AUTOMOBILE THAT KILLED THE BOY.

Do you know this automobile? Large touring car with green body and yellow running gear. Has cover, made fast to the body with straps.

Every garage in the city is being searched by the police today for the automobile described above. Three men and a woman riding in it yesterday afternoon were racing a Subway train on the elevated extension along the Southern Boulevard.

The auto struck eleven-year-old Freddie Bueching, of No. 2336 Wilkins place, and killed him instantly. The men saw the accident, but did not stop. They saw the little chap hurled high in the air, crash against an elevated railroad pillar and then fall down.

Harlem Brewer Has Green Auto. The police got two clues to-day, one of which they ran down and the other of which they are still working on.

Auto Must Be Found. The Bronx is thoroughly stirred up by this latest killing, the indignation being greater because of the cowardly manner in which the murderers of the boy laughed as they ran away.

FLUNG WOMEN AND CHILDREN FROM HOUSES

Police Brutality in Sanitary Ejectment Causes Serious Charges by Victims.

Serious charges were made to-day against several policemen of the Sanitary Squad who took part in the ejectment of fifteen families from the new model tenement, on the southeast corner of Fourteenth street and Avenue A yesterday.

Arriving at the house they ordered everybody to get out and when there was any hesitation they grabbed the tenants and actually threw them out into the street.

LABOR LEADER WINS HEIRESS

Alfred I. Boulton and Miss Frances Schroeder, Daughter of Late Mayor of Brooklyn, Are to Be Married.

Announcement was made to-day of the engagement of Miss Frances Schroeder, daughter of the late Mayor Schroeder, of Brooklyn, to Alfred J. Boulton, the labor leader and widely known socialist.

EXPLOSIVES WRECKED THE BENNINGTON?

Rear-Admiral Rae Doubts Boiler Crash Could Have Wrought the Havoc.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Rear Admiral C. W. Rae, chief engineer officer of the navy, says he can only account for the damage done the gunboat Bennington at San Diego, Cal., by an explosion of high explosives, and reiterates that there was nothing in the reports to the Bureau of Naval Affairs that the boilers were in an unsafe condition.

"After examining the plans of the Bennington in the light of the despatches giving an account of the disaster, I cannot possibly conceive how the collapsing of a crown sheet could damage the ship to the extent stated, or have blown people overboard from the deck."

The detailed plans of the boiler room deck of the Bennington show a pump room, a narrow space, just forward of the fire room and immediately forward of the pump room a shell room.

Attention was called to-day to the regulations governing the inspection of boilers, which show that the boilers of all warships in the navy must be inspected every three months.

Fireman E. G. Hopp, of the Bennington, makes the first statement as to the cause of the accident. This was wired to Washington to-day from San Diego. He says that shortly before the explosion one of the boilers was found to be leaking badly, and the boilermaker was sent for to repair the damage.

Death List Grows. SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Rear-Admiral McCalla, Commandant at the Navy-Yard at Mare Island, has received an official report from San Diego which lists the casualties on the gunboat Bennington, wrecked by a boiler explosion, as 52 dead, 25 missing and 56 injured, 16 of whom are in a serious condition.

The only officers included in the list of victims of the disaster are Ensign N. K. Terry, who died from the effects of his wounds, and Ensign Leo Sahm, whose right hand was amputated.

Men Feared Crash. SAN DIEGO, Cal., July 22.—Commander Young, of the Bennington, discussing the explosion to-day expressed the opinion that there was a weak spot in one of the boilers, but said there had been no visible defects, as far as he knew.

One of the men said that a year ago last February, while the ship was at Magdalena Bay, the engine of the cruiser New York was sent for to inspect the boiler, but no repairs were taken to it.

Alfred J. Boulton is a Canadian by birth, forty years of age, a stenographer in the office of the Brooklyn Citizen and a prominent figure in local labor circles.

His interest in the advancement of the working people was the direct instrument in bringing about his engagement with the rich and talented Miss Schroeder. She, too, feels for the poor, and deems it her duty to devote time and money and study to the amelioration of their condition.

