

MARIA BARBERI BREAKS DOWN.

Arouses the Tombs with Her Screams and Hysterical Sobbing.

TEARS BROUGHT HER RELIEF.

Until This Morning She Had Been Like a Statue After Hearing Her Death Verdict.

HER LIFE MAY YET BE SAVED.

A Strong Wave of Sympathy Has Been Aroused by Her Sad Condition.

Maria Barberi, the Italian girl convicted of murdering her lover, has broken down under the strain which has been her lot since her conviction. Until late last night it was feared that the girl had gone mad, so strange had been her actions. From the moment she entered the courtroom to stand trial she never ceased weeping. Tears rolled down her cheeks unceasingly and served to make her an object of pity to all. The moment the verdict which condemned her to death in the electric chair was pronounced, however, the whole character of the girl changed. The weeping stopped, the tears refused to fall and she seemed as if carved of stone. She was taken back to the Tombs prison, there to await the day of sentence, but she seemed to be unconscious of everything. Mrs. Stone, the matron, spoke to her and tried to cheer her up, but the girl did not understand her. Last night, however, the change came. Maria retired to rest at 9.30 o'clock, but she did not sleep. She tossed about from side to side for nearly two hours, then she bounded up and began to scream. Instantly there was a commotion in the Tombs and Matron Stone was called in. By that time the girl was weeping and the hot tears were rolling down her cheeks. "Thank God," said the matron. "Her reason will be saved." So the night wore on. The girl cried all the time, and at 1.30 o'clock this morning she was pacing about her cell without having slept a moment during the night. She kept crying unceasingly that she was going to be killed. Later the matron brought the girl's breakfast and tried to induce her to eat it. Maria did try, but at the first spoonful she turned away. She could not partake of it. Evidence was taken as to the finding of the bodies, and then the jury adjourned until to-day. Only a few days have elapsed since her conviction, yet already a wave of sympathy has spread in every direction. Not only has her case been discussed among lawyers from its legal aspect, but it is the theme of conversation everywhere. It is contended by many that she should never be sent to the electric chair. La Contessa D. di Brazza Savorgnan, who lives at the Hotel Savoy, called at the Tombs this morning and asked permission to see Maria. The Countess was permitted to see the girl, who at the time was with her mother and with Father Ferretti, from the Church of the Transfiguration. The Countess put her arm around Maria Barberi's waist and spoke soothingly to her, and Maria laid her head on the Countess's shoulder. The titled visitor spoke encouragingly to the girl, and said she would work hard to save her life. Afterwards, when the Countess came out, she said to an "Evening World" reporter: "I am here to do what I can for this poor girl, and I can do much for her. My word of honor that within one week I can have such a petition for mercy presented to Gov. Morton as will astonish him. I will have on the petition the names of every one of the so-called 400; I will have on it bankers and merchants and lawyers, and the names of the noblest and foremost women of this city and the State. I have seen such cases among my people, and I know that that girl thought she only did right to defend her honor as she did."

THIS ROW MAY COST A LIFE.

Marrett's Skull Fractured During a Quarrel with Kehlhoeffner. As the result of a row in front of Bullinger's saloon, 246 West Thirty-second street, at 12 o'clock last night, Emil Marrett, of 23 East Twenty-ninth street, is in Roosevelt Hospital with a fractured skull and will probably die. Charles Kehlhoeffner, of 246 West Thirty-second street, who is accused of having assaulted Marrett, is in Jefferson Market prison awaiting the result of the injuries he is said to have inflicted. The row was about the quarrel last night was about. It began in the saloon and was continued on the sidewalk. Marrett was knocked down, or fell, and his head struck the curbstone. Policeman Taylor, of the West Thirty-second street station, arrested Kehlhoeffner and sent Marrett to the hospital. The prisoner denied that he was responsible for Marrett's injuries when arraigned before Justice Flanner in Jefferson Market Court this morning.

"I'LL SWING FOR THIS."

