NO MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT.

George Gould Denies Reports Concerning the Wedding of His Sister.

BRIDE AND BRIDEGROOM SAIL

Count and Countess De Castellane Leave on the New York for Europe.

CROWD GATHERS ON THE PIER.

The Young Couple May Afterwards Take a Trip Around the World.

Mr. George Gould, when seen at his office in the Western Union Building this morning, said in a tone which showed evidence of suppressed anger:

"Not one word which has been printed about marriage settlements in connection with the wedding of my sister to the Count Castellane has any foundation whatsoever. The subject was never touched upon by either family. Any one who made such a statement has made an absolutely false one."

"The story about a settlement of Marquis de Castellane's personal obligations by our family, is as scurrilous as it is ridiculous."

A great crowd formed a long line on the American pier this morning to see the Count and Countess de Castellane depart for Europe.

It was a quiet, decent sort of crowd, but it was probably kept in check by the appearance of the squad of unusually well-built policemen who dotted the wharf from the street entrance to the gangway.

By 10 o'clock the crowd became not only formidable, but anxious, and the rumor was circulated that the Count and his bride intended to board the steamship New York from a tug which would steal quietly into the dock.

Early in the morning forty-two pieces of the bridal couple's baggage were deposited on the wharf, and for lack of something better to look at the curious ones gazed at the trunks and boxes.

It was about ten minutes after 10 o'clock when C. Raoul Duval, the Count's best friend, came down the pier and made a dash for the Count's deck stairs and 4 and 6 was a suspicious looking box which bore his name as the sender, and from the shape and the stamp which had been burned into the wood there is little danger of the Count suffering for want of liquid refreshment.

A few minutes later there was a sudden rush on the part of the crowd, as it formed itself into a Turk's head about a cutie little French brougham which had suddenly drawn up at the saloon gangway.

The big roundabout on guard opened the door, covered the Count from shoulders to heels with a fur-lined military coat, with a light spring derby sitting on his bonce curly, and with his feet encased in black leather of patent leathers, unpeddled out briskly.

With a low bow he helped the Count to alight, and the Count, who was as when he left for Irvington, and a new coat of shiny astrakhan, which came within a few feet of the Count's head, which was surmounted by a cape of the same material.

She wore one solitary white rose and a pair of black gloves. She made her way alone up the gangway, while the Count stood on the pier looking about him, like a man who is expecting something or some one.

The Countess toiled up the steep incline with her hand on the arm of a woman who was waiting to get a look at her. She managed to get up to the Count, who had followed her, stood on the deck and looked at her with a look that said "Evening World" reporter he said:

"From Southampton we shall go direct to London, where we shall remain three or four days. Then we shall go to Paris, where we may perhaps stay a week or more, and from there we shall go on a tour around the world. Further than that I cannot say."

Up in the bridal stateroom there were some flowers; a beautiful basket of two hundred American Beauty roses from Helen Gould; a great cluster of lilies of the valley from Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould; and some orchids from George Gould.

Half an hour before the vessel sailed all the Goulds came down to the pier farewell.

The young couple had the satisfaction of sailing in good company. Among those who occupied cabins were Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who are going abroad to kill time between New and the Newport season; Mr. and Mrs. William Butler Duncan, on their annual pilgrimage to relatives in England and Scotland; Lady Henry Somerset, who is going home after her attempt to reform America; Miss Frances E. Willard, who accompanied her husband, who, it is said, will try bicycling on English roads; W. Bourke Cockran, and Oronoyaketa, a Hindu priest with the members of a Parisian club, who were some time ago in the interests of his religion.

None of these, however, was at the wedding.

The bride party occupied suite 4 and 6 on the promenade deck, and were accompanied by a valet and a maid.

The Count and the Countess returned from the Gould house at Irvington yesterday at 6 o'clock. Immediately upon receiving the train at the Grand Central Depot, they were driven to the Waldorf, where the bridal apartments had been engaged in advance.

The Marquis and the Marquise, with their younger son Jean, will sail for Havre on Saturday.

Fansie Ward and Mother Belittish Claims on Browns.

Fansie Ward, the Casino girl who sued Clarence Brown for $100,000 for alleged breach of promise, and Mrs. John Buchanan, her mother, who sued Brown for $50,000 for alleged deprivation of her daughter's services, have withdrawn their suits.

The defendant's counsel says no compromise was made.

Young Brown is a son of Vice-Commodore Edward M. Brown, of the New York Yacht Club.

The child was found to be a twin to the one brought from Delancey street. The three children are evidently from the same house, and the police are making every effort to find the midwife who abandoned them.

ALL FROM THE SAME PLACE.

Midwife Believed to Have Abandoned the Three Children.

The sending of three foundlings, all of whom are believed to have come from the same house, to Police Headquarters since Monday tends the police to think that a midwife on the east side abandoned the children.

The first of the three foundlings was picked up in an Orchard street, and the second in the same street, and the third about the Delancey street foundling.

The third child was found to be a twin to the one brought from Delancey street. The three children are evidently from the same house, and the police are making every effort to find the midwife who abandoned them.

"KEEP AN EYE ON CORA."

Advice for Mrs. Kohn, Who Says Kohn is About to Marry Again.

