

WOMAN'S BLOOD CHOCOLATE HUE

Remarkable Conditions Disclosed by an Autopsy on the Body of Kate Leary, Who Died at Presbyterian Hospital.

EVERY ORGAN STAINED TO A SIMILAR COLOR.

Physicians in Attendance Were Unable to Diagnose the Case and the Ailment Has Not Yet Been Determined.

A condition of affairs in a human being, absolutely unknown to physicians in this city, was revealed to-day by an autopsy on the body of a woman who died in the Presbyterian hospital yesterday from a disorder, the exact nature of which has not yet been determined.

Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon was called to the hospital to make the autopsy because the physicians there were utterly at sea as to the woman's ailment. He found that the blood in the body, instead of being red was a dark chocolate color, and that every organ in the body which the blood reached had a remarkable color like this.

No remarkable color like this had ever been seen or heard of such a condition before.

Could it Diagnose Case. The woman was taken to the hospital yesterday afternoon. The ambulance took her from No. 1415 Second avenue, where she had been to visit a friend. She was known as Kate Leary and was about thirty years old. She was unconscious when taken to the hospital.

Her pulse was very rapid, but weak, the pupils of the eyes had contracted and her extremities twitched convulsively. No physician in the hospital could diagnose the case. She died exactly one hour after reaching the hospital without regaining consciousness.

The doctors then made an examination, which convinced them that they had a remarkable case. They sent for Dr. O'Hanlon, who to-day gave the following account of his autopsy:

"I have performed over 1,000 autopsies but never before have I seen anything like this case. Every drop of blood in this woman was a dark chocolate color and every organ was stained brown. There was no perceptible thickening of the blood, and it was fluid and without coagulation.

"The mixture of human blood with chocolate of potassium would turn the blood brown, but not the dark chocolate color that prevailed in this case. Dr. Bully, the clinical pathologist of the Presbyterian hospital, examined some blood under a microscope, but no chocolate of potassium was visible. The red blood corpuscles could be plainly seen through the glass, but were unable to move under the eye.

No Evidence of Use of Drugs. "A brownness of the blood might be produced by the excessive use of coal tar products, but no such color as this, and there was no other evidence of the excessive use of such drugs.

"I had all the organs removed and also bottled some of the blood. We have sent it to Columbia University for complete analysis. I am very impatient for the result, as I never heard of such a case before. The autopsy didn't leave us any nearer the exact cause of death.

"The woman has been able to learn of the cause of her ailment. The most remarkable I have ever seen."

WIRESON IN CUT OUT FIRE ALARMS

Wires Deliberately Destroyed by Employees of the Lighting Company While Repairing Their Own Apparatus.

MILLIONS' WORTH OF PROPERTY IMPERILED.

Three Boxes on the West Side Fail to Work Owing to the Tampering — Commissioner Hayes to Ask Drastic Action.

Millions of dollars' worth of property was in danger of burning to-day while the police tried three fire-alarm boxes in an effort to call the firemen to the Terminal Cold-Storage Warehouse, covering the entire block between Eleventh and Twelfth avenues and Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth streets.

Fire Commissioner Hayes learned that the alarm-box wires had been deliberately cut by the Edison Lighting and Power Company shortly after midnight to-day. The alarm wires are in the conduits of this company and the cutting was done to effect repairs to some of the Edison's circuits.

Flames were discovered in warehouse No. 18, on the Eleventh avenue side of the building, by Patrolman Peter Hogan of the West Thirty-seventh street station. Hogan ran to the alarm box at Twenty-ninth street and Eleventh avenue and turned the fire call. There was no response to this, and after ten minutes the patrolman ran to the box at Twenty-seventh street and Tenth avenue. Again there was no response, and the third time the patrolman turned in a call, this time at the corner of Thirty-first street and Twelfth avenue.

Half an hour after the blaze was discovered there was no alarm sounded, and realizing that all the fire boxes in the neighborhood were out of order, the patrolman called up his station-house over the signal telephone. Because of the delay in the firemen reaching the fire the blaze had gained such headway that a second alarm was quickly sounded. The blaze was confined to the third floor of the warehouse in which it started, but for a time the entire block and all the contents of the warehouses were in danger. The loss is estimated at $5,000.

"I am going to find out what this Edison company means," said Fire Commissioner Hayes, when all the facts concerning the cutting of the fire department wires had been laid before him by the Edison and Fire Chief Croker. "I wonder if they imagine they are running this city."

DASTARDLY PIECE OF BUSINESS.

"In all my time I have never heard of a more dastardly piece of business. With a fire in a fire in a fire, to begin with, and any kind of a wind, the whole of the west side might have been swept out of existence before the fire department could have got into action. I can hardly contain myself when I think of how those wires were cut, and how the Edison company is trying to cover up the truth about it. How many times this has been done before one can only imagine, and the fact that it has gone undetected is a disgrace to the city."

"I shall demand the fullest investigation of this act and that the Edison Company or the individual belonging to it responsible for the cutting of our wires last night shall be penalized heavily by the law if they imagine they are running this city."