Thus Spoke Holmes, Suspected Slayer of the Pietzel Children. PHILADELPHIA, July 17.—H. H. Holmes, alias Herman Mudgett, has, according to the District Attorney, virtually confessed to the murder of the two Pietzel children, who bodies were found in the cellar of a Toronto house. It was learned to-day at the office of the District Attorney that during the two hours' interview Holmes had yesterday with three members of the District Attorney's staff he said: "I suppose I'll swing for this." This is the only remark dropped from his lips which in any way would tend to criminate him, and the District Attorney takes this as a practical admission of Holmes's guilt. His counsel says that Holmes was not in Toronto when the Pietzel children were murdered. This, he states, can be proved by Mrs. Howard, Holmes's third wife. TORONTO, July 17.—The inquest on the bodies of Ella and Nella Pietzel was opened last night. Evidence was taken as to the finding of the bodies, and then the jury adjourned until to-day. Only a few days have elapsed since her conviction, yet already a wave of sympathy has spread in every direction. Not only has her case been discussed among lawyers from its legal aspect, but it is the theme of conversation everywhere. It is contended by many that she should never be sent to the electric chair. KILLED BY M'GOWAN.

Verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the Rose Finn Inquest. Coroner Hoebner and a jury held an inquest this morning in the shooting of Rose Finn, the nineteen-year-old typewriter, who lived at 514 West Twenty-seventh street, by her lover Michael McGowan, on the morning of July 10. McGowan was brought from the Tombs to Coroner Hoebner's private office, where he met his counsel, Hugh O. Pentecost. He looked pale, and shifted about in his chair while waiting to be taken into the court-room. He would not say anything about the shooting, and did not appear to be very much interested in the work of his counsel, who was trying to get at the facts in the case. Michael Langfeldt, who lives at 223 West Fortieth street, said he heard the first shot fired by McGowan, and turning saw him fire the second. A third shot was fired, but he only heard that one. When the second shot was fired the girl fell. Detective Dolan, who arrested McGowan, and Policeman Boyle retold their stories and Deputy Coroner Huber described the wounds, the second of which penetrated the girl's brain and caused death. The verdict of the jury was that Rose Finn came to her death by a pistol shot wound in the brain at the hands of Michael McGowan.

RIOT IN A SALOON.

Ordered from a Yard, Toughs Turn on the Landlord. Samuel Spivack keeps a saloon at 115 Heister street. He has a pretty daughter, who is a great attraction. She serves drinks to customers, and increases Spivack's business. Last night the proprietor found several young fellows asleep in the back yard and ordered them out. They returned about midnight, and the proprietor again ordered them away. The men pitched into the proprietor, the latter's friends came to his assistance and a free fight followed. The men who attacked the proprietor were Conrad Luther, of 9 Bowery, and a man named Hamburger, who is said to live in a Bowery lodging-house. During the fight Samuel Wentraub, of 23 Chrystie street, was stabbed in the back of the kidney. The wound is two inches long and about an inch deep. Julius Steinman, a bartender, of 145 Orchard street, received a severe cut on his hand. Several other men were more or less injured. Two policemen, Foley, came Hamburger and Luther ran off. The policeman captured Luther, Hamburger escaped. The injured men were taken to a hospital. Weintraub's wound was so serious it will be several days before he can leave the hospital. The police sent out an alarm for Ham-

He Broke Jail and Fled.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Charles Davis, colored, wanted at Bordenstown, N. J., for attempted murder last night. When Davis came to take him last week for his prisoner he found the iron bars in his cell at Evanston, Ill., twisted and broken and Davis gone.

BELLA CARR WEPT.

But the Woman Counterfeiter's Tears Were Not Repentant.

Had Alarmed Her Pals Only to See Them All Captured.

Her Alleged Husband in Believed with Both Legs Broken.

Bella Carr, an auburn-haired woman, was the chief figure of a gang of counterfeiters arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields this morning.

She was arrested last evening at 86 Fourth avenue with Frank Carr, alias Conkey Carr; Henry Kidken, known as "Jentleman Harry," and Albert Brown, alias "Bill the Brute," by Agent G. R. Bagge, of the United States Secret Service force, and Detectives Flynn, Callaghan, Esquiritell and S. S. Bagge.

