FOOTBALL TEAMS READY FOR GAMES.

New York and Syracuse Will Play Opening Contest at the Garden on Monday Night.

The Orange A. C. football team is getting in two solid hours a day now practicing at the Essex Troop Riding Academy. Twenty-three men comprise the squad. They are playing faster and more snappy ball than at any time since Thanksgiving Day.

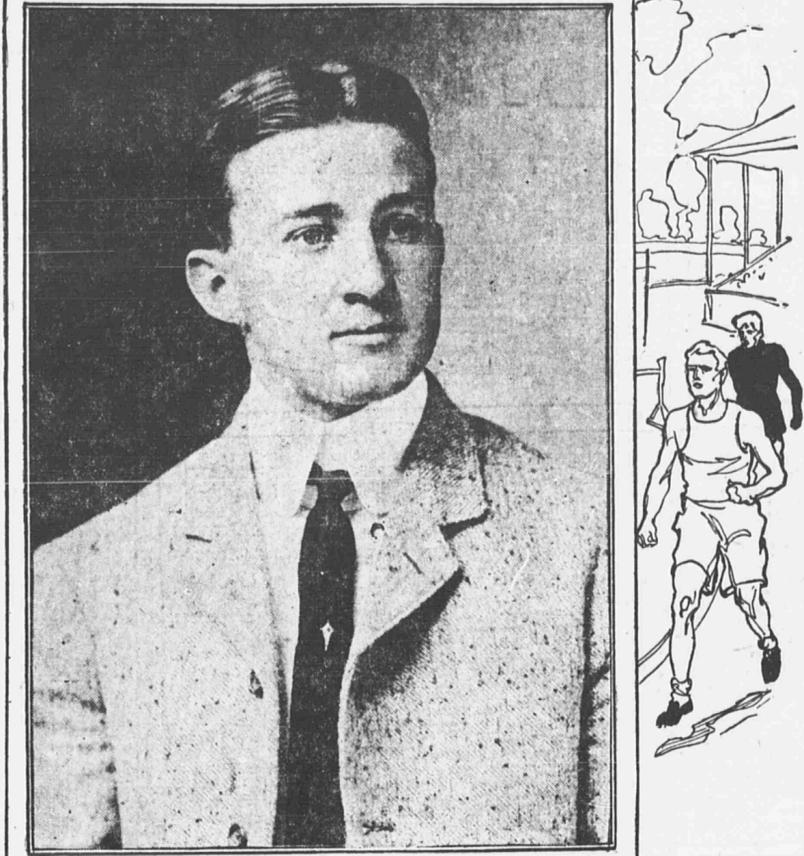

BRANN QUILTS THE BENCH.

Lawyers Pay Him Honor in the Yorkville Court.

Although he had expected many friends would call to wish him good-by, Magistrate Brann, in the Yorkville Court, was overcome with surprise today at the demonstration of friendship when nearly seventy lawyers and ex-judges filed into the court-room to congratulate him on the successful termination of his seven years' term on the bench, which will expire next Wednesday.

SPRINTER DUFFY WILL TRY FOR RECORD AT IRISH A. A. GAMES IN GARDEN TO-NIGHT.

Champion Will Start from Scratch in 60-Yard Dash Against Many Other Good Men.

Few people realize just how fast Arthur F. Duffy is. The sprinter that pace for a mile he would cover the distance in less than three minutes. Duffy has just returned from his great trip to England, where he met and beat all the sprinters in that country and won prizes valued at over $1,000. To-night he will start in the 60-yard race at Madison Square Garden, and it is almost certain that he will break the record which he now holds.

CORBETT WILL WIN THOUGH HE LOSES.

Denverite to Receive 75 Per Cent. of Purse, Regardless of Result of McGovern Fight.

Terry McGovern's desire to regain the feather-weight championship of the world by beating "Young Corbett" is very evident by his agreement to fight the Denverite on a percentage basis named by his conqueror.

T. B. REED'S WILL FILED.

Former Speaker Thomas B. Reed was said to have accumulated a fortune of $200,000 through his law practice after he retired from political life, but there is no mention of such a sum in his will. The will was filed for probate in the office of the Surrogate. The will is in the handwriting of Mr. Reed and is all on one side of a piece of foolscap paper. It bears the date of Dec. 1, 1880, and is witnessed by George M. Seiders, A. G. Bradstreet and Charles S. Drummond, life-long friends of the late Speaker.

FRANK M'KEE ILL.

Popular Theatrical Manager Is Threatened with Appendicitis.

Frank McKee, manager of the Madison Square, Garrick and Savoy theatres, is seriously ill in his apartments at the Martinique, in West Thirty-third street, and his physicians fear that his ailment may result in appendicitis. A consultation was held last night and there will be another to-day to discuss the advisability of an operation. Mr. McKee reported this morning as feeling easily. He was first compelled to take to his bed on Thursday last.

