BURGLAR USES "GOO-GOO" EYE ON ACCUSERS

Three Women, Exquisitely Robbed, Refuse to Relent Before His Glances.

"RAFFLES" REALLY NICE Polite Even When He Stuck a Revolver into Female Victims' Faces.

A tall, slender young man, smooth shaven, clad in a black suit of clerical cut and whose eyes are big, blue "goo-goo" orbs, was before Magistrate Steers, in the Lee Avenue Court today, in the role of "gentleman burglar."

William Smith, he called himself. He is about thirty years old and as suave and unobtrusive as a drawing-room dandy.

Mrs. Katherine Evans, of No. 80 Argyll road, wife of a wealthy manufacturer, told the first story of Mr. William Smith's performances. She said that she was alone in her home on the night of Sept. 16, slept soundly, and was awakened by a soft tread in the hallway at 3 o'clock in the morning.

"Don't move, madam," he said to me, politely. I am a gentleman and would not willingly harm a hair of your head. Really, I would not, but I have come here to burglarize your house, and, of course, must be interrupted.

"I lay back, petrified with amazement, while this young man went to my silver chest and helped himself to 150 pieces. He wrapped these up in two silk dresses and packed them in my husband's dress suit case. When he had done he turned to me again and said, in a soft voice: 'Madam, I must bid you good night. Do not cry out. I am a gentleman, but if you scream I will have to kill you.'

After Mr. Smith had left the Evans home, it developed, in the testimony of Policeman Meegan, he boarded a car at Malbone street, Flatbush. Meegan thought he recognized him as a notorious burglar and jumped on the car, thereupon the young man jumped off, leaving the dress suit case on the platform, and fled away into the darkness.

Mrs. William F. Milliner, of No. 140 Schermerhorn street, gave Magistrate Steers this history of Smith's visit to her home on the night following his entry of the Evans cottage in Flatbush.

"My husband and I were asleep," said Mrs. Milliner, "when I was suddenly aroused. I said to Mr. Milliner: I think there is a mouse in the room. Get up, William, and drive him out. Then, suddenly, a flash of light was turned on us and a revolver glistened before our eyes."

COCKTAIL OF CARBOLIC ACID HIS LAST CUP

Wife Who Had Summoned Colville to Court Finds Him Dead on the Floor.

Mrs. Catherine Colville went to the room of her husband Albert in the boarding-house of Margarette Moras, at No. 156 West Forty-fifth street, to-day to learn why he had not answered a summons to appear in Jefferson Market Police Court and answer to a charge of non-support.

Supposing her husband had stepped out for a moment, Mrs. Colville sat down. The change of position brought into her vision a bare foot and ankle protruding from under the bed. Some-thing about them caused the woman to run screaming into the hall.

Frank Shaw, occupying the next room, peered under the bed. There he saw Colville in his pajamas, all twisted up and dead.

Drank Carbolic Cocktail.

Mrs. Colville fled, policemen arrived and were followed by the coroner. The liquid in the cocktail glass told the whole story. Colville had mixed himself a cocktail of red wine and carbolic acid, had swallowed it to the dregs, set the glass on the table and then fallen to the floor in his death agony.

SEEK NEGRO IN THOMPSON MURDER CASE

A dispatch from Richmond, Va., states that detectives of that city are looking for a negro named Moses Taylor, in connection with the killing of J. H. Thompson, the exchange editor of the New York Times, in the St. James Hotel, No. 145 West Forty-fifth street, last September. Taylor formerly lived in Manchester, a suburb of Richmond, and is said to have been employed as a bell boy or elevator man at the St. James some time previous to the murder of Mr. Thompson.

The work of the local police force on the Thompson murder has never relaxed in spite of the contention of the coroner that Mr. Thompson fractured his skull in three places by a fall upon the carpeted floor of his room. It has been reported several times that the detectives were suspicious of a negro who had formerly worked in the hotel, but the despatch from Richmond is the first official confirmation of the fact.

Mayor McClellan will deliver at address this evening at the opening of the Fair of St. Gabriel's Church, in the hall at Thirty-seventh street and Second avenue. The address will not touch upon politics.

DYING, BLAMES RICH BUSINESS MAN.

DYING WOMAN ACCUSES A WEALTHY BUSINESS MAN.

Hattie Healey, the victim, is the Handsome Daughter of a Prosperous Dealer in Washington Market—Suspected Man Is Being Closely Watched.

