POLICEMAN ENDS LIFE WITH BULLET

Coney Island Was Too Much for Brennan and Caused Trouble at Home.

John J. Brennan, a policeman attached to the Coney Island station, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head this afternoon at his home, 21 Mulford street, at 4th Avenue, Fort Hamilton.

Domestic difficulties and entanglements with women are said by his friends to have been the cause of his trouble. The atmosphere of ill-feeling was so much for him and quarrels with his wife became frequent.

When he reached his home to-day afternoon from duty he went in but it was not long before he shot at a revolver, laid to his head and found his life ebbing from the head, with a bullet hole in his temple.

His wife, Mrs. Brennan, was at home when she found the body.

BROCKWAY GOT SALARY FOR HIS $6,000 LOAN

Burnham, of the Mutual Reserve, Too Ill to Testify—Perkins to Retire from the New York Life.

The Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company was run into a corner this afternoon at the legislative insurance inquiry when Horace H. Brockway, a director, was asked if he had ever given up any money because the company in 1898 was having "a hard time" with the State Insurance Department.

Brockway is the man who has been proprietor of the Asinland House for thirty-nine years. He became a director of the Mutual Reserve at the personal request of Frederick A. Burnham, President of the company.

It was in May, 1898, that Burnham put Brockway on the payroll at $300 a week. About two months later Burnham told him that he wanted $6,000, and the old hotel man gave it to him.

Between the Mutual Reserve and Patterson. Finally the whole matter was dropped by the company paying Patterson $5,000 and by its withdrawing all actions, civil and criminal, against him.

In 1897 the Mutual Reserve was having "a whole lot of trouble" with the California Insurance Department. Andrew J. Clunie was Superintendent of Insurance. The Mutual Reserve employed as counsel Gen. Thomas J. Clunie, a brother of Andrew.

In 1897 Tom Clunie got $500; 1898, $350; 1899, $1,500; 1900, $1,500; 1901, $2,000; 1902, $2,000.

Ended by Death.

"Any more?" asked Huger. "No, that's all. Clunie died about that time."

During Clunie's entire administration he held up the Mutual Reserve in California; that at the close of his time he granted the license.

Eldridge admitted that his company had had trouble in Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa. In New York it had been in trouble with the Insurance Department practically from 1894-95 down to the present time. When James F. Pierce's term expired the Mutual Reserve served him on its payroll.

A close friend of George W. Perkins, vice-president of the New York Life Insurance Company and chairman of the Finance Committee, announced yesterday that Mr. Perkins will retire at the forthcoming election of officers in April. J. Pierpont Morgan, with whom Mr. Perkins is connected, is said to have advised the retirement of Mr. Perkins from the New York Life in deference to public sentiment.

Burnham Also is Ill.

Frederick A. Burnham, president of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company, was expected to appear as a witness before the legislative hearing to-day to tell about his own particular "yellow dog" fund. Instead of Mr. Burnham there appeared his physician, Dr. Wendell C. Phillips, who said that Mr. Burnham is suffering from an abscess of the middle ear and is too ill to testify. He has advised his patient to leave the city.

Mr. Burnham is the third life insurance president to break down in health since the legislative committee began to probe. James W. Alexander, of the Equitable resigned, and is in a sanatorium, and Richard A. McCurdy, of the Mutual Life, has resigned, and is said to be very ill.

It was added by Dr. Phillips that he had already performed two operations since he had advised Burnham to leave New York but that the patient had refused to do so on account of the appearance his going away would have during the hearing of the committee.

Not to Stop on Jan. 1.

When the Legislative Insurance Committee resumed its inquiry to-day its chairman, Senator Armstrong, said he wished to correct a prevailing impression that the committee would go out of existence on the stroke of a certain hour.

"This committee," declared he, "will continue to exist when it has completed its work, of course, the Legislature might by joint resolution discharge the committee before it was ready to submit its report. However, I do not think the Legislature will do that on a certain day, but nobody has any right to assume that the Legislature will do anything of the kind."

The Senator went at length on the purpose of the committee to "fill in the gaps of evidence" until the end of this month. It will hold sessions from Monday to Friday, inclusive, of each week.

As to Corley and Bliss.

"What about your calling George H. Corley and Cornelius Bliss on the subject of company contributions, Senator?" Mr. Armstrong was asked by an evening World reporter.

"I shouldn't care to commit myself. The time we have left is very short. We wish to keep as close to the strict line of insurance as possible. The evidence on the record with reference to campaign contributions speaks for itself. After money for political purposes has been paid out of the pockets of the insurance companies the matter would seem to rest outside of the province of this committee. However, I would not say whether we shall call Mr. Bliss or not."

The first witness of the day was George D. Eldridge, Vice-President of the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company, who was testifying at the time of the Thanksgiving dinner on Monday last.