JURORS MAY BE TAKEN FROM BOX

Davis's court-room on Monday has been construed as an indication that some of the twelve jurors sworn will not serve. When the jury was completed yesterday Freeman Ellwood Hendrick asked Justice Davis if he could possibly be excused because of the serious illness of his mother-in-law.

PRECAUTION ALWAYS TAKEN.

The Court always takes such a precaution in a big trial. In order to be able to fill the place of a juror who might meet with an accident and be unable to appear.

Nan Patterson is not idly awaiting the opening of her trial. She is working methodically in her cell upon a mass of memoranda which will be used by her lawyers in her defense.

The narrow oblong space with the barred door where the young woman has been confined through the dragging summer months has now more of the appearance of an office than a cell in "Murderer's Row." The little table where the former Florodora girl sits and writes is littered with slips of paper that she has been preparing carefully ever since the first day of her incarceration.

COMPLETE RECORD OF HER LIFE. They contain a complete record of her life from the moment she met "Caesar" Young until the tragic morning when he was slain in the hansom cab. Day after day she has noted down facts and circumstances crowded into her life during her friendship with the bookmaker as have cropped up in her memory.

Whenever her memory began to lag she would relinquish the task and wait until one of the store-rooms of her brain would give up the missing link and allow her to go on with her story. As the result of great patience and tireless mental effort she has not only made an accurate record of vast importance to her in her trial for murder, but she has quickened the steps of the hours and lessened the worst feature of her ordeal of imprisonment.

ARRANGING FRAGMENTS OF THE STORY. She worked on these stray leaves of memoranda up to the day her case was called to trial, whereupon she began to arrange them in chronological order in preparation for the crucial moments when she will have to face the circumstantial charges of the prosecution. With elaborate method she has ordered these records of her memory so that her counsel may take them up and refer to them when cross-examining the People's witnesses.

These notes and jottings, made by the actress in her cell, will, her attorneys believe, bear to shreds the evidence of motive that the District Attorney will adduce in building up his case. They will explain many inconsistencies of conduct that might be inferred from outside appearances. They will prove that her love for the bookmaker was steadfast throughout her acquaintance with him, and that there was never any last bitter quarrel leading up to the tragedy.

SKULL FRACTURED BOY HERO SAVES MYSTERIOUSLY GIRLS IN PANIC

Patrick Trainor, Nephew of the Late State Senator, Dying in Roosevelt Hospital — Police Seek Supposed Assailants.

A brick fire in a five-story building, Nos. 17-19 Grand street, at 1 P. M. to-day was attended by the rescue of twelve girls employed in a shirt waist factory on the top floor, by a colored elevator boy who made seven trips through dense smoke and a crackling blaze on the second floor.

The fire started in the works of the Standard Celluloid Company, where thirty men were employed. It quickly spread to the upper floors on account of the inflammable material. Harry Alexander, of No. 215 West Fifty-ninth street, was at his post in the elevator car when the blaze started.

He pulled for the top floor at once and got a load of panic-stricken girls in the shirt-waist factory of Kiskadee & Alpert. Then, taking them to safety, he returned for another load, making altogether seven trips. The only avenue of escape for the girls was by the elevator.

Sixty other persons employed in the building, men and boys, got out on the fire-escapes. The blaze spreading to the adjoining three-story building at No. 181 Grand street, but was got under control.

YOUNG PALMER FLEES ASYLUM

Son of Theatrical Manager Disappears from Sanitarium, Where He Has Been Placed Because of Nervous Disorder.

PRETTY NURSE AND A JOCKEY MISSING, TOO.

While Efforts to Keep the Escape Secret Are Made Parties Are Searching Woods and Town for the Fugitives.

STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 19.—Arthur M. Palmer, the twenty-seven-year-old son of A. M. Palmer, the New York theatrical manager, has escaped from a Stamford sanitarium. A handsome young woman nurse disappeared simultaneously, and a well-known jockey who has been under treatment at the sanitarium is also missing.

Every effort is being made to keep the escape of Palmer and the jockey and the disappearance of the nurse secret, but to-day parties of men are searching the woods near the sanitarium for the men.

Waited His Opportunity. Young Palmer is much like his distinguished father in appearance. He is handsome and fascinating, and despite the nervous disorder which made his confinement in the sanitarium necessary he is an excellent talker and a delightful companion.

Disappeared in the Night. Just how Palmer and the jockey got away has not been explained, but it is believed that the nurse let down the bars and drew back the bolts that kept them in restraint. Palmer is said to have fled with the nurse and jockey at night, and not until an hour later was the escape discovered.

Immediately searching parties were organized, but the escape had been well planned, and it is believed that the trio have crossed over into New York State and are now safe from the Connecticut authorities.

Until 1896 young Palmer was the constant companion of his father. Fourteen times the youngster had crossed to Europe and back with his parent, and the roving spirit took possession of him. In the early spring of 1896 he boarded a ship bound for San Francisco and for months worked before the mast.
