

YACHT LOST WITH CREW IN STORM

Survivor of Party Sighted 100 Miles from Shore Clinging to a Spar, Was Rescued in Dying Condition.

AGO, Oct. 10.—Henry Gray, the survivor of a yachting party of five persons, was sighted to-day by a spar half a mile from shore and was rescued in a dying condition.

Gray became unconscious shortly after being found, but before losing his senses he stated that his sister and two companions who went sailing with him last evening, had been drowned. He was attempting to make the harbor when the heavy gale the yacht sprang a leak and quickly sank.

WITNESSES TO BUY N. P. STOCK FOR CLIENT

Samuel Sinn, Testifying in Heavy Suit Against His Firm, Tells of the Doings on the Pacific Day.

Samuel Sinn, testifying before Referee Phillip E. Moran at his office, No. 14 Wall street, in a suit brought by J. J. O'Leary, of New York, to recover $55,000 from the brokerage firm of Sternberger, Senn, Fuld & Sinn, for losses sustained in the crash of 1901, which caught him short on Northern Pacific stock, was resumed this morning by Samuel Sinn, a member of the firm of Sternberger, Fuld & Sinn, first witness. He was called by the referee and examined by Lawyer Moran, who is the counsel for O'Leary, Fuld & Sinn.

On May 9, the witness testified, he received a telegram sent to J. J. O'Leary and that 100 shares of Northern Pacific had been bought at $400 and 100 at $550.

O'Leary questioned as to the whereabouts of that telegram he said: "I don't know. They have disappeared."

Sinn identified the telegram sent to O'Leary in Chicago, reading: "Our firm has saved you $55,000." He had sent that to show that judgment he had saved Mr. O'Leary's customer $55,000.

O'Leary telegraphed May 10, said Sinn, "that his customer would not sue for the N. P. settlement."

Sinn testified that he told his customer, Sternberger, to buy 200 shares of Northern Pacific for J. J. Townsend at the best possible price.

O'Leary said to him, "I want another one hundred shares at the best possible price for the same amount of money."

Sinn described a corner "as an accumulation to prevent people from buying them."

O'Leary was no corner on May 9, 1901. He admitted that his firm was a corner of it in London. "We bought it," explained Mr. Sinn, "1,900 shares and sold them in New York as an arbitrage transaction."

O'Leary described how the stock was returned to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and then corroborated testimony given by witnesses as to the rejection of the terms proposed by the New York firm, and the demands made by O'Leary that he settle at 150, the price in the general settlement.

MILK DEALERS IN DANGER OF JAIL

Practice of Adulteration Must Stop, Says Justice Hinsdale—Imposes Heavy Fines Upon Many Violators of Law.

Justice Hinsdale in the Court of Special Sessions to-day warned a number of milk dealers arraigned before him that a continuation of the sale of adulterated milk will mean imprisonment.

"The practice of adulterating milk," the Justice said, "must be stopped. It is the intention of the Court to sustain the action of the Health Commissioner in trying to lessen the death rate among children by preventing the sale of skim milk."

James E. Scott, a driver for P. J. Scanley, a wholesale dealer, at No. 28 Washington street, was fined $75. A sample of the milk sold by him showed by analysis it was 7 per cent. below the standard required.

Two dealers, Max Newman, of No. 88 Columbia street, and William Brandt, of No. 103 Seventh avenue, were fined $50 each, on pleas of guilty to adulterating their milk. Johann Ottman, of No. 415 West Thirty-eighth street, and George Busch, of No. 518 West Fifty-third street, paid fines of $35 each.

Others fined were Solomon Hartman, of No. 286 Stanton street; Esther Flammhaft, of No. 304 East Fifth street; Richard Mahler, of No. 245 East Twenty-eighth street; James Rollnick, of No. 511 East Fifty-fourth street; George Ebenstein, of No. 97 East Eighty-seventh street; Wolf Feldman, of No. 208 Forsyth street; Dora Appel, of No. 24 Delancey street, and David Goldfarb, of No. 74 Monroe street.

R. H. Macy & Co.'s Attractions Are Their Low Prices

Macy's

B'way at 6th Av. 34th to 35th St.

Oriental Rugs of Every Description.

2d Floor.

As vehicles for fabulous prices, Oriental Rugs had a long and successful run at other stores—THAT IS GENERALLY ADMITTED.

This Macy store brought about a revolution by bringing Rug prices down to a merchandising basis, ignoring "art" and "sentiment" notions in the pricing.

We established a permanent base in the Far East, in charge of a resident buyer—a native—who was engaged by a member of the firm while on a journey through the Orient.

This resident buyer is continually collecting weaves of every description and forwarding them to us—selecting every sort of Rug, from the smallest mats to the richest silken carpets, both modern and antique.

It is impossible to buy better Rugs or to better the system of buying.

Our system of distributing them is equally faultless. To us the Rugs are merely merchandise, to be sold in the usual Macy way: For cash—actual cost, with the slender margin of profit characteristic of this Macy system. This creates a new standard of low prices—astonishingly low prices when you compare them with the prices that grow out of "art" and "sentiment" systems.

Ready with All Sorts of Cold Weather Goods.

We are now showing the largest stocks of reasonable merchandise Macy's ever assembled. Adding to the interest are special selling events in various lines—some of them continuations, some of them new sales. Furniture, Carpets, China and Glassware, Housefurnishings, Upholstery Fabrics and Draperies, Dress Goods, Silks, Jewelry, Fancy Metal Goods, Millinery, Ribbons, Women's Suits and Coats, Children's Garments, Umbrellas, Blankets, Linens, Fancy Vestings and White Goods. Tuesday morning we start a very special sale of Imported Dress Trimmings, Spangled Robes and the like.

The "Not Advertised" Merchandise

Many of our best values are never mentioned in our newspaper advertising. These are always small assortments—perhaps enough for less than a day's selling, or for a few hours' selling. Advertising these lots invites mail orders, and the mail orders always get here after the lots have been cleared away by visitors to the store. The result—our mail order patrons are disappointed. We avoid this by placing the small assortments out on special counters and placarding them with our regular "Not Advertised" cards.

Upholstery Department.

We will offer, commencing Tuesday, exceptional values in the following:—

- LACE CURTAINS.
 - Irish Point, $4.50 & $8.00 pair.
 - Renaissance, $10.50 & $15 pair.