Mr. Eldridge went into the practice of this company in holding up to the payment of $500 claims, which was the subject of strong criticism in the latest report of the State Insurance Department.

Four ships are to be built annually. Lord Cavendish, First Lord of the Admiralty, however, adds a warning to the public to the effect that reductions in the estimates cannot be continued in future years if foreign countries make unforeseen developments in their shipbuilding programmes.

JEWES HOLD GREAT PARADE TO MOURN SLAIN BROTHERS.

Fully 125,000 March to Union Square and Denounce the Recent Massacres by Russian Mobs.

After two hours' slow struggling through the pressing crowds that lined the crooked streets of the east side the head of the great parade of Jews that had started, to the number of 125,000, from Rutgers Square, reached Union Square this afternoon to hold a mass-meeting and listen to the reading of resolutions condemning the Russian Government for the massacres of the Jews and appealing for the sympathy of Americans.

The parade that began in orderly ranks, four abreast and in eight divisions, became a disorganized press of men, women, children and even infants in arms, for from every side new recruits joined the ranks, and in their eagerness to show their sympathy for their suffering countrymen across the sea they hurried along behind the bands that wailed funeral dirges.

Like a Great Funeral.

The marchers were as solemn as if at a funeral. Indeed, the affair was in one aspect a great funeral for the dead of an entire race. Everywhere were signs of mourning. Those who did not wear black clothes wore streamers of orange on that or sleeve. The banners were draped in black, and the house fronts were draped in the same sombre color, relieved only by white at intervals.

When the first two divisions had poured into Union Square the original plan of waiting until all the marchers arrived was abandoned. It will be well after sundown before the last marchers reach the square. Therefore all afternoon resolutions were read to the increasing thousands.

MODIFY FOOTBALL, SAYS MOORE JURY

Inquest on Union College Half-Back Results in Protest Against Game.

That Harold R. P. Moore, the nineteen-year-old half-back of the Union College team, who died as a result of injuries received in a football game with the New York University eleven on Ohio Field, the Bronx, Nov. 23, was accidentally killed was the finding of the coroner's jury that held an inquest to-day before Coroner William J. O'Gorman. The jury took occasion in its report to deplore the rough features of football and to declare that it is "dangerous to life and limb."

Young Moore, who lived at Ogdensburg, came to New York a week ago last Saturday as right half-back of the Union eleven, his father, William P. Moore, was among the spectators, and saw his son knocked senseless in bucking the New York University line. The boy was taken to Fordham Hospital and died a few hours later.

At the inquest to-day, S. W. Hopkins, a publisher, living at No. 104 East One hundred and Seventy-eighth street, was foreman, and former Police Capt. J. Price was one of the jurors. Several spectators at the game had been summoned as witnesses and told of what they had seen. None said there was foul play and there were no football players called to the stand, although several New York University players were said to be in the crowd that gathered in the Coroner's room.

All testimony was to the effect that young Moore had bucked the line, and that after the scrimmage he was found senseless. Physicians said that he had died of cerebral hemorrhage. This the jury confirmed with the addition that the hemorrhage was caused accidentally in a football game.

Foreman Hopkins then said: "We hold that football is dangerous to life and limb, and we further suggest that steps be taken looking toward the prohibition of features of play that are likely to cause fatal injuries."

A murmur of approval was heard from the crowd, and a couple of head-showered young chaps, who had been sitting well back near the door, exchanged glances and hurried home.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, Dec. 4.—Alexander Peterson, of Chicago, and Floyd Krebs, of Newark, N. J., making up the German-American team in the six-day race, quit late this afternoon. It was 4:50 o'clock when some one suddenly discovered that Peterson had left the track. Not two minutes before had the comment been made that the retirement of one more team would leave the unlucky number of thirteen teams competing for the big race.

Peterson relieved his partner Krebs and cheering as one man. If Vanoni does not win the big race the picture of the contest will be slightly dimmed. Vanoni is a graceful rider, probably the most graceful of the bunch. His riding appears to be effort. Unlimited speed appears to be at his command whenever he cares to use it, but he is apparently restrained by his advisers. Just now he is riding with his team mate in one hour shifts. During the hour between two and three o'clock the garden was a scene of riotous enthusiasm. When he left the track at 3 o'clock, the race dropped into a monotony that was tiresome.

The spectators amused themselves in other ways, and the riders pedaled about in listless fashion. Vanoni reappeared at 5:30 o'clock, and there was no longer any doubt as to his popularity. Instantly the Garden was in an uproar. The band was playing at the time, but its music was suddenly blotted out by the greeting which Vanoni received. He took the lead and forced the great crowd to their feet, roaring and cheering as one man.

6 O'CLOCK RACE SCORE

At 6 o'clock the score in the Six-Day Bicycle Race was 359 miles for all the teams, excepting Vanoni and Castro, who were one lap behind, with 358.9.

The record is 390 miles, 6 laps.
