SHOOTING OF HER BROTHERS SAVED GIRL FROM BOMB

W. H. Jones, Who Killed Harry Britton and Wounded Frank in Nyack, Intended to Dynamite Home and Destroy Their Sister.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 23.—That William H. Jones, who killed himself in the yard of the Baptist Church after having shot and killed Harry Britton and wounded Frank Britton, intended to kill their sister, Jessie, who had refused to marry him, became evident to-day after the examination of an infernal machine which was found in the hall of the Britton home.

BIG PARADE ON EAST SIDE FOR SLAIN JEWS

Thousands March in Memory of Victims Massacred in Russia.

Proceeding a benefit performance at the Thalia Theatre on the Bowery, for the oppressed Jews in Russia this afternoon a great and impressive parade moved through the streets of the east side. Since the funeral of Rabbi Joseph there has been no such scene in the ghetto as this parade presented. It was a procession of mourners for the dead and wounded thousands of miles away, but the grief was as sincere as though the bodies of the victims of Russian ferocity were being conveyed through the narrow thoroughfares east of the Bowery.

Sorrow and Protest.

Joseph Barondes was the moving spirit in the demonstration and in the Thalia Theatre benefit. He secured the volunteer band and the volunteer choir. The Jewish daily newspapers appealed last night to all who could spare the time to march as a double sign—a sign of grief for the slain of their race and of protest against the intolerable conditions in Russia.

No Police Clipping.

When Forsyth street could accommodate no more men and women the throngs overflowed into the thoroughfares crossing it, and finally took possession of the great plaza in Delancey street west of the Williamsburg bridge entrance. The policemen on duty tried their best to force the jam in Forsyth street into this plaza, so that the parade might be formed there, but they were unable to bridge the crowds. Mindful of the criticism of police roughness and brutality following the Kabley street parade, most of the officers refrained entirely from pushing or pulling, and were content to issue the usual orders, which received no attention whatever.

MIDSHIPMAN WAS BATTERED IN RING FIGHT

Branch's Face Was a Mass of Bruises and Left Arm and Leg Paralyzed. EYES WERE CLOSED. Doctor Who Attended Him Says External Injuries Caused Death.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 23.—The second day of the court-martial proceedings in the case of Midshipman Minor Meriwether, Jr., charged with manslaughter and other offenses growing out of the death of Midshipman James R. Branch, which occurred after the two had engaged in a fight, was marked by the testimony of Surgeon E. P. Stone, of the Naval Academy staff, who attended Branch.

No Autopsy Held.

The cross-examination of Dr. Stone by Lieut.-Commander Robinson, counsel for the defense, was very searching, and several members of the court also asked questions on different phases of the doctor's testimony.

Face Was Battered.

Dr. Stone said in his testimony that Branch came under his care at the hospital at about 8:30 o'clock Monday morning, and that he was in a very unconscious, he said, the left side of the head, left temple, his forehead, right eye and lips were much swollen and discolored, and both eyes were closed.

External Injuries Killed.

From the symptoms and what was disclosed during the operation Dr. Stone was confident that the condition had been brought about by external injuries to the head such as might have been caused by blows of the fist. These blows could have been inflicted on either side of the head.

Referee in Twenty Fights.

Midshipman A. W. Pithon, the referee of the fight between Branch and Meriwether, admitted to acting as referee in nine similar encounters, was questioned as to the use of the gloves which were used in the fight at the academy. These gloves are used to protect the hands when punching the bag, but Midshipman Pithon said that there was no reason why they should be used, against their use in the friendly boxing matches at the academy gymnasium.

RANTANKEROUS MR. MANNING SAYS HE MADE NO THREATS

Got Cash Yearly From Three Big Companies to "Protect Interests," but Admits He Never Had Any Work to Do.

Depew's friend from "up the river," W. S. Manning, from Albany, went on the witness stand before the Insurance Committee at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon.

He said he had had been in the insurance business from 1858 to 1876. He was head of the premium department of the Mutual Life, resigning to become secretary of the Hartford Life. For several years thereafter he represented the Mutual Life, John Hancock, Washington Life and other companies. Up to a year ago he was a salesman for the Albany Chemical Company.

As the old man described in the Depew letter as "rantankerous" mentioned each company he presented to the committee a copy of a testimonial letter from its officers.

"I have never been employed by the Equitable Life," said the witness. "I of the corporation appointing its present head, Frederick A. Burnham, in his stead, he bequeathed to the company two-thirds of his commissions. In 1894 these commissions amounted to $22,400. In 1895 they were $48,000.

"The will further provided that all profits standing in the name of Harper should go to Burnham, 'to vote at all meetings as if I were alive and there present.'"

"When Burnham was elected there was spread upon the records of the Mutual Reserve a resolution recognizing the necessity of payments of money 'which do not come within the routine of business, but which are for the betterment of this institution.' (The one-third commissions willed by Harper were set aside in a fund for these payments.)"

"In 1898 this fund was absorbed and there was added to the salary of President Burnham $300 a week to meet these expenses. Burnham is now paid $30,000 a year.

"He had to give an accounting of the 'Commission' fund, but now is demanded from him for the $300 a week. What he does with it he alone knows. The first witness was Gerald R. Brown, head of the bond and mortgage department of the Equitable Life, who told Mr. Hughes that Tom Cleary, the
