

CONSCIOUSLY THROUGH

Fireman Who Was Running the "Bowling Train" on the Harlem Railroad Was Rendered Insensible at His Post.

HEAD PROBABLY HIT BY A MAIL CRANE.

Trainman, with Quick Grasp of the Danger of the Situation, Climbed Aboard and Shut Off the Steam.

Through the prompt action of Trainman George Simmons, who put on the emergency brake and then climbed on the engine and shut off the steam the "bowling train" used to convey conductors, trainmen, engineers and firemen to the North White Plains yard of the Harlem Railroad, was saved from running away with an insensible fireman at the throttle today.

The train consisted of one coach and an engine and there were a dozen employees in the car who were being taken to work. Engineer Way was in the train despatcher's office while fireman Frank Warner ran the train south to the cross-over below the station and started on the north-bound track.

The train failed to stop at the station. Trainman Simmons, on looking out of the coach door, saw the fireman hanging out of the cab window insensible and bleeding from a deep gash on the back of his skull. He turned on the emergency brake, and yet when the air was released the runaway train started on again.

There was considerable excitement among the railroad men until Simmons crawled into the cab and shut off the steam.

Trainman F. J. Brooker took fireman Warner, who was unconscious, to the White Plains Hospital. Warner is unable to tell how he was injured, but it is believed he had first struck against a mail crane while he was looking at a signal.

MISSING POLICE SERGEANT DROPPED

Lawrence Ryder, Bath Beach Policeman Who Mysteriously Disappeared, Is Dismissed from Force by Greene.

Police Commissioner Green today dismissed from the force Sergt. Lawrence Ryder, of the Bath Beach station, who disappeared on Aug. 1 last and has not been seen since either by his family or any member of the police force.

Under the rules of the department a policeman who is absent and unaccounted for more than five days can be dismissed, though such action has only been taken in rare instances. The family of Sergt. Ryder declare that they believe he has been done away with by enemies he made while performing his duty. Should he turn up now, however, and make a satisfactory explanation of his disappearance, he could only obtain reinstatement through the intervention of the courts.

Commissioner Greene appointed seven doormen today and in doing so exhausted the eligible list referred to him by the Civil Service Commission. As there are vacancies in the department doormen another eligible list will have to be prepared.

Commissioner Greene has directed Deputy Commissioner Davis to organize a steamboat boiler inspection squad, recently the commission on the passage of an ordinance giving the Police Department power to inspect the boilers of all steam craft moored at New York docks. Before this ordinance was passed this work was left entirely to the United States authorities.

LACK OF FUNDS CLOSED SHIPYARD.

Trust Official Denies that Seizure of Vessels Caused Shut-Down at Elizabeth.

It was denied at the offices of the United States Ship-Building Company today that the closing down of the shipyards at Elizabeth, N. J., was due to the seizure of vessels on an attachment of $3,400.

It was explained that work at the plant was ceased by order of the receiver, ex-Senator Smith, so that a week might be devoted to taking an inventory of stock.

"There are no funds," said an official of the company, "and it will therefore be up to the reorganization committee to decide whether or not the Elizabeth yard shall be reopened. The same plan will be followed in respect to other yards."

REVOLT CROWS

Young Men Are Fleeing from Bulgarian Villages and Joining the Insurgent Forces Which Are in the Mountains.

CAMPAIN OF MASSACRE HAS SPREAD TO SALONICA.

Believed at Sofia that Murder of Christians at Uskub Is Impending—Russia's Consul Reaches Monastir.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 12.—One hundred and fifty revolutionaries were killed, according to official Turkish reports, in the fighting at Uskub Aug. 8. The same date, which have been communicated to the Russian and Austrian embassies, state that the insurrectionary movement is increasing daily.

Himil Pasha, Inspector-General of the Sultan's Macedonian forces, reports that the young men in all the Bulgarian villages are fleeing to the mountains to join the insurgent bands. Many among the Bulgarian peasants wished to remain neutral, he declares, but were compelled by threat to help the revolutionary committees.

Spread to Salonica. Hussein Pasha, who has been appointed Wali of Monastir, reports a similar spread of the insurrectionary movement in the vilayet of Salonica, where, he says, the committees are resolved on the same campaign of massacre, incendiarism and pillage as in the vilayet of Macedonia.

Telegrams received today from Monastir announce that the town of Krushovo is still occupied by the insurgents. Four thousand Turkish troops with artillery surround the town and an effort will be made to retake the position. Fighting with the rebels is in progress in the district of Dibra, where it is reported that the Albanians are attacking the Bulgarian villages.

CHRISTIAN MASSACRE THOUGHT IMPENDING.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 12.—The Bulgarian Foreign Office has received very disquieting news from its agent at Uskub. The Mussulmans there are daily gathering in the mosques and it is feared that a massacre of the Christians is impending.

PAID A LOLLYPOP TO A LIFE-SAVER.

