

SUTHERLAND SURRENDERS.

be placed into the custody of the sheriff until he is again brought into court. Justice Gaylor said that he was not disposed to depart from the rule to take no part in the Gravesend cases while they are before the court, because of his connection with them before he was elected to a seat on the bench. He would adjourn the hearing until the next day, when another justice would hold court.

The entire proceedings occupied but a few minutes, and at the conclusion Sutherland was hustled out of court and up to Raymond Street Jail.

The charges made in the new indictments constitute felonies. The indictments are for the following offenses: Eight Indictments for Felony. 1. Procuring a false census of votes in the Second District of Gravesend. 2. Same offense in the First District. 3. Procuring the election inspectors to make a false statement of the votes cast in the Second District. 4. Same offense in the First District. 5. Concealing the registry lists in the First District. 6. Same offense in the Second District. 7. Same offense in the First District. 8. Inducing the election inspectors not to enter a number of names on the lists so as to conceal evidence of fraud.

Now that Sutherland is back, it is said that the prosecuting authorities will make some agreement with the extent of the punishment he is to receive. It was rumored this morning that Sutherland had agreed to plead guilty to the first indictment, which charges him with procuring a false census of the votes cast in the second district.

May Get Seven Years. The punishment for this crime is seven years. Some interesting developments are expected with respect to the case to the bar to-morrow. Mr. Shepard, it is said, will make a complete statement as to what has happened in the Gravesend cases, and will give an elaborate exposure of the whole fraud containing much new matter which has never before been brought to light.

He will also render a statement of the condition of the election in the present time. Sutherland's intention to return has been carefully followed by his former friends. His lawyer, Foster L. Backus, did not hear that he had been freed until after he had been up to court, and was on his way to jail.

The fact that eight new indictments had been found against Sutherland was told in "The Evening World" last Wednesday, and the rumor that he would be brought back was recorded on Friday.

After Sutherland arrived at the jail this morning, Sheriff Butler, on the other hand, sent word to all inquirers that he had no statement to make. According to Sheriff Butler, on the afternoon that he was found guilty of misdemeanor, Sutherland went straight to Montreal, where he had been hiding ever since.

When he arrived in Canada he consulted a well-known Montreal lawyer who told him he could not be extradited for any offense against the election laws. Since then he has been in Montreal frequently with lawyers, and had been assured that it would be impossible for the Kings County authorities to bring him back to Brooklyn, even though he were indicted.

Friends Advised Not to Return. As soon as it became known that the Grand Jury was considering other cases against Sutherland, his friends wrote to him and advised him to return. On Saturday, a week ago, Robert J. Sutherland, the fugitive's brother, called on Deputy Attorney General Shepard, it is said, and opened negotiations for Sutherland's return.

What the terms were are not known. Robert Sutherland, immediately after the interview, rushed to Canada. After he reached there he was met by Sheriff Butler and Sheriff Butler told the fugitive would return to Brooklyn this morning.

The letter stated that "Kenny" would arrive at the Supreme Court at 10 o'clock this morning and arranged for Sheriff Butler to meet the fugitive in front of the court. Neither did the fugitive return to Brooklyn this morning, but he returned his bondmen would lose money if they failed to return to the county. This money will be refunded.

Was There a Compromise Made? It was stated on good authority this afternoon that Sutherland's bondmen, Furey and James Given, for the past week known that negotiations for the fugitive's return were in progress, and they were also acquainted with the alleged agreement made by Mr. Shepard with Sutherland's brother Robert.

It was also stated on the same authority that Sutherland's return on the condition that his sentence was not to exceed three years in Sing Sing.

A Fugitive Over Two Months. Sutherland had been a fugitive from justice since March 14 last, when he was convicted, on his second trial within two weeks, of opening a safe and stealing maliciously arresting and detaining the Gaylor copists sent to Gravesend the night of Nov. 10.

A previous trial had resulted, March 1, in a disagreement of the jury, which was freely allowed to go home, and had been "fixed."

Sutherland, however, was promptly brought to bar again on the same charge March 12, and two days later was convicted. He was not, however, brought to bar in the verdict, and on the representation of Lawyer Foster L. Backus that he had no money yet, he was committed to the State Prison.

But, like the man in the song, Sutherland never made back. March 16 was fixed as the day for his sentence, and on his not appearing then his bail of $2,000 was declared forfeited.

His bondmen were given until March 16 to produce the money, but they failed to do so, and the fugitive show up then, but, in spite of his absence, Justice Brown sentenced him to one year in the State Prison, with a $500 fine, the extreme penalty for his offense.

Sutherland was reported to have been variously in and around New York and Brooklyn, in the interior of the State, and in the waters of the State, and even in Cuba.

The most generally credited rumor, however, was that he had fled to Canada, and there he might have remained indefinitely had not the indicted him for felony, an extradition offense, one which may yet land him in Sing Sing Prison, close proximity to his old "boss," Convict 119-3, John Y. McKane.

TO INCREASE WATER SUPPLY. Brooklyn Aldermen Ask to Appropriate $2,497,000. The City Works Commissioner White, of Brooklyn, to-day sent a communication to the Board of Aldermen asking for an appropriation of $2,497,000 to be used in extending the Brooklyn water works beyond Massapequa, L. I.

BRUCCINI CHASED WITH A TROLLEY CAR.