Arnie Kohn, of 1066 Flushing avenue, asked Justice Watson, in the Ewen Street Police Court, Brooklyn, to-day how she could prevent her husband, Peter, from committing bigamy.

Two weeks ago he left her, she declared, and now she hears that he is about to marry Cora, a beauty, of 216 Stags street. The wedding, she says, is set for Easter.

"The best thing you can do," said Justice Watson, "is to keep an eye on the matter of the Parthian, and if you see some time ago in the interests of his religion."

None of these, however, was at the wedding.

The bride party occupied suite 4 and 6 on the promenade deck, and were accompanied by a valet and a maid.

WEDDED AT NOON.

Miss Caroline Beatrice Post Becomes Mrs. Regis Henri Post.

Miss Caroline Beatrice Post and Regis Henri Post were married to-day. The ceremony took place at noon, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Post, 4 East 84th street.

There were no bridesmaids. The maid of honor was Nathalie Post, sister of the bride, and the bridegroom's best man was James Parish Lee. Wright Post and Frank Otto, Jr., were ushers.

SUES HER PHYSICIAN.

Mrs. Nelvert Charges Dr. Abraham with Falsely Ejecting Her.

Rebecca Nelvert has brought a suit in the City Court for $2,000 damages against Dr. Robert Abraham, of 133 Clinton street.

Mrs. Nelvert alleges that when she visited the doctor in November last, he told her she should go to the hospital, and that she should be ejected from his office.

The child was found to be a twin to the one brought from Delancey street. The three children are evidently from the same house, and the police are making every effort to find the midwife who abandoned them.

FELL IN A SWOON.

When the case of Policeman Edward Rothchild, of the East Fifth street station, who is accused of failing to support the child of which he is alleged to be the father, was called this morning at Police Headquarters, the complainant, Lena Nelvert, fainted.

She is a good-looking girl, twenty years of age.

When the scene occurred she was facing Commissioner Andrews, who was sitting on a bench, and the Commissioner to a big policeman who stood near the girl.

Chief Judge Daly, in the Court of Common Pleas, to-day granted a decree of absolute divorce to Eleanor Graham from her husband, John L. Graham.

The Grahams were married in Honolulu, Hawaii, in 1892. They came to this country several years ago and separated Dec. 20, 1892.

The complainant alleges that last year he ruined the young woman and a child with his wife, and that she was driven to a madhouse by the doctor's treatment.

Justice Patterson has under consideration an application to appoint an open commission to take testimony in the case.

Appreciated Her Brother.

Mrs. May Jones, of 245 Christopher street, was the complainant in a divorce suit this morning against her brother, Francis J. McKelvey, a waiter in a Broadway restaurant.

She says that on Feb. 8 he came home and she was sitting at the table. He was drunk and she was crying. He was shouting and she was screaming.

BRUCHHAUSEN SUEO.

Convent Professor Charged by His Wife with Cruelty.

Says He Drove Her Into the Street Late in the Night.

He Denies It, and Says His Wife's Friends Caused the Trouble.

Mrs. Eleanor Bruchhausen applied to Justice Patterson, in Supreme Court, alimony pending the trial of an action which she has brought for separation from her husband, Prof. Carl Bruchhausen, of the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

Mrs. Bruchhausen charges her husband with cruelty and abandonment. They were married in Brooklyn on Aug. 22, 1891. One morning about 2 o'clock, Mrs. Bruchhausen alleges, the Professor drove her from her house, at 141 St. Mark's avenue, Brooklyn. She says she was in her bath-feet and very scantily clad at the time.

On another occasion, it is charged, Prof. Bruchhausen drew a pistol on his wife, seized her by the throat and almost choked her. He is also accused of using vile and indecent language to her.

DID NOT LOVE HIM.

Leopold Unger Says His Wife Has Married Two Other Men.

Leopold Unger, residing at 75 Avenue B, has begun a suit in the Supreme Court to secure an absolute divorce from his wife, Louisa. Unger is a travelling salesman for a wholesale house on Broadway.

He alleges he was married in the year 1874, in Hungary, Austria. He has one child, a daughter, who is now married. He is in the possession of his wife. About ten years ago he left Hungary and came to America for the purpose of seeking his fortune.

He was here but a short time when, he says, he received a letter from his wife in which she stated that she had married another man. He says that she had married Max Hirschowitz, a man who is now in America and married Max Klein.

Unger says that he has since divorced Hirschowitz and Klein, and that he is now free to marry another woman.

SERIOUS ALLEGATIONS BROUGHT AGAINST MANY SPECIALISTS.

Dr. Copeland Declares the Dreaded "Electrode," with Red-Hot Wires and Irons and Corrosive-Acid Sprays in Catarrh Treatment, to Be an Unpardonable Barbarism.

It is a baffling, peculiar, for some defect of vision, should wash the eyes with carbolic acid, causing both torture followed by total blindness, or if an ear doctor, for some defect of hearing, should perform an operation on the ears, causing both torture followed by total deafness, it would be called frightful miscalculation, a wicked tampering with delicate and precious human senses.

The ground of accusation in these instances would be that the pain thus inflicted was unnecessary and useless.
