The Batting Order. New York. Philadelphia. Van Haltren, cf. Thomas, c. Selbach, lf. DeLoach, lb. Davis, ss. Flick, rf. Hickman, rf. Wolverson, 2b. Strang, 3b. Skagle, lf. Gansel, lb. McFarland, c. Nelson, 2b. Cross, 3b. Bowerman, c. Conn, 2b. Taylor, p. Dugglesby, p. Umpire, Mr. Nash.

It looked like old times on the Polo Grounds this afternoon. The crowd arrived early to watch the preliminary practice, and the usual comments as to the ability of the various players could be heard in all parts of the grand stand.

Youngster Phyle, who was down on the batting order with Taylor as the probable pitcher for Davis's youngsters, was shying them up to Jack Warner in front of the stand, and his every move was watched closely.

Taylor and His Hoodoo. Davis used his fingers enough that the dummy understood thus: "Please lose that hoodoo of yours. You have a whole season before you."

When the bell rang for the Giants' practice after the fans stretched as if to get a better view of the proceedings, Alec Smith batted out from the plate where "Dummy" Taylor was limbering up with Broadway Alec Smith.

They weren't at it two minutes till Davis brought the plaudits from the fans by the cleverest kind of a left-hand stop of an ugly bouncer.

Gansel's Stunts. Gansel on first then started stunts on the throw balls. He made a whole circus in himself. One-hand stops, jumps in the air and pick-ups all seemed alike to him.

Dugglesby was down on the bills to do the slab work for the Quakers. He had a bunch of funny shots on exhibition before the grandstand that promised trouble for the Davis hirelings.

First Inning. Billy Nash walked to the plate at the minute of 4 and swept the plate clean. Taylor could see it. Thomas calmly watched the ball strike the third one to Van, who gobbled it easily.

Del got two bases on the hit. Flick got that got away from Davis, and Del came home. Wolverson sent Flick to third on a hard one to Nelson, who fumbled. He tried to steal a few minutes' rest.

Del got two bases on the hit. Flick got that got away from Davis, and Del came home. Wolverson sent Flick to third on a hard one to Nelson, who fumbled.

Taylor executed a semicircle with his arm in throwing the first one at McFarland. He had two strikes on him when the Quaker hit a chance one along third, 2nd for two outs. Cross hit two fouls into the right field bleachers, both were struck under the new rule. He then hit one that got past everybody.

The special 100-yard dash for the championship of the college furnished the real sport of the morning.

Donovan, the Champions' Young Giant Pitcher, Scores His Third Consecutive Win at Beantown.

The Batting Order. Brooklyn. Boston. Davis, lf. Hamilton, cf. Keeler, rf. Tenney, lb. Sheppard, 2b. Demott, 3b. McCreery, cf. Long, ss. Farrell, 1b. Love, 3b. Daily, 2b. Collins, rf. Dahlen, ss. Barry, lf. McGuire, c. Kittredge, c. Donovan, p. Willis, p. Umpire--Mr. O'Day.

SOUTH END BALL GROUND, BOSTON, May 7.—A bright warm sun and balmy breezes greeted the Superbas to-day at Conant and Billings' "bandbox" ball park. It is one of the few days since the opening of the season on which the weather has been warm enough to make going to a ball game pleasant pastime.

"Duke" Farrell will hold down the initial bag again to-day. Manager Hanlon found a wire in his box from Joe Kelley when he came down this morning saying that the Adams of the Superbas is still suffering from a pair of badly inflamed eyes, which makes ball playing an impossibility for the present. Farrell played the bag in splendid style yesterday. He is still too heavy by twenty pounds, but he went down after the low throws like a youngster and stopped one wild toss from Dalen that was soaring many feet over his head.

Donovan to Hand 'Em Out. Billy Donovan, the boss jester of Hanlon's outfit, is slated for the slab job to-day, unless his warm-up stunts should not please Foxey Ned. The champions will probably face the tall and narrow Beantown bouncer who seems to reach half way to the plate every time he separates himself from one of the dizzy stunts that have fooled the Superba sluggers many a time and often.

Inter-League Fight Begins. "Say, Selah" yelled a bleacherite when the Hub players took the diamond for practice. They won't have enough people in here to-morrow to start a game of pinchie. To-morrow will be opening day at the American League Park and the fight between the rival organizations in this burg of beans and culture is going to be a bitter one, according to present indications. If nine fans out of ten are to be believed there will not be many people on the benches at National League Park when the clubs have conflicting dates. The twenty-five cent admission to the sun seats of the new park appeals strongly to thirty local fans. The crank whose bank roll only amounts to a twenty-five cent piece is allowed to sit on a stinky batch of bleachers in one corner of the National League lot about 20 yards away from the home plate and too far away from the diamond to find much amusement in the game. Big Crowds Expected. The attendance to-morrow is likely to be large at both parks, however, as the National League players are "housed up" and are distributing complimentary passes to the game with a lavish hand. Rumors of a shake-up in the team have been flying around since Catcher Steelman was sent to Hartford. It is said that Hanlon is not satisfied with (Continued on Sixth Page.)