CHAMPE ANDREWS UNDER ARREST BY JEROME'S ORDER

Prominent Lawyer and Politician, Former Exalted Grand Ruler of the Elks, Accused with Dr. John A. Harris, His Client, of Forcing Alice Strosnider to Transfer Property Standing in Her Name as Restitution for $12,500 Won from Physician in Fake Faro Game.

Champe S. Andrews, a rising young lawyer, counsel for the County Medical Society, until recently Exalted Grand Ruler of the Elks and Deputy Tammany leader of the Twenty-seventh Assembly District, was arrested to-day on a warrant charging extortion of property. His client, Dr. John A. Harris, of No. 112 Riverside Drive, was also arrested on the same charge.

The warrants were issued yesterday by Justice Olmsted, of the Court of Special Sessions, sitting as a committing Magistrate, on complaint of Alice Strosnider, of No. 1600 Dorchester avenue, Flatbush, the wife of John S. Strosnider, a professional gambler.

Mr. Andrews and Dr. Harris stand accused of forcing Mrs. Strosnider to transfer to John S. Cooper, a clerk in Mr. Andrews's office, property in Flatbush, valued at $13,500 and standing in her name, as restitution for $12,500 won from Dr. Harris by Strosnider and his partner, George McKee, in a fake faro game.

Her Story to Jerome. Mrs. Strosnider has told the District-Attorney that Mr. Andrews, in consideration of the transfer of real estate, assured her that Dr. Harris would not push the prosecution against her husband, although he made her sign an acknowledgment that the transfer had been made voluntarily.

Mr. Andrews had planned to sail for Europe to-day. He was summoned to the District-Attorney's office on Thursday, and informed by Acting District-Attorney Gans that the Strosnider transaction was being investigated, and that he had better see District-Attorney Jerome before leaving New York.

Mr. Andrews went to Mr. Jerome's summer place at Lakeville, Conn., yesterday, with Deputy Assistant District-Attorney Hart. The District-Attorney questioned him closely, and after Andrews started back to New York called up Mr. Gans on the long-distance telephone. Mr. Gans went to Justice Olmsted and got the warrants.

Promised Not to Flee. When the train from Lakeville reached the Grand Central Station last night Mr. Gans and Detective O'Neill, of the West Forty-seventh street station, were waiting for it. They had a warrant for Mr. Andrews, but did not serve it on his promise that he would not attempt to escape if they would allow him to go to his home and cancel his arrangements for his trip abroad.

Mr. Andrews has apartments in the Royalton, No. 44 West Forty-fourth street, and Detectives O'Neill and Peabody were detailed to accompany him and watch the place all night. The lawyer did not complete his arrangements for the postponement of his trip until nearly 11 o'clock to-day and then he was placed under arrest.

Peabody had gone to the Riverside Drive home of Dr. Harris and served the warrant upon him. Dr. Harris was taken to the Royalton in a carriage and from there he and Mr. Andrews were driven to the West Forty-seventh street station.

The pedigree of Mr. Andrews was taken in the station-house while Dr. Harris waited outside in a carriage. The lawyer said he was thirty years old, born in Mississippi, single and an attorney and counselor at law.

When the formal complaint against him had been entered on the station-house books he was taken to Police Headquarters with Dr. Harris, and there the pedigree of the latter was taken. He described himself as John A. Harris, thirty-eight years old, English, a broker by occupation, married, with a residence at No. 112 Riverside Drive. The two prisoners were then taken to the Criminal Courts building for arraignment.

When the lawyer and Dr. Harris were arraigned before Justice Olmsted this afternoon, Mr. Andrews, representing himself and his client, waived examination and asked for a postponement of a week in order that he might secure the services of two lawyers who are now out of town. Mr. Gans agreed. Ball was fixed at 8:00 in the case of Dr. Harris. They furnished bonds immediately and were released.

MRS. HYDE'S BIG PENSION IS STOPPED

$25,000 a Year Paid to the Widow of the Equitable Founder Is Cut Off.

