

EAST-SIDE MOB MAKES OFFICER FLEE FOR LIFE

Riotous Scenes Follow Shooting of a Patrolman Who Interposed to Save Girl from Jealous Soldier Who Tried to Kill His Sweetheart.

200 MEN CHASE DETECTIVE AND GIRL FOR BLOCKS.

Riot Began on Street Car on Which Officer and Girl Were Passengers, and Was Caused by Conductor's Refusal to Permit a Couple on Car.

While Detective Coles Carpenter, of the Union Market station, was talking Louise Freedman to Essex Market station to appear against Adolph Schloss, who earlier in the day fired at the girl and fatally shot Policeman Cornelius Mulvey, of the same precinct, he was nearly mobbed by an east-side crowd and threatened with lynching.

The detective and a "stool pigeon," with the girl between them, ran from Houston street and Avenue C, pursued by 200 men, to Second street and Avenue B, where they took refuge in a saloon.

From there Carpenter telephoned to Police Headquarters for the reserves. The saloon-keeper locked the doors and kept the mob outside until Serg. Powers and eight men arrived in a patrol wagon.

Crowd Grows to Five Hundred. The crowd by this time had increased to five hundred. The policemen used their clubs and scattered the mob. They thought that the crowd was trying to rescue the girl, thinking that she was under arrest. She, however, was not the cause of the trouble.

With the girl, Carpenter and the "stool pigeon" boarded Car No. 70 that runs between West Fourteenth street and Grand Street Ferry, bound for Essex Market Court, where Schloss had been taken for arraignment.

At Avenue C and Houston street Solomon Greenberg, of No. 642 East Sixth street, with his wife, tried to board the car. They had four big bundles and two baskets of clothing.

The conductor refused to let them on. Other Hebrews interfered, and as is always the case of any excitement in that neighborhood, a crowd gathered in a few seconds. Some took hold of the horses' heads and demanded that the Greenbergs be permitted to get aboard.

The conductor grabbed the iron switching hook and sailed into the mob. His driver helped him, using the butt end of his whip whenever the mob was too close.

Both of the railroad men were getting the worst of it when Carpenter and the other man went to their aid, hitting right and left with short blades.

Had to Run for It. But the crowd grew too fast for the four and the detective, the girl and "stool pigeon" made a run for it. As they did so the driver whipped up his horses and the crowd divided itself into two parts.

One mob chased the car, while the rest went after the detective and his charge, hurling stones and sticks as they ran.

Just as Carpenter made up his mind to run for it with the girl and the other man, a child got in the way of the side step of the street car and was knocked down, but not seriously injured. This served to infuriate the mob further. No one appeared to know much about what had happened, but the sight of Carpenter running with the girl was enough to cause hundreds to follow the chase.

Carpenter ran all the way to Second street and Avenue B, protecting himself as best he could with his club. He had been hoping to meet a policeman and when the situation looked desperate ran into the saloon to await the arrival of the reserves.

The crowd, while willing to chase him on the street, hesitated when it came to forcibly entering private property and was easily dispersed by a show of force.

The Shooting of Mulvey. The exciting experience of Louise Freedman, as she ran with the policeman, followed an experience of a few hours before even more exciting, when a bullet intended for her and fired by Schloss pierced the head of Policeman Mulvey. The policeman is in such a serious condition that Schloss was held without bail to await the result of his injuries.

When Carpenter finally succeeded in reaching Essex Market Court with the Freedman girl, she preferred the charge against him, as Mulvey is unconscious and unable to swear to a complaint.

GIRL IN WHOSE DEFENSE POLICEMAN MULVEY WAS MORTALLY WOUNDED. THE ASSASSIN, THE ATTACK BY MOB AND RESCUE BY RESERVES.

Four men leaped on Schloss and tried to wrest the revolver from him, but he fought desperately to kill himself. The first shot he fired at his own head went wild. The second grazed his scalp, and he fell as though dead just as policemen came running from every direction. A call was sent to Holketa and Mulvey was hurried away. Schloss was taken to the Union Market station, where he told the desk sergeant the following story:

"I met the girl," he said, "two years ago and we became engaged. I went down to the mines in Pennsylvania, and she wrote for me to come back and said that she would marry me. When I came back her father objected and she grew cold. There is another that she pulled the trigger, and the bullet meant for the girl passed through the policeman's right temple and out at the top of his head. Mulvey fell unconscious to the sidewalk.

The girl ran screaming to a nearby drug store. During the excitement, the girl disappeared, but later she went to the Union Market station and told her story about the shooting. She corroborated Schloss as to their engagement, but denied that there is another man in the case. The girl is only 4 feet 4 inches tall and looks about fourteen years old.

