

SHIPS IN CRASH, BOTH ARE SUNK

Captain and Mate of Schooner Ella Pressey Lost When Their Vessel Was Sunk by the Francis Shubert.

SHUBERT, OIL LADEN,
SET ON FIRE BY CAPTAIN.

Towboat Winslow Was Near at Hand and Took the Survivors of the Collision Off Wellfleet into Boston.

(Special to The Evening World.)
BOSTON, Jan. 26.—On board the towboat George M. Winslow when she steamed in early to-day were eight sorrowful and weary sailors who had passed through an experience that would try the souls of the most daring.

They were the captain and crew of the three-masted schooner Francis Shubert, of Boston, and what remained of the crew of the two-masted schooner Ella Pressey. In the semi-darkness of Sunday night the two vessels came in collision about two miles off Wellfleet. The Ella Pressey was sunk and the captain of the Francis Shubert set fire to his vessel lest she would be a menace to navigation.

The captain and mate of the Ella Pressey were lost with the schooner when she went down. Two of the crew jumped to the Shubert immediately after the collision and the other man was saved by those on the Shubert after he had been in the water about ten minutes.

Loaded with Kerosene Oil.

The Shubert was bound from New York to Portland, Me., with a cargo of kerosene oil, and the Pressey was sailing from Rockland, Me., to New London, Conn., with a cargo of stone. Sunday night was fairly clear and Capt. T. G. Starkey, of the Shubert, says he could see plainly. He left New York a week ago last Sunday, Jan. 17, and put into several ports on account of gales and for supplies. Capt. Starkey saw the green light of the Pressey, then the red light, and suddenly the two vessels seemed to be driven together by some mysterious force. Seeing that only quick action could prevent a collision, Capt. Starkey put his wheel down hard, but a moment too late. Before she could answer to the rudder the Francis Shubert struck the Ella Pressey square in the side, nearly amidships.

Both Vessels Doomed.

The shock keeled the Pressey over, broke the bowsprit and shivered the bow of the Shubert. Two of the former's crew, who were near where the vessel was struck, seized the torn rigging of the Shubert and clambered aboard of her. These were Carl Hansen, a Swede, and Arthur A. Buckman, of Rockland, Me. Capt. Elias White, of Rockland, with his mate, Fred E. Peterson, also of Rockland, and Oscar Scott, a Finlander, who has no permanent residence, but usually stops in New York, were aft when the craft struck. Scott jumped to the schooner's small boat and called to the captain and mate to come with him, but they hesitated for a moment and were lost.

When the Shubert drew away from the Pressey she left a gaping hole in the hull of the doomed schooner into which the water poured like a cataract. The vessel was already loaded down with her cargo of stone, and the added weight of the water sent her quickly to the bottom. Scott was carried down, but rose later and was rescued. Then it was discovered that the Shubert was sinking. In a few minutes the lights of the tug George M. Winslow were seen. She steamed up and saved the imperiled men—five on the Shubert and three of the Pressey. As they left the doomed vessel she was set on fire and soon burned to the water's edge.

CONFEDERATES' BANQUET.

They Drink Standing to Robert E. Lee and Mrs. Jefferson Davis.

The fourteenth annual banquet of the Confederate Veteran Camp of New York was held last night at the Waldorf-Astoria. A feature of the occasion was the presence of women at the tables. After the banquet there was a ball in the Astor gallery.

Edward Owen, commander of the camp, who presided, proposed a toast to Robert E. Lee and Mrs. Jefferson Davis, which was drunk standing. The band played "Dixie" and the rebel yell went up.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee was the speaker of the evening. His subject was "Virginia, Her Washington, Her Lee." Francis Burton Harrison, James Edward Graybill, President of the Georgia Society; Gen. Joe Wheeler and Gen. Newton M. Curtis were the other speakers.

HIS NAME IS A JAW-BREAKER.

Edwin H. Schutenhaus Wants to Have It Changed.

Edwin Roland Schutenhaus, of No. 231 West Twentieth street, applied to Justice Gildersleeve in the Supreme Court to-day for permission to drop his jaw-breaking name and substitute himself "Edwin Roland." In his petition Mr. Schutenhaus says he has had considerable annoyance in business owing to his name, being a hard one to remember, spell and pronounce.

The Court's permission will probably be given at the expiration of a month's publication of the proposed change of name.
