Roger Deener Warming Up.

Champs yesterday. Deys' good uns, dey is.

Davis and his men bore their honors modestly. They were all pleased, of course, but not boastful. The team seems imbued with a quiet confidence that sits well upon them.

Capt. Davis Happy.

"We'll get better, not worse," said George Davis to The Evening World reporter. "The team of mine is not a backslider. We won't win every game, but just keep tabs on our percentage column."

The weather man exchanged for the late-unlamented hoodoo came along with the boys. It was a glorious day in Sleepy Town, and when Sleepy Town gets as nearly awake as possible she isn't half bad. There was a restful feeling in the atmosphere that made a fellow from the hurly-burly of New York feel languorous content.

And the rest of the team had the manager into the summer. All the boys had their number. And the most persistent crumpler. Back at ease.

"How true," signaled Dummy Taylor, looking over my shoulder as I turned the victory crank. "But wait till I get at those Yahoohs today. I'll wake 'em up." For Dummy was slated to pitch.

Grounds in Fine Shape.

The Quakers' beautiful park never looked better. It is the most perfectly devised plant in the country. The outfield was as smooth as green velvet and the diamond perfectly aligned.

Crowd a Small One.

It seemed strange that the Philadelphia fans did not flock to the game by thousands, if only to enjoy their splendid playground and the perfect weather. But they came slowly, and not more than fifteen hundred were present an hour before the game began. This was explained by the rivalry in Slowtown between the two leagues. If anything.

COACHING PARTY IN FATAL CRASH.

Stage Crowded with Rich Philadelphians Overturned and Joseph E. Widener, Son of Millionaire, Dying from Injuries.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—A coaching party consisting of several of the most prominent young men in Philadelphia, was overturned at Fifteenth and Spring Garden streets, today, and Joseph E. Widener, thirty years old, son of P. A. B. Widener, in the fall had his skull fractured and is dying at a hospital.

Harrison K. Gayer, who was the whip, was also badly injured. The accident was caused by the wheel of the coach catching in the street car tracks.

Others in the party were Henry P. McKean, Edward B. Smith, William L. Elkins, Jr., Edward Browning, William E. Carter, E. Rittenhouse Miller, S. Megawee, W. R. Wright and George Brooks. All were more or less hurt.

The party was on the way to Pine Run Farm, the country seat of Mr. McKean.

All were in a merry mood and the bugler, who sounded "tally ho!" as the party was started, the whip apparently exercised caution, as he slowed up to make a turn.

The coach, however, swerved and the wheel catching the track, it was overturned.

All the members of the party were thrown to the street and a throng that a moment before had applauded them ran to aid those who lay unable to move.

Young Widener was unconscious and with others of the party was taken to the Hahnemann Hospital.

Messengers hurried to the Widener residence and the young clubman's wife and his father and other relatives hurried to the hospital.

Joseph Widener is the son of Peter A. B. Widener, the millionaire and traction magnate. He has been a noted patron of gentlemanly sports and has been prominent at the horse shows in this city, Philadelphia and Boston for several years.

Widener is the second son of the traction magnate. He is thirty-one years old. He married a few years ago Mrs. William P. Smith, who was Miss P. G. Gayer. Mr. Widener was never actively engaged in business. More of his time has been devoted to the breeding and exhibiting of fine horses and he has won numerous blue ribbons. He has a number of valuable horses. Edward Browning is one of the most skillful members of the Philadelphia Coaching Club in handling the ribbons.

Z. Meadler, Wright and P. McKean are both wealthy young men and expert whips. E. B. Smith is the head of the firm of E. P. Smith & Co., bankers. He is a well-known clubman and the owner of a number of valuable horses. Edward Browning is one of Philadelphia's most famous whips, as is William E. Carter, who is also a polo enthusiast.
