

WEIRD NARRATION OF EVENTS, INVOLVING LOVE, SORcery AND THE MYSTERY OF LIFE AND DEATH.

THE JUGGLER.

My horse's head toward the township... I have spoken of the awful stillness... That song broke it like a voice from another world.

DE VERE'S DEATH SONG.

Of the impending storm which had crept... I turned toward De Vere again, and was about to speak as I saw his chest heave as he died his lungs, and high above the sullen roar of the tumbling waves upon the beach there rose the wailing, piercing note, familiar to most Australians, "Coose! Coose!"

CHAPTER VI.

"He looked at me, and a sudden pallor overcame his face as he ejaculated, 'It's Gunnery!'"

"You're wrong, my dear," said the man, "but I have seen an unexpected but timely opportunity."

"I followed his long anxious look with almost equal eagerness. It had not occurred to me before that our companions might return in quest of us or that there might be others travelling on the same road."

"I turned toward De Vere again, and was about to speak as I saw his chest heave as he died his lungs, and high above the sullen roar of the tumbling waves upon the beach there rose the wailing, piercing note, familiar to most Australians, 'Coose! Coose!'"

"It is impossible to say what I might have done in the passion of the moment, but my attention was suddenly arrested by the distant sound of tramping hoofs making their way through the bush."
