SAMARITAN CAME IN TIME TO SAVE WOMAN

Pitiful Story of a Mother with Five Children Deserted by Wife-Beating Husband.

There are hundreds of cases in New York like that of Mrs. Ida Jacobs and her five children, but they don't come to light. Mrs. Jacobs would have suffered and starved to death, perhaps, had not a good woman forced her to go to Lincoln Hospital for treatment and temporarily desert her little family. Through the reception of Mrs. Jacobs at the hospital a little hard luck story of life in New York has been revealed.

The husband of Mrs. Jacobs is a waiter. For several years he has not produced enough for the support of his family. Three weeks ago he beat his wife, and from this beating grew the condition of health that demanded her treatment in the hospital. After the beating, Jacobs packed his trunk and disappeared.

He left behind him in a four room flat at No. 559 East One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, his wife, William, a son of fifteen years old, Joseph, eleven years old, Mary, 6 years old, Frank 3 years old and Arnold, eighteen months old. William is employed as a district messenger boy and earns $7 or $8 a week. Joseph has just earned his third commitment to the City reformatory and is out of the family until he makes his escape, as he has twice done before. The other children are feeble, round-eyed little things upon whose features there is a continual expression of surprise.

Mrs. John Frost, of No. 873 East One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, visited Mrs. Jacobs yesterday and found her in an alarming condition. She called a doctor, who ordered that the suffering mother should go to the hospital. Mrs. Frost, in order to save the children, has been kept from the Children's Society, has volunteered to take care of them until the mother returns.

MODERN PIRACY BALLAD.

BY WALTER A. SINCLAIR.

'Twas a pirate bold, with a gait that rolled, And a hearty "Yo-heave-ho, me lad!" In a voice that faltered, in his grief he wailed Out this mournful tale so low and sad: "Oh, the times ain't what they used to be In the days of Capt. Kidd, When a pirate crew went out to sea To fight and fight they did. In the days of yore we just sloshed in gore And we did the job up fine; But we did not do like the foolish crew Of the Kniaz Potemkine."

"When the Jolly Roger floats aloft And your guns intimidate, Just cut out this game of speaking soft. And don't stop to arbitrate. And now what think you of a pirate crew Who hang out the 'Let's Quit' sign? Just lay down and quit when they made a hit On the Kniaz Potemkine?"

"Oh, if old Cap Kidd and old Morgan, too, Had a ship with three-ply name, No telling what they could not do To enhance their gore-stained fame. But the vodka jag, 'neath the cross-boom flag, Must have been both large and fine; For without a shot was scooped in the lot On the Kniaz Potemkine."

Says he: "I guess this piracy Is not just what it used to be. When now an able pirate sours At working out of pirate hours."

PRETTY WOMAN CALLED BADGER

The girl's mother, a widow, complained to Edward Hanson, who is clerk of the court, and also an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, that her daughter had disappeared, and that she had reason to believe that the girl had been abducted by Woessner. Mr. Hanson, assisted by the girl's sister Emma, found the pair at No. 124 Essex street, where Woessner had furnished a flat.

When Mrs. Brunger found her daughter was fully married she promptly notified Woessner, who was charged with the girl's abduction. Her husband, Ernest, left the house and she had a lock-up in the comfortable little home fitted up by the young man.

BOY CHARGED WITH KILLING FARMER

George Granger, Who Killed Farmer Lutz, Led Away Whimpering.

George Granger, the nineteen-year-old murderer of Farmer Henry Lutz, of Pawling, N. Y., was taken back to the scene of his crime to-day by Deputy Sheriff Horace Hoffman. The young criminal betrayed surprising nerve until just before his arraignment in Jefferson Market Court preliminary to his removal to Pawling. Then he collapsed and two detectives had to support him. He did not recover his nerve until he was whimpering when he left Police Headquarters.

