

KENNEDY STARTLES JURY BY HIS DRAMATIC BY-PLAY.

had found on the floor beside the body of the murdered woman. On cross-examination the one important point scored by Mr. Moore came after the chambermaid told Mr. Osborne the windows of the room were closed.

"It had been a warm night," said Mr. Moore, taking the witness.

Was Not Quite Sure. "Now, are you sure that the window leading to the fire-escape was closed?" "I couldn't be sure. I only opened the door and looked in. Then I gave the alarm."

James Hawkins, a former bellboy at the Grand Hotel, told of having taken a woman to room 84 at 12.20 o'clock on Aug. 15, 1898. He said he could not identify the woman from a photograph.

Daniel Bryer, a furniture handler, was with Mary Higgins when she discovered the body of Dolly Reynolds. A point not touched upon in previous trials was brought out by Attorney Moore.

"Where did Mary Higgins go after you discovered the body in Room 84?" "She went into Room 82."

"Did she pass from Room 84 into Room 82?" "The 6th door. She passed into the hall. I locked the door of Room 84 and gave her the key. She went into Room 82."

Windows Were Down. "Did you notice the windows? Were they closed?" "They were down."

"Are you sure they were down?" "I wouldn't be sure they were down all the way."

Mrs. Mary A. Brooks, the housekeeper of the Grand Hotel, described her viewing the body and her inspection of the room with Proprietor Leland.

Here Mr. Osborne craved the Court's indulgence while he sent out and had a boxload of exhibits carried in from the District-Attorney's office.

The murdered woman's straw hat, her reticule and purse, a crash skirt and the blood-stained white shirt waist were identified by the witness and accepted without question by the defense.

Frank E. Towle, a draughtsman and city surveyor, showed to the jurors two plats of the Grand Hotel he had drawn at the request of the District-Attorney.

The evidence looked technical, but Mr. Moore again scored a point, making the expert admit, and prove from his diagram, that a person could pass down the main stairway, cross the corridor and leave by the Broadway entrance without being seen by a man sitting at the office desk.

This hit the night clerk's identification of Kennedy as he left the hotel by the Broadway entrance after the thirty-first street entrance had been locked.

The twelfth jurymen is Frederick W. Morris, a book dealer, of No. 111 Fifth avenue. He was selected to-day.

There was a note of freshness in the outlining of the murder of Dolly Reynolds to the jury, for Assistant District-Attorney Keyran J. O'Connor had come into the case to make the State's final effort to fasten responsibility for the crime on the dentist.

An impression was gained from Mr. O'Connor's opening that the prosecution might produce the straw hat worn by the murderer of Dolly Reynolds as its manifest of new evidence.

All day long the devoted wife of the accused dentist sits eagerly listening to the evidence. She is confident her husband will be acquitted.

JURY IS FLAWLESS, SAYS MRS. KENNEDY.

I think the jury is flawless. They have been most carefully selected. All of them are representative business men. None is too young or too old. They seem broad-minded and just men. I have looked into their faces, and as far as my woman's intuition tells me I believe them without prejudice. Again I say we are most hopeful, and I pray to God that the day of my husband's justification is at hand. —Mrs. SAMUEL J. KENNEDY to The Evening World.

GIRL PROPOSES TO EARL; HE GETS $2,500 DAMAGES.

She Was Not Rich and Wanted to Save Yarmouth from the Fate of Marrying an Heir—Pleased at Verdict in Libel Suit.

The Earl of Yarmouth shortly after he received a verdict of $2,500 damages for libel to-day leaned back in a big chair in Howe & Hummel's office and gave the following authorized interview to The Evening World.

"Why, do you know," said he to a reporter for The Evening World, "that the talk about me trying to marry an American heiress is the worst kind of nonsense."

"The newspaper I sued for libel had Miss Sylvia Green at the Chemical National Bank each day of the trial so they could put on the stand, but you know they did not call her as a witness. As a matter of fact I did not meet Miss Green until last January. I was introduced to her at a tea in New York.