The Father's Version. Rabbi Joseph Freedman, father of the girl, when seen at his home today, said he wasn't surprised at the sudden turn in events.

"I wanted my daughter to keep away from Schloss time and time again," he said, "as he is and always has been a worthless fellow. He would not work, and I knew he could not be happy with him for long."

Freedman, who is a teacher of Hebrew, is a respectable and intelligent man. He said Schloss had a great influence over his daughter, but that of late she was seeing the folly of her ways and had made up her mind to keep away from him altogether. He declared that even this morning, when the shooting occurred, she was on her way to the Essex Market Court to have him arrested.

Rabbi Freedman said that some time ago he whipped his daughter for being in the company of Schloss, and the latter, to get revenge, had the girl have her father taken to court on a charge of assault. The case was settled, however, the repairs as fast as the capacity of the plant would permit.

He has been on the force since 1890. Louise Freedman is one of eleven children. Her father, when seen today, said that a year ago Schloss had tried suicide.

The Girl's Story. "He wanted to desert from the army," she said, "and I said that I would never marry a deserter. Four days ago he came to my home and threatened my life. 'I'll make you marry me,' he said, 'or you'll never marry any one else. This morning I met him at Avenue B and Seventh street. He again threatened to kill me and I was looking for a policeman just as he made the attempt on my life.'"

Schloss's parents live at No. 124 First street. Police Officer Mulvey is forty years old and lives at No. 218 East Fifty-first street. He has been on the force since 1890.

More Lawyers Accuse Bolte Messrs. Treadwell and C. S. Andrews Go On Stand and Tell of Civil Justice's Arbitrary Rulings at Trials of Suits.

The hearing of charges against Civil Justice Bolte was resumed today before Referee W. H. Willis. Mr. Treadwell was recalled and asked to indicate the omissions which he claims were made in the stenographic report of proceedings before Justice Bolte.

Mr. Treadwell went over the papers, picking out his objections, which referred to failure to note exceptions taken by him during a trial. There were twenty-five of these exceptions claimed by Mr. Treadwell, which did not appear in the record of the trial.

After twenty of the alleged omissions had been cited, Mr. Blumenthal, counsel for Justice Bolte, objected to the proceedings and insisted that the court should accept the record of the trial, rather than the memory of counsel. Mr. Treadwell was allowed to continue to point out the omissions on account of the importance of their bearing.

Mr. Treadwell was asked where the record were any indications of favoritism or partiality on the part of Justice Bolte, and Lawyer Blumenthal characterized Mr. Treadwell's testimony as vindictive.

TRELAWNEY SAYS HE MAY "SQUEAL"

Will Have to Do That if His Fight at Trial for Forgery is Not Strong Enough, Is His Answer to Question.

Charles H. Trelawney, the Philadelphia publisher, who was arrested at his home in Yorkers last week by Central Office detectives and Pinkerton men on a charge of forgery, had a hearing before Magistrate Ommen in the Tombs Court today and was held to await trial in General Sessions. Bail was fixed at $2,000.

Since the arrest of Trelawney the police have received several letters saying that the prisoner was wanted in other cities on various charges. One letter from Albany stated that five years ago Trelawney and his wife, known as Blanche Louise Trelawney, tricked a number of Albany merchants. Trelawney said:

"I shall have to put up a strong fight at the trial—or squeal." This remark was taken to mean that he will disclose the names and nature of the conspirators and the conspiracy which he said he was fighting. Trelawney denies that he has a wife in Boston. He could not furnish bail and went back to the Tombs.

BLOOD HUMOURS Skin Humours, Scalp Humours, Hair Humours, Whether Simple Scrofulous or Hereditary Speedily Cured by Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. Complete External and Internal Treatment, One Dollar.

In the treatment of torturing, disfiguring, itching, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy and scrofulous humours of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair, Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills have been wonderfully successful. Even the most obstinate of constitutional humours, such as bad blood, scrofula, inherited and congenital humours, with loss of hair, granular swellings, ulcerous patches in the throat and mouth, sore eyes, copper-coloured blotches, as well as boils, carbuncles, scurvy, sties, ulcers and sores arising from an impure or impoverished condition of the blood, yield to the Cuticura Treatment, when all other remedies fail.

A greater still, if possible, is the wonderful record of cures of torturing, disfiguring humours among infants and children. The suffering which Cuticura Remedies have alleviated among the young, and the comfort they have afforded worn-out and worried parents, have led to a permanent and economical home as priceless curatives for the skin and blood. Infantile and birth humours, milk crust, scalded head, eczema, rashes and every form of itching, scaly, pimply skin and scalp humours, with loss of hair, of infancy and childhood, are speedily, permanently and economically cured when all other remedies suitable for children, and even the best physicians, fail.
