

RECROUCED AFTER A FIGHT WITH BURGLARS

Waking to Find Thieves in the House, Leopold Levy Tackled Them.

Waking burglars who entered his house, No. 21 North avenue, early to-day, Leopold Levy, plunged through the window of the front room on the first floor, clutched the wire of an electric light hanging above the street and was electrocuted.

Policeman Thomas Egbert, of the West Thirtieth street station, was across the street from the Levy home when he heard a man scream. An instant later he saw a man's body shoot through the open window. As it plunged toward the pavement Egbert saw a hand seize the wire light and legs became entangled in the wires that supported it. For a second the man clung to the light, and then, with a crash of breaking glass, the lamp gave way under the heavy weight and fell to the street.

The policeman ran over and found Levy dead. He had fallen on his head, and the weight of it was not sufficient to have caused instant death. Dr. Buckley, from New York Hospital, said that Levy had died instantly. His hands and legs were burned from electricity, and there was no doubt in the minds of the police that he had been killed by shock.

JURY HEARING 'GRANDMA' CASE

Mrs. Daniel J. McGinnis, Not in Court at Opening of Trial of Husband's Suit for Absolute Divorce.

Mrs. McGinnis, the young grandma of forty-five, was not in court to-day at the trial of the suit of Daniel Joseph McGinnis in Justice Clarke's part of the Supreme Court, for absolute divorce, and the young creator of fashion at modestly against the wall in the back row while the lawyers, Thomas P. Wickes and Justice Seabury's brother, William Marston Seabury, examined witnesses as to their fitness to act as jurors.

Even William E. Cox, the old family friend of nineteen years' standing, and Matilda, his trusting wife, who declares under oath that she knows there could have been nothing wrong between her husband and the fascinating Grandma McGinnis, deprived the opening session of the trial of their presence.

Mrs. Cox proved her faith in her husband by taking Mrs. McGinnis home to live with her at No. 57 West Eighty-fourth street, when "Grandma's" husband cut off her allowance after raiding her flat at No. 130 West Ninetieth street, when he and his friend Frank Cox and Mrs. McGinnis, in a situation, Mrs. McGinnis admitted at first, that it looked bad, but she explained that it resulted from Mr. Cox's suffering a violent attack of illness, which made her insist on his remaining at her flat over night.

Edward Bowne, Julia's brother, was shown a packet of letters which the father had said were taken from Julia's trunk. Edward Bowne admitted that he had deciphered them. The letters were not admitted.

Samuel L. Obra, brother-in-law of Mrs. Cordova, told of a meeting with Cordova in Jersey City on July 14, 1904. He said that she was going away and would never hear from him again. I saw him again in New York on Feb. 2, but had nothing to say to him. I supported Mrs. Cordova ever since.

Threatened with Violence. "He threatened me with violence if I mentioned the name of a certain woman. He said he was going away and would never hear from him again. I saw him again in New York on Feb. 2, but had nothing to say to him. I supported Mrs. Cordova ever since.

After receiving a letter from my wife I came over. The letter was a plea from her. I did not get back and saw her the last I had in the bank at South River. It was 26, and I apologized to her. I was working for the Erie Railroad. My wife and Mr. O'Brien had detectives put on my track. I told them that I would do all to support her and the children. I would not live with her. She didn't want me, either.

O'LEARY GETS OFF WITH FINE

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—Afternoon.—The announcement made in the name of the Government, in the face of the overwhelming disaster suffered by Gen. Kutropatkin, that a fresh army would be raised and the war proceed, and the mighty attitude assumed by Japan, may after all be simply a sparring for position, which is the pretense of peace.

TO HURRY UP AGAINST DIVORCE THE ALDERMEN FOR 'EMIGRANTS'

Application was made this afternoon by Walter B. Brown, Secretary of the Brooklyn Transportation Reform League, before Justice Dickey, of the Supreme Court, for a writ of peremptory mandamus to compel the Board of Aldermen to take action on the application for a franchise by the New York Connecting Railroad, which is to connect the Long Island Railroad with the New York, New Haven and Hartford by a bridge across the East River at Ward's and Randall's Islands.

Under the New York laws divorce is recognized as a ground for absolute divorce and in this instance the description was committed in New York. It is, therefore, held that, while the Court of Chancery has jurisdiction over the complainant, it has not been shown to have jurisdiction over her marital status, constituting the rest of the case at bar.

GIVEN UP TO DIE.

But Our Great Cod Liver Oil Preparation—Vinol, Cured Her of Consumption.

Mrs. J. G. Brown, of Anderson, Ind., writes: "My daughter Mary was on the verge of the grave with consumption. My family physician had given her up—said she could not possibly recover. She was weak and could eat only a few spoonfuls of nourishment at a time. I read an advertisement of Vinol, and decided to try it as a last resort. She has now taken eight bottles, and her health has been restored in a marvelous manner, and she is as well as ever she was. Words are inadequate to express our gratitude to the maker of this great medicine."

you and your valuable remedy, and we hope that other dear ones may be saved as ours was. The reason that Vinol accomplishes such wonderful results in throat, bronchial and lung troubles is because it contains in a concentrated form all the vital principles of cod liver oil, but without a drop of oil to irritate and upset the stomach, and retard its medicinal value; the weakest stomach can retain it and it is delicious to the taste.

NOW A HAPPY, LAUGHING GIRL

Child Prostrated with Dyspepsia Finds Health Through Reaxil.

"If mothers could only be made to realize," said Mr. A. H. Cosden, Gen. Mgr. of Riker's Drug Stores, "that dyspepsia attacks children as well as grown folks, and that unless it is promptly checked the little ones, through the inability of their stomachs to assimilate food, literally starve to death, much suffering, grief and despair would be averted."

"Reaxil Dyspepsia Tablets are a sure cure for troubles of this kind. Just read what they did for Mrs. Paynette's little daughter!"

"I take pleasure in writing you that your Reaxil Dyspepsia Tablets have done more for my little girl than all the remedies we have used. She was almost prostrated with dyspepsia and fast losing her strength, not being able to use any solid food. She has been better ever since using these tablets. She can now eat everything, and is gaining every day."—Mrs. L. Paynette, Leominster, Mass.