"Then you were not seeking young ladies of wealth?" "I certainly was not," said the Earl, "relating to the matter of the witness stand. On the contrary, I would there was a twinkle in the Earl's eye—some young lady at least was seeking me. She was hardly an heiress though but she said she was pretty. Here is a letter she wrote to me:

Loved Him for Himself. Mr. Eric Hope, of Mr. Yarmouth. Dear Mr. Yarmouth (Earl): I have seen you perform your part on the stage on Saturday night and I think you are by far the best on the stage and much the handsomest. I suppose you have seen over here to marry a rich girl, but you are far too good for such a fate. I am only a very poor girl and will work very hard for my living, but I would like to see you for yourself alone. Put a personal in the Saturday if you would care to come out. I am seventeen and a half and my friends tell me I am pretty, but maybe you do not care for blouses.

Two Sides to a Question. "So you see," said the Earl, "there are two sides to every question." He crossed his legs and looked thoughtful.

"Art?" repeated he. "Oh, well, now, I am afraid I don't know so much about art. I confess I have painted a little. I did a head of a young girl that I called 'Sally.' I sent her to the Dresden Exposition, and"

The Earl paused for a minute "upon what subject?" "Oh, Sally came back."

Liked American. "I like American and shall make it my home for some time to come. I believe now that the people here understand me better."

"The first time I met the Earl of Yarmouth," said Mrs. Hattie Green to-day, "was in the court-room the first day of his trial. I don't know anything about him, but as far as appearance goes he appears to be a very nice young gentleman."

sighed. "But," he added, his face brightening, "she went to the Exposition, anyhow."

"And you did some other work?" "Oh, yes, I have made sketches and water colors, but they were in the way of amusement, you know."

"I only play by ear. I never took a music lesson in my life. I have written three songs and have two more that will soon appear."

Likes American. "I like American and shall make it my home for some time to come. I believe now that the people here understand me better."

"The first time I met the Earl of Yarmouth," said Mrs. Hattie Green to-day, "was in the court-room the first day of his trial. I don't know anything about him, but as far as appearance goes he appears to be a very nice young gentleman."

The Earl came into court to-day two minutes after the verdict was read. He was met by his lawyer, Abraham Hummel.

"Two thousand five hundred dollars!" cried Hummel.

"It's great," said the Earl, and in his enthusiasm he grasped the jurors by the hands right and left as they were passing out.

He caught Abraham Ruth, the foreman, by both hands.

"I thank you very much," he said. The Earl was quickly surrounded by his friends. They blocked up the doorway and some of them climbed over the railing in their eagerness, till the court officer cried for order.

With difficulty the Earl made his way into the corridor. He was in the crowd pressed against him.

It almost became a mob. A forest of hands suddenly grew up before the Earl. Both his arms went up and down like a windmill.

He was smiling as a May morning, and he made himself scarce saying:

"Thank you very much."

NEGRO BLOOD DIVIDES THEM. M'KINLEY SHOWS SIGNS OF STRAIN.

Why Miss Rector's Engagement to Dr. Wilkerson Was Broken.

Until two weeks ago Dr. Thomas Tucker Wilkerson, one of the most prominent dentists of Jersey City, was engaged to Miss Elizabeth Rector, daughter of the late Dr. Rector. It has developed that the reason for the breaking of the engagement was the discovery that Dr. Wilkerson had negro blood in his veins.

Mrs. Rector and her daughter refuse to discuss the matter, but Dr. Wilkerson admitted that such was the case.

"I have never posed as anything but a man," he said. "It is true that Mrs. Rector asked me about my family and that I told her the truth. My engagement to Miss Rector was broken off on this account."

Dr. Wilkerson conducts the United States Dental Association parlors at Montgomery and Warren streets and has been in Jersey City for five years. He graduated from the dental school of the University of Pennsylvania in 1886, and conducted a public railway cars.