Carr, whose legs were broken in his effort to escape, was not in court. When the Carr woman came into court there were tears in her eyes and her face showed traces of crying. Her curly auburn hair was disheveled and there were dark rings below her eyes. She showed less evidence of beauty than of cunning, and when she gave a look of daggers towards Secret Service Agent Bagge it was not hard to imagine that her artful was not caused so much by repentance or regret because she had been caught. The gang was captured while the counterfeiters were actually in the process of plating counterfeit silver dollars. As the Secret Service men approached the tenement house, Bella Carr, who was looking out of the second-story window, saw them and gave the alarm to her pals. The five officers then forced the door and as it gave away they almost fell into the counterfeiters' den. Agent Bagge ran to the window and looking out saw Carr, in his bare feet and partly dressed, dashing down the fire-escape next door. Officer Esquiritell was sent after him, and when Carr saw he was pursued he broke into a stranger's apartments, dashed through the rooms into the hallway and down a flight of stairs. Then, thinking the detectives were guarding the street door, he ran to the front window and jumped thirty feet to the ground. Both his legs were broken, and he was taken to Bellevue Hospital. Bella, "Bill the Brute" and Kidken, who were captured after a hard struggle, spent the night in the Oak street station. Commissioner Shields assigned Lawyer Robert M. Waite to defend Bella Carr. Waite asked for an examination, which was set down for Monday at 2 P. M. Brown and Kidgen both waived examination and the bree were held in $5,000 bail each.

VAN NESS AGAIN ARRESTED.

Perhaps Mary Jones Will Go on His Bond a Third Time.

John K. Van Ness has again been arrested, this time in Plainfield, N. J., and the District Attorney has been notified. Assistant District Attorney Battle to-day made out requisition papers for his return to this city.

Van Ness has twice forfeited his bail bond, the last time only ten days ago. He is a lawyer, who formerly had an office at 126 Broadway. He was indicted April 12, 1893, for forgery in the second degree. He is alleged to have forged and collected $1,000 on a check given him by Dyckman Waldron, of 24 West Fortieth street, to turn over to James A. Waldron. Van Ness was arrested in March, 1893, and Mary Jones, of 28 Ninth avenue, gave bond in $2,000. Police Justice Ryan declared the bond forfeited. March 1902. He was re-arrested, and again Mary Jones went on his bond, this time for $1,000. It was this time that she declared she would only a few days ago, when the case was called for trial and Van Ness did not appear.

BURGLARS FRIGHTEN A BOY.

Threatened Him with Death if He Made an Outcry.

Special Officer Cross of the East Sixty-fifth street station, arraigned Joseph Cassin, seventeen years old, of 140 Second avenue, in Yorkville Court today on suspicion of being one of two burglars, who yesterday broke into the apartments of Mrs. Home Draotta, of 23 East Seventy-fifth street, retreating for seven-year-old son Joseph. Mrs. Draotta is a poor widow and goes out working by the day. She lives alone in a room at home alone to take care of the house.

After she left for her work yesterday morning she was alone in the room and went down to the street to play. He was there but a short time when he looked up and saw a man at his window.

He ran upstairs and at his room door he was seized by a man whom he says was Cassin, who said, "If you make an outcry I'll kill you."

The burglar then threw Joseph into the room and, with another man, got away with $200 in cash and about $50 worth of clothing.

Cross heard of the burglary before Mrs. Draotta returned home. He found little Joseph very much frightened at the way he had been handled.

The officer managed to quiet his fears and took him out on the street, where little Joseph pointed out Cassin, who was engaged at play with some boys in the neighborhood, saying: "He's one of the burglars. He threatened to kill me."

Cassin, on being arrested, denied the charge. He was taken to the station for further examination on Friday.

ROBBED HIS BENEFACTOR.

Louis Freund, an intelligent, good-looking young man, twenty-one years old, of 14 East Twenty-eighth street, was held for trial in Yorkville Court this morning on the charge of swindling his benefactor, Albert Hamburger, an umbrella dealer, of Broadway and White street, and at 709 Madison avenue. Freund is also charged with grand larceny by force. Freund is a brother of Madeline Lane, and living at 106 East Fifty-fourth street.

Freund and Hamburger have known each other for five years, but had not met for a long time.

About a week ago they met on the street. Freund did not recognize Hamburger, who at first asked him, "What's become of you?" and then said: "I thought you were dead."

Hamburger recognized his friend of former years, and fed and clothed him and gave him money for food and to pay for a furnished room.

Monday he called on Hamburger and secured three good umbrellas under pretense of selling them. He also secured three gold watches from Jordan, to whom he was introduced by Hamburger.

Freund then disappeared, and Hamburger notified the police of the East Thirty-fifth street station, who arrested him at his home last night and spent the proceeds in high living.