The $25,000 a year pension money which Mrs. Henry B. Hyde, mother of James Hazen Hyde and widow of the founder of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, has drawn from the society since the death of her husband, has been cut off by Paul Morton, the new Chairman of the Board of Directors.

The stopping off of this pension was part of Mr. Morton's general scheme of retrenchment, and he carried it out in spite of the greatest pressure. Every effort was made to get Mr. Morton to leave this one gratuity on the books, but he replied that the time for sentiment had passed, and wiped off the account.

There are said to be still a few shares of Equitable stock held by Mrs. Hyde, and this and James H. Hyde's position on the Board of Directors is all that is left of the Hyde influence in the society. It is practically nil, as Hyde is not out as first vice-president, but is also off the Executive Committee, of which he was chairman for years.

William H. McIntyre, the confidential agent of Henry B. Hyde for years and since his death the adviser of the Hyde family in all financial matters, is also off as fourth vice-president, and the once dominant influence of the family in the great financial structure which its head founded has passed away forever.

Ryan Purchase Bona Fide. It can be stated on the authority of a man in the society conversant with every detail of the recent reorganization that the sale of the Hyde stock to Mr. Ryan was absolutely bona fide, and that there was no string to it by which Hyde or any member of his family can ever get it back.

From the same source it is learned to-day that the removal of Comptroller Thomas D. Jordan by Mr. Morton had nothing whatever to do with the $85,000 loan from the Mercantile Trust Company. Mr. Jordan's removal from his $35,000 a year job was decided on at the outset, but Mr. Morton would not remove him until he had received his pension, which is known, William A. Day had been asked if he would take the place and had consented. That accounts for the promptitude with which Mr. Day came to New York and lodged himself in Mr. Jordan's office.

Jordan Summarily Dismissed. From the moment he took charge Mr. Morton sought some excuse for dismissing him. He finally found something on the books concerning Mr. Jordan which he thought needed explaining. He sent for Mr. Jordan and asked him for an explanation. "There is nothing for me to explain," said Jordan.

"Do you refuse to explain?" asked Mr. Morton. "I repeat that there is nothing for me to explain," said Jordan, and he left the office. Within ten minutes notice of his summary removal was served on him by a messenger from Mr. Morton's office. What it was that Mr. Morton wanted to explain was revealed here, and it was a comparatively trivial matter, and is said to have been a delusion which was due to the fact that he realized an excuse was being sought to get rid of him.

$685,000 Loan a Personal One. In regard to the $685,000 borrowed from the Mercantile Trust Company and standing in the names of James V. Alexander and Thomas D. Jordan, trustees, it can be stated on the highest authority that the suspicion that this money was used to speculate in real estate and in other ways that would not suit the company is erroneous.

This money was borrowed by Mr. Alexander and Mr. Jordan for personal use in stock speculation. Both of these men, it is said, have for the past few years been mad on the subject of getting into the market to acquire their own shares, and are said to have played on a very large scale. The $685,000 was the basis of their operations, and the fluctuations in the loan during the time it was outstanding marks the variations of their work. At one time they had the loan down as low as $300,000.

Bank Examiner Jordan Denied emphatically to-day that James H. Hyde paid the $685,000 loan to the Mercantile Trust Company. "The check did not come from him or any one representing him," he said. "I can tell you no more than that, except that it was not paid by the Equitable Society."

Attorney-General Mayer has announced in Albany that suits against all the old officers and directors of the Equitable Society for the restitution of funds alleged to have been wasted by them and for the return of profits made in fraudulent transactions and in other ways early next week. One of the suits, it is said, will be to force Senator Depew to return the $200,000 which he has been ordered in the Depew Improvement Company transaction.

Mr. Mayer maintains that under the law covering these alleged misdeeds resignations have no effect on the situation.

TATTOOED LIKE BROTHER WHOM SISTER SOUGHT

Imposter Neglected No Detail to Deceive Mrs. Littell and Get $10,000.

