

THE FEET KICK HOLES IN SCIENCE

These Girls Prove that Dancing Does Not Break Down the Foot Arch or Make a Foot Grow Flat.

Miss Anna Courtney and Miss Juanita Davis, two of the prettiest of the "Dance Girls" in the Ballet of the House at the Hippodrome, put some large pictures in evidence with their feet the other day. This doesn't mean that the foot of other lady would make a very large hole in anything, because both Miss Davis and Miss Courtney have very small and pretty pedal extremities, but, figuratively speaking, it was with their feet that they tore deep rents in science.

A learned young lady named Carpenter, who is in Dr. Savage's school of physical culture, wrote a piece for other learned young ladies in the school recently, in which she made the declaration that science had long since established the fact that continuous stage dancing flattens the instep, breaks down the arch of the foot and otherwise reduces the twinkling young dancers to the level of policemen, so far as feet are concerned.

The young lady named Carpenter didn't know what she was bumping against when she got off that one. It seems that a skeptical pupil took the story over to the Hippodrome, where there are a great many pretty girls who have been dancing since they were babies and who are prepared to put the Carpenter theory out of business.

It was such a serious matter to Miss Courtney and Miss Davis that they actually had to stay away from rehearsal, they were so overcome. When they got their nerves back they took two pairs of very fine feet around to the Savage school and had them examined by Dr. Savage and Miss Carpenter and a lot of other experts in physical culture. They had them measured by every known system from Babylon down, and then even had them drawn on a plate of glass from underneath in order to perpetuate their assertion that stage dancing does not injure the symmetry of the feet in the least.

"I never wore a symmetrical in my life," said Miss Courtney to Dr. Savage, "and I can show you fifty girls over in the Hippodrome who never did. The idea of saying dancing makes a girl flat-footed and then putting it up to science."

"As for me," said Miss Davis, "I want it understood that I've got as high an instep as any woman in New York and I've been dancing all my life."

Dr. Savage admitted that Miss Davis and Miss Courtney had put science out of business, and his explanation of their fair feet and the measurements thereof will soon be the subject of a learned article on the subject of stage dancing and its effects, which will be highly revolutionary in its character.

AMERICAN BOY IS A HIT.

Young Spalding, of New York, Makes an Impression in Paris.

PARIS, June 8.—Albert Spalding, the young American violinist, made his professional debut last evening at the Nouveau Theatre, and scored a pronounced success in a most difficult and classical programme, rendering Saint Saens's Concerto, Bach's Sarabande, Beethoven's Romance and Sarasate's Zig-zaguer with great sentiment and perfection of technique.

The papers here report Mr. Spalding enthusiastically as a classical marvel. He studied with Prof. Lefort, of the Paris Conservatoire, who pronounces him a "diamond in the rough."

Mr. Spalding is a son of J. W. Spalding, of New York City.

STARR PIANOS.

WE SHOULD LIKE you to know the Starr Pianos. Since 1870 they have been made in Richmond, Indiana, and because they were the fine product of the highest artistic ideals and deserved to gain favor, they have for many years held an unusually high place in the esteem of the Middle and Western States. Such a Piano can know no market limitations, though, and people in the Eastern States began to want the Starr. We came to know of it, and after investigation we were very glad to become its Eastern sponsor.

The number of Starr Pianos sold here in the past few years is astonishing—and yet not so astonishing when it is realized that every owner of a Starr is an enthusiastic advertiser of the make. Its tone is beautiful. Its durability is wonderful. Its case designs are most attractive.

Starr Pianos are priced at $325, $350, $375, $400 and upward. They may be bought for as little as $10 cash down and thereafter $10 a month.

Of all the good Piano propositions we have there is none which appeals to a wider range of people than the Starr Piano.
