

MONUMENT MADE HER A BANKRUPT

Mrs. Elizabeth Weisen Was Compelled by the Courts to Carry Out Provisions of Her Husband's Will.

ESTATE WAS NOT LARGE ENOUGH TO PAY THE BILL.

It Only Amounted to $35,000, and Now the Widow is $42,947 in Debt with No Funds on Hand.

When Henry the husband of Mrs. Elizabeth Weisen died two years ago he suddenly thought himself a wealthy man, because he made a provision in his will that after his debts had been paid his widow, who was also executrix of the estate, should erect a $25,000 monument over his grave in Woodlawn Cemetery.

But the widow found that the net estate amounted to only $35,000, and she protested against building the monument. The courts compelled her to do so and now she has filed a petition in bankruptcy showing that she owes $42,947 and has no assets unless, indeed, the monument could be considered an asset.

Believed to Be Rich. The will of Mr. Weisen was made a long time before he died. He lived at No. 208 Bathgate avenue, and was a man of affairs. His friends thought that his fortune was up in the hundreds of thousands, and he shared the belief, but he appeared to have over-estimated his resources.

Mrs. Weisen took charge of the affairs of the estate, paid off the debts and the various bequests, and then found herself possessed of only $10,000 more than the price of the monument her husband had directed that she should place over his grave.

She went into the Surrogate's Court and protested against erecting the monument. She said that she was willing to make all reasonable arrangements in that she could not see the justice in expending five-sevenths of the estate to contribute to the memory of her husband. But a will is a will and she was disappointed that the provisions of the document must be carried out. She appealed to the Supreme Court and the will was upheld.

Monument a Fine One. Mrs. Weisen performed the monument constructed. It is a beautiful memorial in marble, standing out among scores of other expensive marks of respect to the memory of the dead in Woodlawn. As is usual in such cases the cost was more than the original plans contemplated and the widow was compelled to go into her purse for what was left to make up the balance.

The petition in bankruptcy filed by the widow shows that $35,000 of the liabilities is secured by a mortgage given by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, and Joseph Havender on property she formerly owned. She has lost her home and her jewelry and all the consolation she has is that her husband's fortune is to visit Woodlawn and gaze upon the magnificent monument that stands guard over his remains.

Mrs. Weisen is about thirty-five years of age and is an extremely attractive woman. The announcement that she had filed a petition in bankruptcy took the neighborhood in which she lives by surprise. Among her creditors are a tenant, a physician and several tradesmen.

He Admired Monuments. Weisen was a retiring individual, considerably older than his wife. One of his favorite amusements was to walk through Woodlawn Cemetery and study the monuments and mausoleums. His wife was aware of his fond for a massive and expensive memorial, but she, deeming his fortune to be ample, made no objection.

Nevertheless he solidified his desire in the will by providing that unless his wife should consent to erect the monument the property should go to Eva Mork, daughter of Pice Mork, his next door neighbor. In this event Mrs. Weisen was to have the monument constructed. When the courts decided that the monument must be built, Mrs. Weisen decided that she might as well do it herself and let the family of Pice Mork do it. She had to pay $25,000 for a cemetery plot before she could proceed with the erection of the monument.

CHARGES AGAINST 180 POLICEMEN

Sixty Are Accused of Permitting Fires on Election Night, and One Hundred of Talking While on Duty.

Police Headquarters were to-day packed with 180 policemen who had been summoned for trial of charges and about seven hundred policemen and ordinary citizens who came as witnesses for and against.

Only once before has there been such a busy day at Headquarters. That was back in the Regia of Roosevelt, when the Commissioner sat at a trial table from 10 o'clock in the morning until midnight, disposing of 210 cases.

Of the 180 cases docketed for to-day 150 policemen are charged with having failed to put out fires in the streets on election night. About one hundred are charged with talking with citizens while on duty. It is under this charge that the policemen say they have been persecuted by Greene and his deputies. They say that Deputy Commissioners Davis and Fisher and their shoo-fly cops have been spying continuously on them and that the minute they were seen to speak with a citizen, even to pass the time of day, charges have been preferred against them.