MUELLER DOES AS LORENZ DID.

Viennese Surgeon's Assistant Reveals the Wonders of His Work to East Side Physicians.

CURES TWO LITTLE ONES.

Successful Operations for Congenital Dislocation of the Hip Are Applauded and Then Cheered by Those Who Witness Them.

Dr. Frederick Mueller, assistant to Prof. Adolf Lorenz, the famous Vienna surgeon, performed two successful operations for congenital hip dislocation to-day at the Beth Israel Hospital, Jefferson and Cherry streets. Dr. Mueller's work was a revelation to the east side surgeons, as was the work of Prof. Lorenz to the physicians of other parts of the city.

Dr. Mueller after performing the second operation, said it was the most promising case he had seen since he came to America. The two hundred surgeons who watched Dr. Mueller first applauded him by clapping their hands, and later gave vent to cheers.

The first case Dr. Mueller took hold of was that of Bessie Younger, six years old, of No. 285 East Tenth street. It was just 11:45 when he took the child in hand and 11:49 when he declared her cured. In performing this operation, Dr. Mueller did not explain as he went along as Prof. Lorenz does, and the surgeons had to pay closer attention to the details of the operation. Dr. Mueller first took hold of the child's leg and began to stretch the abductors. He then flexed the leg back and forth toward the abdomen, and then extended the leg toward the child's back. He flexed the leg a second time and manipulated the flexor muscles. By pushing downward on the knee with the foot in a flexed position the head of the femur went back into the socket with a snap, and the operation was over. The first lasted four minutes and the second took only three.

The second case was that of Abraham Levine, six years old, of No. 119 East One Hundred and Ninth street. Dr. Mueller explained this as he went along, much to the satisfaction of those who watched him.

SORROWFUL STORY OF A BIG SLEUTH WHO FAILED.

Sought to Catch Jerome's "Rubber-Face" Detective Napping,—But Didn't.

Their faces were all drawn and weary and their mouths drooped sad and dreary as they thought of his disguises which exceed a score or more. What if he should catch them napping as his rubbered toes came tapping up Jerome's long corridor? Tutin! then for evermore! The thirty sleuths tore at their hair and gnashed their teeth in grim despair. How to circumvent this wonder? How to steal some of his thunder? How his very fame to plunder? This they pondered more and more, merely this and nothing more. There was one among their number, one who never thought of slumber, the astute Qualls, who ever did ponder over classic Hawthorne for hours on end. He thought of the plan for the entrapping of Sleuth Jacobs, "else his fame grow more and more." So he made up his mind to take a risk. He took a seat in the rear of the car, and he looked at the man who was sitting next to him. He spoke with a husky hoarseness, though he, of the proper course, said, "I am Jones, of Pittsburgh. I've been robbed of all my dough. Tell me, oh sleuth, where to go; only that and nothing more." Jacobs looked at the face forlorn. Then he spoke with a mighty smile and said with a scowl on his brow, "Man, do you know that your beard is slipping, your eye is awry and needs some clipping? Callity, who thought to catch me tripping. Back to the woods for evermore!" Then he waited on the corner, the truest type of a hayseed murriner; no one could have looked for him, as he watched for the only Jacobs in the hope to make him sure, only that and nothing more. For if he could once deceive him, no one ever would then believe him; that his shadow had ever flitted through the doorway and iron door, that their chief, own C. D. J. could not bote. They'd believe him nevermore. As Jerome's own sleuth stood waiting, each and every nerve pulsating, with the hope that the might humbug the man they all had bowed before, suddenly he heard a tipping as of some one smoothly tripping along the snowy pavement's floor. Yes, the Rubber Face, by a tooth-tip stepped Qualls with his tremble, he would surely out-dissemble the man who now no disguises wore. Then he spoke with a husky hoarseness, though he, of the proper course, said, "I am Jones, of Pittsburgh. I've been robbed of all my dough. Tell me, oh sleuth, where to go; only that and nothing more." Jacobs looked at the face forlorn. Then he spoke with a mighty smile and said with a scowl on his brow, "Man, do you know that your beard is slipping, your eye is awry and needs some clipping? Callity, who thought to catch me tripping. Back to the woods for evermore!" Then he waited on the corner, the truest type of a hayseed murriner; no one could have looked for him, as he watched for the only Jacobs in the hope to make him sure, only that and nothing more. For if he could once deceive him, no one ever would then believe him; that his shadow had ever flitted through the doorway and iron door, that their chief, own C. D. J. could not bote. They'd believe him nevermore.
