

SEVEN-YEAR-OLD WIFE
TO PROTECT HERSELF

Victim of Tragedy Calls at Woman's Home, in East Thirty-fourth Street, After Her Husband Goes to Work and Arouses Her Frenzy by Forcing Unwelcome Attentions.

Holding her two-year-old baby in her arms, Mrs. Rose De Petro shot and killed Michael Rago, her brother-in-law, at No. 316 East Thirty-fourth street, to-day. She fired two bullets into his head in defense of her own life while the man was forcing his attentions on her. The second bullet struck him as he reached the street, pursued by the relentless woman, and he fell dead in a crowd of commuters hurrying from the Thirty-fourth street ferry.

As the body was lifted into a patrol wagon a pair of heavy shears fell from one of the pockets. Mrs. De Petro says that Rago threatened to kill her with these shears. The revolver was bought by her husband two weeks ago for just the purpose it served and there appears to be no doubt that the woman's crime was justified.

WARNS MAN HE WOULD BE KILLED.

The De Petros live on the rear of the third floor of the East Thirty-fourth street house. Rago lived on the ground floor in a room in the rear of a tailor shop in which he was employed. He was a tall, powerful Italian, handsome in a brigandish way and foolishly confident. Mrs. De Petro says that he deserted his wife, the sister of her husband, to follow her from Italy.

The revolver was purchased two weeks ago. Mrs. De Petro sent word then to Rago that if he persisted in his attempts to make her desert her husband she would kill him. He kept away from her until to-day.

When De Petro the husband had departed for work Rago went upstairs. Mrs. De Petro intuitively knew he was coming and she had locked the door. Rago called upon her to open it and she refused. At the same time she snatched the revolver from a bureau drawer and held it concealed. Rago, finding that she would not unlock the door, hurled him weight against it and burst it open.

SEIZES WOMAN BY THE THROAT. "I have you now," he laughed. "You will go with me this minute. Throw that man's child away and come. We haven't much time to wait."

Mrs. De Petro, thoroughly frightened, started to run, when Rago seized her by the throat. He beat her over the head with his fists, and in his anger he struck the child.

Still holding the baby the young mother tried to fight off the crazed Italian, but her strength was no match for him. He was overpowering her when suddenly she whipped the pistol from the folds of her gown. Rago, livid with rage, started to run at the sight of the pistol.

"Don't shoot!" he yelled. "Don't shoot! I will go!"

But he spoke no more, for the pistol pointed at the back of his head cracked. The man, with a scream, started for the street. Behind came the young wife and mother, her face pale as death and her eyes shooting fire. In one hand she carried the screaming baby and in the other was clasped the smoking pistol.

DROPS TO SIDEWALK DEAD. Rago ran down two flights of stairs and fell down the third flight, landing in a heap at the street level. Picking himself up he sped through the hallway and out into the street. Right behind him followed the avenging woman.

He was half-way across the sidewalk as she reached the door. Taking quick aim at the bright sunlight she fired again. The bullet entered his head within an inch of the point of entrance of the first and he dropped to the sidewalk dead.

Mrs. De Petro was about to shoot again when Philip Sweet, a former policeman and member of the police force at Mania, P. I., grabbed her by the arm. Policeman Flanagan, attracted by the sound of the shot and the great crowd of commuters that gathered about the dead man and the murderer, ran up and placed Mrs. De Petro under arrest. She appeared gratified when told that her perpetrator was dead. Holding her baby close to her breast she went willingly to the station-house in East Thirty-fifth street. Later she was removed to the Tombs.

"I didn't kill him," she said, as she bent over her baby at the station-house. "Why shouldn't I kill him? I have not a single regret. This man has persecuted me for a long, long time. He deserted my husband's sister to follow me to this country. Since he came here we have moved time and time again to be rid of him, but he would follow us. He was so big and strong that my husband feared him. There was no crime that man would not have committed because of his mad love for me. I made up my mind several days ago that I would have to kill him to get rid of him, and now I have killed him."

Mrs. De Petro's baby was taken from her at Yorkville Police Court and sent to the rooms of the Children's Society. Then she broke down for the first time. She demanded an immediate hearing, but Magistrate O'Brien fixed next Wednesday as the date of the examination day, saying that he would not remand the woman to the Coroner, as she admitted killing Rago. She is desirous of having the case brought to trial as speedily as possible.
