EMERGENCY HOSPITAL

Chambers Street Staff Moves Into Its New Quarters.

Luxurious Establishment at Hudson and Jay Streets.

Considered the Finest Institution of Its Kind in the World.

The curious old hospital in Chambers street which has become familiar to the public under the simple title of "Chambers Street Hospital," is a thing of the past.

The New York Relief Society, under whose auspices the institution has so long been conducted, has moved to new quarters at the northwest corner of Hudson and Jay streets. Here has been built what is probably the best appointed emergency hospital in the world. It would seem impossible that science and wealth could combine to create anything more thoroughly up to date than this new house for the reception of cases of human mishap and affliction demanding immediate attention.

The building is of brick and terra-cotta, five stories high, modern in style and square in effect. A stoop with double stairs reaches the first floor, where are the offices and dispensary rooms. The latter feature is a pronounced reform, for instead of the little dingy room, where here the patients had to stand, there is here a great tiled hall, with benches enough to accommodate the sick and wounded of an army after battle.

A reporter for "The Evening World" made a tour of the building to-day under the guidance of Superintendent Laker, who was most assiduous and courteous.

In the basement are receiving wards, one of which is to be devoted to surgical cases. Here there is an electric heating appliance which will keep the patients warm and comfortable.

The building is of brick and terra-cotta, five stories high, modern in style and square in effect. A stoop with double stairs reaches the first floor, where are the offices and dispensary rooms. The latter feature is a pronounced reform, for instead of the little dingy room, where here the patients had to stand, there is here a great tiled hall, with benches enough to accommodate the sick and wounded of an army after battle.

The wards are spacious, airy and well lighted. The floor is of polished wood, and the walls are of a light color. The furniture is of the latest design, and the equipment is of the best.

The entire machinery of the house is run by electricity, and there are some wonderful kitchen and laundry are on the fifth or top floor, and the equipment of both is perfect, if not marvellous. In the latter the washing machine takes its motive power and the smoothing iron is worked by electricity.

There is a large electric elevator in the center of the house, and a ventilating arrangement with fans in the ceiling, which insure a steady inflow of fresh air into and the expulsion of obnoxious odors from all the wards.

In the rear are the stables, as completely fitted with every modern horse engine house. Three ambulances and sufficient horses will be kept on hand.

The patients who are transferred from the old to the new hospital, there were only eight in number, as the patients in the old hospital are able to stand the removal.

The dispensary was also opened in the new place and the old hospital, but in the middle of a business block, with a big fruit stand on one hand and a toy store on the other, was left to the prey of traffic.

The old hospital was formerly a police station and was turned over to the Relief Society years ago by the city. It has never been adequate for the purposes of an emergency hospital.

MADE PRISONERS BY JAPS.

Two Americans Forebly Taken from a French Steamer.

(By Associated Press.) YOKOHAMA, Nov. 7.—The American passengers who were made prisoners at Kobe by the Japanese, who seized the French steamship Sydney, from Marseille for this port, on suspicion that the captain and the French Consul had contraband of war on board, transhipped from the British steamship Gaelic, from San Francisco, are Messrs. Howie and Browne, while the Chinese passenger is Cham Tan Moore. It is stated that the latter was recently interpreter to the Chinese Legation at Washington.

The commander of the Sydney was informed that if he gave up his passengers he might proceed. He refused to do so and a strong force of armed Japanese marines was sent on board the steamship. In spite of the protest of the captain and the French Consul the Japanese seized the passengers mentioned and conveyed them as prisoners on board a Japanese warship.

FOX-HUNTING AT MONTAUK.

Where Reynard in Pish and Blood is Run and Aniseed Bags Are at a Discount.

DEACON WHITE FIRED BUT MISSED.

It is Declared He Had Once Been Driven up a Tree by a Wounded Fox and Was Excusably Nervous.

SOUTHAMPTON, Nov. 6.—The fox-hunters who went on to Montauk Point with the avowed intention of exterminating Reynard are home again. They are alive and well, and so are most of the foxes at the Point. The excitement of election day does not detract from interest in the yarns told by the hunters of their experiences in the chase.

The Montauk fox is the cutest of his very foxy tribe. He is large and strong. He can run like the wind, and fight like a badger when driven to bay. Few dogs, on even terms, can outrun him. Unlike foxes in other parts of the island near the habitations of man, a Montauk fox, once started, never stops to look about him until he has eluded the chase. The only way here is to surround the fox and then stop him with a well-directed charge of shot when he attempts to run through the line. It is estimated that not one in ten of the foxes started was captured.

The boys had several days of exciting sport. After the second day James Hill-dreth and Charles Howell reported they had no disposition to hog all the fun, so they went home. The others who remained, after seeing their companions well off on the hunt, turned their attention to the business in hand. The first consideration of a fox-hunter in this part of the country is a good foundation pack and home-made sausage to hunt on. These once well stowed, they are ready for whatever comes their way.

Egbert King, one of the Life-Saving men, accompanied the hunters on their last day's outing. Stratton's Swamp was the point chosen. Howden, the keeper of the life-saving station, was driven out by a pack of wild dogs. After awhile he got off and walked. He led the hounds to the west.

During the afternoon several more foxes were started, but this was the only one captured. After the hunt the right thing to do is to visit the light-house. The cureative, and emergency, was performed, and at the end, Goulinot, in command of the grenadiers—started.

NEW HALL FOR SOUTH ORANGE. The Village Trustees Erecting a Building of the German Half-Timber Style.

The constantly increasing business of the village of South Orange has induced its Village Trustees to take steps towards the erection of a village hall. Roster & Wright, of New York, are the architects. Mr. Wright is a resident of South Orange, and was once a trustee.

He has carried out his ideas, gained from a close observation of village affairs, in his plans for the village hall. The total cost, including the site, will amount to $25,000, and public buildings, bearing interest at 4 1/2 per cent, especially in the case of the village hall, is in the most central part of the village, at the junction of Scotland street and South range avenue.

The German style of half timber architecture has been closely followed, especially in the case of the tower, a thousand pound bell will be placed, as well as a clock. The first story is of molar brick, black and tan, a flinty nature, rendering it impervious to moisture. The second story is of a favorable contrast to the many buildings of red brick in the village.

The upper part of the composition of plaster with a reddish orange tint, and the woodwork in the gables and tower will be stained a dark brown. The general effect of the building will be orange and black. The tower will be in natural copper will form the dome, which is surmounted by the bell. The slate will be used in the roof, while the flashings of the roof will be of copper.

In bronze letters over the central entrance the entrance will be "Village Hall." A private entrance for the trustees will be provided in the lower part of the building. The main entrance will be on the second floor, on the right of the tower is to be given up to the Fire Department. In addition to the truck-room there will be another for a meeting-room, and these can both be used in any way.
