

It is not unlikely that Cornelius Furgeson, Pooh Bah of New Utrecht, will be indicted by the Kings County Grand Jury.

This evidence will go to explain how Furgeson has become enormously wealthy. If the Legislature abolishes the office of State Shore Inspector many masters and pilots will have little hesitation in coming forward and telling how they have paid tribute for years to the Boss of New Utrecht.

Obviously the money paid by masters and pilots to Furgeson and his men was players, who can be found at all hours of the day or night by masters and pilots who desire permits in low garbages found on duty at Fort Hamilton, and masters and pilots experience great difficulty in securing the necessary permits.

After a tussle captain has started down the bay without a permit from Inspector Furgeson, he stops at the wharf at Fort Hamilton, where he knows the tug whistle for one of the Deputy State Inspectors to bring him a permit.

his boat and the crews in tow for three or four hours, and after a vain search on shore for some of Furgeson's men the captain is disgusted and steams out to sea without Furgeson's permit.

This action gives a golden opportunity to Boss Furgeson. He always knows the moment a boat goes to sea without his permit, and he never loses a chance in coming forward and telling how they have paid tribute for years to the Boss of New Utrecht.

With a suggestion that the case be compromised. Consultations are held, and the owner of the vessel finally pays an amount of $200 to L'Hommedieu.

The third week of "The Evening World's" Free Food Commission opened with a storm of sleet and rain. The streets were thickly laden with slush and pedestrians were attendant with such discomfort as could be expected.

Hunger drove them out of their cheerless homes, and hundreds of poor men, women and children who braved it all and plodded down to 90 Murray street from wretched homes, some of them miles away.

Next came a scrubby man from Roosevelt street, who had been in the city for many years. He had a wife and two little ones. He had a job as a porter in a hotel, but he was laid up with rheumatism.

While one set of workers lumps live in filling baskets and bags with supplies, another set of workers are busy on the track the elastic sacks of vegetables sent in by the dealers for to-morrow's market.

There had been twenty-four alarms of fire during the previous twenty-four hours, and the city was a scene of confusion.

Charles Kramer, a baker, thirty-three years old, living at 109 Ninth avenue, was held for trial when arrested before Justice Ryan at Justice Market Court this morning on the charge of beating his wife.

There were a lot of boys playing on the sidewalk in front of the police station. They were playing a game of tag.

The above picture is an exact reproduction of a valuable oil painting which was presented to the artist by a collector in a gentleman's private gallery. It is a weird and powerful story. The vessel is rocking upon the rocks. The wind and waves are so deafening that the sound of the oars cannot be heard.

The action of the head of a family who assumed to know the nature of an epidemic disease has been the result through which the small-pox has been spread in the tenement at West Thirty-sixth street, according to the statement of Dr. Doty, of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases, this morning.

Three weeks ago one of the Schneiders children became ill. Schneider was advised to consult a physician, as the symptoms resembled small-pox.

Later, two other children became ill. Franz Mosner, of 54 West Fourth street, who is Schneider's father, went to visit his sick grandchildren, and on Saturday morning he was removed to North Brother Island. The health officials could not ascertain where he caught the disease.

One of the Schneider children, without the care of a physician, began to recover. Mrs. Schrup, who is Schneider's mother, Saturday Mrs. Schrup and her ten-month-old baby were both ill, and the mother was confined to bed.

Both men took a bundle of clothing, and went to the police station. Both men were arrested and committed them to stand. One of the burglars threw his bundle into the officer's face and then both darted away in different directions.