Her hopes of fifteen months dashed after the death of her assassin and advertising for her long-lost sailor brother, Mrs. Belle Lee Littell, of No. 263 Willis avenue, the Bronx, to-day told the strange story of the returned mariner of the same name and physical marks, who for a week attempted to convince her that he was the missing brother, in order to claim $10,000 left in a bequest.

Mrs. Littell is sixty-three years old, but she does not look over fifty. She is the daughter of Rufus R. Lee, an Orange County farmer, who died in the cholera plague of 1849, and of his wife, Caroline D. Lee, who married again in 1856 to Benjamin Cole, all now dead. When the mother died in 1873 she left no will disposing of the valuable leaseholds in Mount Vernon, Fordham and Harlem, and Mrs. Littell's sister, Sarah Elizabeth Cooke, and her husband, Dr. Justus Lee Cooke, acted as administrators without accounting up to the death of Mrs. Cooke in January, 1904. In Mrs. Cooke's will she added a strange clause providing that $10,000 go to the missing brother, John W. Lee, in lieu of what he should have received from the mother's estate. If Lee did not appear to claim the heritage, it was to go to Dr. Cooke.

Advanced in age and lonely since the death of her husband, Marcus A. Littell, who was killed by a horse in 1890, Mrs. Littell began advertising for her brother. "In June, 1904, I got track of a John W. Lee in Chefoo, China," said Mrs. Littell to-day. "I wrote the Consul there, who answered that John W. Lee had come into the port on the sailing ship E. B. Sutton. The Consul communicated to him the fact that he was wanted here to claim an inheritance."

Cabled for Money. "I waited fifteen months for that man. He cabled me for $50 for transportation and I cabled him $100 to bring him to San Francisco, where I would meet him and bring him here. He finally arrived in the port of New York on the E. B. Sutton last March. I had made preparations for my brother's homecoming, for I had not seen him since the spring of 1885, when we parted at the corner of West and Warren streets, New York. I had hired a little cottage at No. 73 West one Hundred and Thirty-ninth street, in the Bronx, and had asked some of the neighbors to help in the celebration that night."

"It was dark when I went to the dock. I was pleased to see the ship. W. Lee was mate of the Sutton and had ordered a ladder put over the side, which I went on board, expecting to find my brother. I did not see him plainly when he met me, shook hands and escorted me to the cabin. Then I saw him. 'Mercy, you're not my brother,' cried 'Oh, yes, I am,' he said, and rolling up his sleeves showed me where the initials 'J. W. L.' were tattooed on his arm, just as brother John had his initials tattooed."

Gave Himself Away. "I asked him where we went after our mother died, and after whistling he came into the room. He said, 'I had no money and was an imposter, asked him if he realized what it meant to have humiliated through all sailors' heads, and he said, 'I did not see him plainly when he met me, shook hands and escorted me to the cabin. Then I saw him. 'Mercy, you're not my brother,' cried 'Oh, yes, I am,' he said, and rolling up his sleeves showed me where the initials 'J. W. L.' were tattooed on his arm, just as brother John had his initials tattooed.'"

Dr. Frederick Stewart B. Beatty Taken to Ludlow Street Jail.

Dr. Frederick Stewart B. Beatty, who was prior to Sept. 23 last, practicing at Newport, Vt., was to-day arrested by Deputy Sheriff Terry on an order of arrest issued by Supreme Court Justice Daniel J. Kenefick, of Buffalo, in a suit for separation instituted against him by his wife, Ida E. Beatty. In default of $1000 bail he was taken to Ludlow street jail.

Dr. Beatty, who is said by his wife to have had a large and lucrative practice, was arrested in Newport last September on a charge of malpractice and was admitted to bail pending his trial. He immediately left Vermont and could not be found until located by Deputy Sheriff Terry.

Mrs. Beatty says she was married to him on March 30, 1903, in London, Ontario, and that shortly after their marriage he began to treat her harshly and accused her of infidelity. This charge she declares to be untrue. Mrs. Beatty says that her husband never supported her since their marriage. She states that she is absolutely penniless and dependent on her relatives for support.