The handsome young woman found dying in the apartment house at No. 41 East Eighty-second street from an illegal operation and taken to the Presbyterian Hospital yesterday has been identified as Hattie Healey, the twenty-year-old daughter of a Washington Market business man, Mrs. Lena Scott, of No. 27 East Eighty-eighth street, an old maid, who was arrested because of $1,000 bail in Harlem Police Court to-day for examination next Wednesday afternoon.

Detectives Fay and Wilmundur have learned that a man of wealth and prominence in New York furnished the Healey girl with money after she left her home four weeks ago and they have him under surveillance. This condition of the girl is very serious and the man will be placed under arrest should she die.

Girl Had Plenty of Money. No. 41 East Eighty-second street is a high-class flat-house and one of the best apartments is occupied by a Mrs. Jalesky, who shares the flat with her

"YAP" WAGON ABANDONED ON FIFTH AVENUE

Small Boys Played Megaphone Lecturer, and Mystery Isn't Solved Yet.

If Dr. Watson were writing this story about Sherlock Holmes he might appropriately call it "The Mystery of the Abandoned Yap Wagon."

The yap wagon was covered with dust and showed the marks of a long journey. A thick coating of oil on the tires indicated that it might have been used in taking a party to the Vanderbilt Cup race, but the cup race was over at 12 o'clock Saturday night.

Detective Stein, of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station, had his attention called to the yap wagon about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. He discovered that the mechanism was locked and supposed that the chauffeur was on an errand somewhere in the vicinity and would soon return.

AHLE'S BOND IS FORFEITED, SAYS COURT

"Fads and Fancies" Solicitor Must Appear Wednesday or Become Fugitive.

Charles F. Ahle, the solicitor for "Fads and Fancies," who was arrested and indicted for trying to extort $500 from Banker Edwin M. Post by threatening him with an exposure in Town Topics of an alleged scandal, failed to appear for pleading when his case was called by Judge McMahon in Special Sessions to-day, and his bail bond of $2,500 was declared forfeited.

George Simpson, of Abe Levy's office, said Ahle is on the road as a travelling salesman and will be in New York to answer to the charge against him. The members of the District-Attorney's staff who have had charge of the case assert that Ahle has skipped. Martin Engel is his bondsman.

Although Ahle was arrested in June and Mr. Post was ready to go before the Grand Jury at any time during the summer, the indictment was not found until last week. Mr. Simpson alleged in court to-day that Mr. Levy was not notified until this morning that Ahle case has been set for pleading.

The arrest of Charles F. Ahle led to a series of sensational exposures of the methods of men who, it is alleged, levied tribute from leading members of society by open threats or insinuations concerning the dire results that would follow publicity about closed chapters in their lives.

POLICE SHOOT UP THE TOWN FOR DRINKS

Howie and Kirschenman Had Bartenders Dancing and Citizens Treating.

As the result of an all-night debauch, in which they shot up several saloons, Policemen William Kirschenman and George Howie, of Newark, are under suspension to-day, with a good chance of losing their jobs and going to jail in addition.

On Saturday night the two policemen, who had struck up an acquaintance, met and started for the station-house together in full uniform to report. Both had been drinking, and as they neared the corner of Central avenue and Warren street, Howie vowed he was going into a corner saloon and get a drink.

Kirschenman told him to be careful, as they were in uniform, but Howie walked right into the place and called to the other to follow.

CAR SMASHES CARRIAGE ON BUSY STREET

Two Riding in Light Wagon Injured, Both of Whom May Die.

One man was mortally injured and another so badly hurt that he has a slender chance of recovery in a collision between a Hamburg avenue trolley car and a small road wagon at Keepley and South Fifth street, Williamsburg, to-day.

The man who may survive his injuries is Theodore Smith, twenty-three years old, a coachman, of No. 615 Bedford avenue. His employer, James Kavanaugh, fifty years old, of the same address, with whom he was driving, is believed to have an injured spine and internal hurts.

Young Bishop, Whose Pistol Killed Catherine Doran, Goes to Institution.

Philip Bishop the twelve-year-old Brooklyn boy who shot and killed young Catherine Doran in her father's candy store at No. 137 High street on Aug. 12 last, was tried to-day by Magistrate Wilkin in the Children's Court and found guilty of felonious assault in the third degree.

He will be sent to some institution—probably the Catholic reformatory—until he is twenty-one years old.

The boy in his own behalf on the stand said that the pistol was discharged accidentally while he was trying to remove the cartridge from it, but witnesses for the prosecution swore that he pointed the weapon at the girl before pulling the trigger.