Purse Snatcher Mack Caught Through a Clerk's Quick Wit.

The Thief Was Escaping When Electric Aid Was Summoned.

John Mack, of 280 Water street, this city, was held in the Ewen Street Court, Westchester, this morning on a charge of highway robbery. Mack was one of the passengers on the ferry-boat which left Tenth street for Greenpoint at 7.30 this morning. When the boat was made fast to the slip he snatched a pocketbook from the hand of pretty Kate Kluiber, of 377 Eighth street, this city, and ran down Greenpoint avenue. Half a dozen men saw the act and they took up the chase. Others joined in and soon fully one hundred people were in pursuit.

Mack was outstripping his pursuers when a young clerk, who was half a block behind the thief, jumped on a trolley car going in the same direction. Getting on the front platform, he told the motorman about the thief. More power was given to the car and Mack was quickly overhauled. He tried to double on his tracks, but the clerk caught him and took him to the Westchester house. The clerk declined to give evidence, saying he did not care to mix in police matters.

Miss Kluiber, who had followed the two men set upon him, and who went to the Ewen Street Court, where she preferred a charge against the prisoner.

PLUCKY LEE SING.

Appears Against His Robber Acquaintance with a Badly Cut Throat.

Pedro Martello was held for grand larceny in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, this morning, while Pietro Scardoni was held for assault in the second degree. The complaint in both cases was Lee Sing, employed in the laundry of Hop Kee, 278 North Second street.

Yesterday afternoon Martello, Scardoni and another man entered the place where Lee Sing was at work alone. "Fake" fight, and while the Chinaman was endeavoring to quiet them Martello and Scardoni, who were concealed behind the counter and secured $10 in bills from the cash drawer, which he had just taken out of his pocket.

Just as he got the money Lee Sing saw that he was being robbed and he rushed to the door. He was gashed in the neck by a razor. One cut was almost a inch long and nearly circled the neck near the jugular vein.

The Chinaman fell fainting to the floor. Martello and Scardoni, who were in the room, dragged him down, too. By this time, as the neighborhood had been alerted, a policeman came running in flight. Martello was held and turned over to Detectives Marks and Kelly, who took him to the hospital.

Late last night the two detectives arrested Scardoni at his home, 15 Fillmore place, and took him to the police house with a valve in his hand, and he was held for a few minutes later. Scardoni would have been released, but the remarkable feature of the case is the excellent testimony of the witness, Lee Sing. His throat was gashed in half a dozen places, but he refused to give up the names of his robbers. He was sewed up, and was in court this morning, with nothing to show he had been hurt, except a bandage around his neck.

Accompanied by her husband and a party of friends, she went to the seaside yesterday afternoon for a good time, and along towards midnight La Man began to dance with a partner. Her husband, who was in the company, saw her stumble and fell overboard.

Her husband, who was in the company, saw her stumble and fell overboard. He jumped in to rescue her. His strength gave out, and he was rescued by several men in a rowboat.

NO DIVORCE FOR NEWCOMBS.

Counter Suits Dismissed for Insufficient Evidence.

Justice Pratt, of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning handed down a decision in which he refuses decrees of divorce to Mrs. Carrie Newcomb or her husband, Wellington E. Newcomb, in their cross-suits.

The Newcombs were married in August, 1882, at Forest City. For some years they lived in Buffalo, where Newcomb's father is a well-known merchant. Mrs. Newcomb's father, who is now dead, was intimate with a woman at Barney Pawcett's road-house, near Buffalo.

Newcomb alleged that his wife was an inmate of a disreputable house at 38 West 12th street, and that she had a child by one of the men who frequented the place. Judge Pratt, in his opinion, says that the evidence produced in each suit was insufficient.

RODERICK REINSTATED.

Hall of Records Watchman Was Removed by Republicans.

John D. Broderick, who was a watchman in the Hall of Records, Brooklyn, until removed recently by the Republican Board of Supervisors, was ordered to be reinstated by a writ of mandamus issued this morning by Supreme Court Justice Gaylor.

Broderick secured the writ on Memorial Day, when he was reinstated by the Board of Supervisors. He was reinstated by the Board of Supervisors.

Brooklyn Brevities. Acting Captain Clayton, of the Coney Island police, was arrested early this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

THE BEST LIVE PICTURE YET.

And It Doesn't Happen to Be a Nude Either.

Sousa's Band at the Madison Square Garden—Theatrical Gossip.

The third installment of "Living Pictures" offered to New Yorkers was presented at the Imperial Music Hall last night to an invited audience. The tableaux were on the line already made familiar by Jarr Kilgani at the Garden Theatre and Mr. Hammerstein at Koster & Bial's, but there wasn't as much positive nudity in them as there has been in the others, and neither was there so much art in the anatomical revelations.

One would expect that a set of Imperial living pictures would be sufficiently shocking at some point or other to rouse an Imperial audience, but there is nothing in the exposition of the female form, as it is exposed at the Imperial, to shock anybody. The figures are carefully shown with one exception, and that is "The Slave Dealer," where a girl who must be under treatment for obesity recklessly exhibits her avoidpups. Strange to say, the hit of the evening was made by a picture that had no women in it. It was a battle scene entitled "Custer's Charge," and for all the shortcomings of the other, it lasted fully five minutes, and was not only a masterpiece of scenic art, but a second time. It is by all odds the best living picture ever seen in New York.