President Vainly Strives to Fully Respond to 'Frisco Welcome.

(Special to The Evening World.) SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—President McKinley was accorded a welcome full and hearty in the public demonstration here to-day, but, although he made every effort to enter into the spirit of the affair, it was evident that he was not at all himself.

He showed unmistakable signs of the mental strain he has been under, his usually impetuous face being marked with deep lines of distress.

There appeared to be good reason for a report current that the President's tour would end abruptly with his reception in this city.

The President made his official entry into San Francisco late this afternoon, accompanied by the members of the Cabinet who crossed the continent with him. He was escorted through the principal streets by an imposing body of regular and volunteer troops, veterans of the Mexican and civil wars and citizens.

The route of the march was lined with welcoming throngs.

He had a serious sickness some time ago, and it is said that since then he had appeared to be mentally disturbed.

YARMOUTH LOST WALDORF SUIT.

The Earl of Yarmouth lost a law suit to-day although he had won one in the morning.

In the City Court this afternoon, George C. Bolit, manager of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, secured a judgment of $106.19 against the nobleman, by default.

The Earl was busy receiving congratulations upon the victory of the morning and may have forgotten his other engagement in court.

The suit was begun on April 19. The hotel man stated that from Sept. 1 to Oct. 31, 1899, the Earl of Yarmouth had honored his hospitality with his presence and had consumed food and utilized lodging there to the amount of $84. There being no money in sight for payment, he brought suit and the proceedings ended $22.19 in cost to the hotel.

At his mother's call the boy, who had been playing across the street from his home, started to return. The family had only moved into Harlem from downtown yesterday to give the little chap a playground, and he was not used to trolley cars. An eastbound car was coming along at the time and suddenly a milk wagon.

He saw the car, stopped suddenly, became confused, and at last fell between the wheels of the wagon. The rear wheel passed over his head. His skull was crushed like paper and he died instantly. His mother saw the accident, but was helpless.

The milk wagon belongs to the Mutual Milk Company of No. 100 West One Hundred and Twenty-second street, and was driven by August Bushing. The driver was arrested and held for examination. The body was carried to a drug store and an ambulance summoned before it was known that the boy was dead. The father is a carpenter.

Members of the syndicate, the junkman, commenced their raid on the Almsouse by adjoining the hospital, had been systematically looting the place, while the inmates were in the case, too late to see the loot.

Catarrh Creeps Downward to the Lungs.

Taken at Night Before Retiring and in the Morning on Arising, STUART'S CATARRH TABLETS relieves all the disagreeable symptoms and in a short time drives the disease from the system.

IT IS IMPORTANT TO KNOW WHAT YOU ARE TAKING WHEN USING CATARRH REMEDIES.

Catarrh is the short route to consumption, and the importance of early and judicious treatment of catarrh, whether located in the head, throat or bronchial tubes, cannot be too strongly emphasized.

The list of catarrh cures is as long as the moral law and the forms in which they are administered, numerous and confusing, from sprays, inhalers, washes, ointments, and salves to powders, liquids and tablets.

The tablet form is undoubtedly the most convenient and most effective, but with nearly all advertised catarrh remedies it is almost entirely a matter of guesswork as to what you are taking into your system, as the proprietors, while making all sorts of claims as to what their medicines will do, always keep it a close secret as to what they are.

The success and popularity of the new catarrh cure, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, is largely because it not only cures catarrh but because catarrh sufferers who used these tablets know what they are taking into their systems. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets being composed of Eucalyptol, Hydrastin, Guaiacol and similar valuable and antiseptic ingredients, and are pleasant to the taste and being dissolved in the mouth they take immediate effect upon the mucous lining of the throat, nasal passages and whole respiratory tract.

The cures that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have accomplished in old chronic cases of catarrh are little short of remarkable, and the advantage of knowing what you are putting into your stomach is of paramount importance when it is remembered that the cocaine or morphine habit has been frequently contracted as the result of using secret catarrh remedies.