The boy was employed by Lutz on a farm near Pawling. He had been sent to the farmer by an employment agent named Stingham, of No. 1301 Lexington avenue, but was not strong enough for the work and Lutz discharged him on Thursday. Granger was paid from a large roll of money. He hung around the farm until yesterday morning, when he shot Lutz from behind, took the roll, amounting to $75, and a silver watch and came to New York.

Lutz's body was found in a short time, and Granger was suspected. A telegram was sent to the Central Office, and Detective-Sergeant Carey went to the employment bureau, where Granger had left a watch as security for his fee to Stingham.

The boy appeared late yesterday afternoon, but grew suspicious as soon as he saw Carey and started to run. He was caught after a long chase, and immediately admitted the crime.

Was Calm At First. Later at Police Headquarters he surprised the detectives by his calm indifference. He related all the details of the murder with apparent satisfaction, went to bed in a cell early and slept all night without a move. The sight of the deputy sheriff broke him down.

Granger does not look like a criminal, save for a sinister look of the right corner of his mouth, which gives him the appearance of a sneering expression, and the fact that his eyes are considerably larger than those of the left. He might be a doctor with a useful citizen, but he was handicapped from infancy, if his story is to be believed.

Deserted by Parents. He was born in New Haven, and his mother ran away from his father, who he was 2 years old that he can remember the incident only vaguely.

For a time the father took care of the boy, but he was too weak, and young Granger has never heard of him nor seen him since. Previous to leaving New Haven Granger's father turned him over to a farmer who kept him on a farm near Pawling, N. Y., where he was away from the farm and went to work in the factory of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company.

Mr. Morton spent yesterday at the Navy Department. In the afternoon Mr. Bonaparte called upon him and the chiefs of the bureaus were present to him.

Mr. Bonaparte greeted the bureau chiefs and said it would be his endeavor to do the best he could. Incidentally he remarked that he already had received a large number of letters from inventors, who urged upon him the great value of their respective devices, some of which were calculated to destroy any enemy.

Mr. Morton has gone to New York to take up his permanent residence.

Blames the Farmer. The boy did odd jobs around this city until he came to the end of his resources, and then he went to the factory of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, where he secured the job that made him a millionaire.

He should have sold the roll to me," said Granger, "and I would have started right to New York, where I would have made money if I hadn't seen the roll of bills he carried. I thought there must be fully a thousand dollars in it, but it was full of dollar bills, and I when I wanted it up there was only $75. He brought it on himself."

George Snyder, of No. 110 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street, and George McKay, of No. 18 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, who are charged with having swindled Dr. John A. Harris, of No. 115 Riverside Drive, out of $12,000 by fraudulent certificates of stock, were arraigned in the Tombs Court to-day before Magistrate McAvoy.

Champe S. Andrews appeared as counsel for Dr. Harris; Assistant District-Attorney Taylor appeared for the people, and Henry J. Goldsmith for the defendants. Yesterday the prisoners were held in $10,000 each, and failing to get bail, were locked up in the Tombs.

An agreement was reached among counsel to-day for the reduction of bail to $2,500 in McKay's case and to $7,500 in Snyder's. This was about to be done when Detective Sergeant Price intervened and said there was another complaint against Snyder, the complainant being William T. Furness, an importer of mahogany, of No. 48 Broadway, who charged that Snyder had swindled him out of $10,000. Furness was in court and identified Snyder. Snyder's bail was therefore left at $10,000, but as there was no other complaint against McKay he was held in $2,500 bail. Bail was not furnished.

The counsel then agreed for a further adjournment of the case until Thursday morning.

County Detective Beards, who was one of those who arrested the men, has been making an investigation of Snyder's record. He told the Court that he had learned that the day previous to the alleged swindling of Dr. Harris Snyder lost all his money in a dice game at New York City. Snyder was "stone broke" and pawned all of his jewelry, including a watch and a pair of diamond studs, and a pair of diamond earrings, for $1,000. He then went to the Tombs and was held there until he was released on $1,000 bail.