Five sergeants are on trial for having permitted policemen to go off duty without taking their belts and helmets with them. Ten roundsmen are charged with various minor offenses. Out of the whole lot only three cases are considered serious. One policeman is charged with being drunk and two are charged from duty for five days without reason.

Commissioner Gorman is charged with having named the posts of the Bridge Street without authority from Commissioner.

FOOTBALL PLAYER WHO DIED FROM INJURIES IN A GAME.

FOOTBALL VICTIM'S INJURIES FATAL

Raymond McVeigh, the Young Athlete, Dies After Two Weeks of Suffering from Cerebral Meningitis.

Raymond McVeigh, eighteen years old, died to-day at the home of his father, William McVeigh, No. 9 Spencer court, Brooklyn, from cerebral meningitis, resulting from injuries received in a football game.

The youth, who was a member of the Seminole Athletic Club, and of the Cadillac football eleven, received a bruise over the right ear in a football game in Astoria on Oct. 31.

This did not seem to trouble him much, but after playing a game with a much heavier team at Long Branch on election day, when the Cadillac boys were roughly handled, McVeigh complained of pains in his head.

The following day he was unable to rise from his bed and Dr. H. J. Pierson was called. He said the boy had sustained an injury to the brain from which meningitis had resulted and that there was little hope of his recovery.

Since then until his death the boy had been in a delirium in which he repeatedly called out the signals for playing in a football game. He seemed to be under the illusion that he was playing football all the time.

It was known last night that he could not live long and to death today was not unexpected. McVeigh was graduated from Public School No. 48 last spring. There he had taken a great interest in athletics and since then he had devoted all his time to the sports.

A PLUMBER CAT. Making her cat act as her plumber was the ingenious feat that a woman of Manayunk accomplished the other day. This woman had noticed that one of the pipes connected with the washstand in her bathroom leaked, and she wished to locate the leak as speedily as possible, but she was unable to do so without leaving out any more of her wall than was needful.

Accordingly, she shut her cat up in the parlor—the parlor is directly below the bathroom—and into the basin of the defective washstand she poured a trial of the oil of valerian. Cats are excessively fond of the odor of valerian; a cat would rather inhale this odor than eat fish.

The Manayunk woman, after it had been in the parlor a few minutes, called to her. Sure, she crossed the room; it settled itself on the floor with its face to one spot on the wall, and here its mistress found it when she came downstairs, its nose glued to the spot, sniffing and purring ecstatically. The oil was opened at this point, and here, such enough, the leak was found. Here the valerian had leaked through, imparting its intoxicating odor to the cat.—Philadelphia Record.

To Cure Drunkards.

A Simple Way to Cure Any Drunkard Against His Will.

By using the new odorless and tasteless remedy, which is placed in the coffee or food, any drunkard can be cured. Any one can use it without the drunkard ever knowing it.

MRS. SAMUEL BOYD. It does its work so silently and surely that while the devoted wife, sister, daughter or mother looks on the drunkard is cured even against his own will. Every person who has a loved one who is a slave to drink ought to give them this remedy at once.

Mrs. Samuel Boyd says: "With Golden Specific I cured my husband of drinking. I put it in his coffee and after that he could not drink liquor or bear to be where he could smell it."

Writes Dr. J. W. Haines, 1106 Glenn Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, and he will send you a free trial package, which will show you how simple it is to use and how positive is its cure.

Toys and Dolls in All Their Glory.

The Toy store is rich with the iridescence of Christmas preparations. Fairy hosts—advance guards of Old Santa Claus—waved their magic wand over Macy's—and the amazing world of make-believe dawned into color and beauty. Heaps of fun, romance, sentiment, for young and old. As far back as last April we were hobnobbing with the wizards of Toys—the sorcerers who work out the realization of their dreams of novelty in the enchanted factories of Paris, Vienna, Sonneberg, Walterhausen and Nuremberg. Everything is now ready for the bright Holiday throngs. And who can resist the mute or tooting appeals of all these wonderful playthings? Now they stir and revive the memories of a cherished childhood.

The eyes of youth and age sparkle as the vast force of our Toy suggestions and economies lay close siege to the imagination of the one and the purse of the other. The homage is instinctive—and exhilarating. It is the spirit and the glamor of the happiest period.