That Was the Reward of a Little Girl to a Brave Policeman.

One lollipop was the reward paid by Miss Pauline Muller, three years old, for saving her life. The dainty morsel cost just one penny, but no man on the police force wears a braver medal with more pride than Policeman Luster accepted it from the tiny maid.

Little Pauline was presented with two bright pennies, which looked very large to her, and she started from her home at No. 240 East Ninety-fourth street to find the policeman. She offered to spend them, she had never been so far away alone before and the streams of traffic in Second avenue bewildered her.

Many persons stood transfixed with fear as the little tot stopped right in the middle of the car tracks, with a car fast approaching. The policeman darted out from the curb and snatched the baby from the rails no time too soon.

Pauline laughed merrily when she was landed safely on the sidewalk. She opened her little hand and displayed the bright pennies. She offered to "treat" the big policeman and he followed her into the store and accepted the morsel before returning her home.

CLEVER ENGLISHWOMAN, WHO TELLS OF LIFE IN SINGAPORE.

LADY FRANK SWETTENHAM

TELLS OF LIFE IN FARTHER INDIA

Lady Swettenham, Now Visiting Mrs. Henry Siegel, Describes Social Customs in the Straits Settlements.

It is a far cry from an island settlement in Farther India, where the heaven-sending thermometer frequently marks ninety-three in one's bedroom, and the calling hours are fixed at between 12 and 2 A. M., that one may avoid sunstroke to the cool and sequestered shade of an American country seat. And it is a long journey, but one which apparently had no terrors for Lady Swettenham, wife of Sir Frank Swettenham, British Governor of the Straits Settlements, as Singapore and its adjacent islands are known, who has just arrived in America for the first time on a visit to Mrs. Henry Siegel at Driftwood, her country place at Mamaroneck.

Lady Swettenham came to New York by way of London, and when an Evening World reporter saw her had just returned from a visit to the New York Stock Exchange.

Since her marriage in 1878 this handsome blond English woman has lived on and off, as she herself put it, in the Straits Settlement and on the Malay Peninsula. She has spent the first part of that period was spent at Singapore, though she passed several months each year in Malacca and Penang, two principal cities of the Peninsula.

"I went out to Farther India before the railroad," said Lady Swettenham, which you know is an island about fifteen miles across. But the first road built on the Malay Peninsula to transport tin from the mines in the interior to the coast, whence it could be taken to Singapore, was completed just a year after my arrival.

Exciting Times There. "Several years before that there had been some very exciting times in the Straits. The Peninsular war was then raging, and my husband lived in the very midst of it. But it was all over when I got there. I have enjoyed life on the Peninsula extremely, however. My husband, besides being Governor of the Straits, is High Commissioner of the Malay Peninsula. England does not own the Peninsula, you know. It is divided up among a number of native rajahs, but we have a protectorate over it. Life at Singapore, far away as it is, differs very little from that in London or New York.

Society there is made up of government officials, military men, foreign consuls, large merchants and visiting naval officers. Singapore is one of England's largest coaling stations, so all the great vessels stop there. There is besides a gunboat stationed in the harbor. So we never lack for dancing men.

No Americans There. "There are practically no Americans in Singapore. I remember only the Consul and his family, and do not recall a single American merchant. Society is very cosmopolitan. It does not differ from that of London, Paris or New York, save, perhaps, that as there are fewer of us and we are all exiled in a strange country we feel the need of being bound closely together, and there are more genuine friendships with us. The native population consists largely of Chinese and Malays.

"People do not rise early in Singapore. We keep very late hours at parties, and enjoy the benefit of the cooler night air as much as possible.

"But every one rises in time to make social calls. The hours for calling in Singapore are from 12 to 3 o'clock, or, if time allows, from 12 to 5 o'clock."

PARIS NEARLY HAS FIRE IN A SUBWAY TRAIN

Passengers Into Panic and the Awful Scenes of Monday Night Are Almost Duplicated.

ALL OVER IN A MINUTE.

Eighty-four Bodies Have Been Taken Out from Scene of Monday's Disaster and More Remain to Be Removed.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—A second fire breaking out on a subway train threw the passengers into a panic and threatened a repetition of the horror of the night before in the tunnel near the Montmartre station.

A train was approaching the station at Termez when a fuse blew out and set fire to the train. The passengers fought with each other in an effort to escape from the cars, just as did the passengers in the train which was burned Monday night. Two women were seriously hurt, being pushed back and trampled on by men. It seems that the patrons of the road did not profit by the experience of twenty-four hours before.

Only the fact that the fire had burned itself out in a minute or two prevented a repetition of the awful catastrophe. As soon as the flames ceased the passengers became more tranquil.

Eighty-four bodies have been taken out from the scene of Monday's disaster and more remain to be removed. Engineers attribute the catastrophe to three faults in the construction of the train and tunnel, while the publicists attribute the holocaust to the excitement of the French people.
