

“WHO’S A GUY!” SAYS CHINESE PEACE DOVE

Which the Same Is "Here's Luck" to the Treaty of Mott Street.

TONGS CLINK GLASSES.

Rice Wine Flows and Feuds Are Forgotten in Presence of Judge Foster, Arbitrator.

"Who's a-guy!" All through the narrow streets of Chinatown early to-day oriental gentlemen might have been seen wandering indiscriminately with other O. G. whose dearest ambition for months hitherto has been to turn the others into collanders. Ever and anon they would pause to instigate "Who's a-guy," which same is the love song of the stuffed dove of peace.

This is the song that the stuffed dove of peace started and echoed long after the guests had departed at an early hour to-day from the great ratification at the Chong Wah Kong Shore-Chinese Empire Reform Association—dinner in honor of Justice Warren Foster and Dr. F. F. Tong, solvers of the peace of Chinatown. The stuffed dove hung fatly over the round table where the famed tong leaders—Nips and On Leongs—clinked glasses last night in the Port Arthur chow house, No. 7 Mott street.

Of course, Justice Foster, producer of the Treaty of Centre street, was the co-star with Dr. F. F. Tong, plump relative of the August Nephew of the Stars.

A CONTENTED MAN!

See this brawny farmer Plowing up the ground. No healthier or happier man Can anywhere be found.

He plants his seed and in the fall A big crop is assured. He thanks his stars that through World Wants A good farm he secured.

Cousin-by-Marriage of the Moon and Direct Descendant of the Kings of the Ever-Shining Sun The services in restoring to the Chinese village peace through the agency of the American Empire Reform Association's mystic pressure... The stuffed dove that was the cynosure of the speculative eye. There the strong men of the Nip Sing Tong and the On Leong Tong, who have been depicting each other's ranks by black-balling members, ate and drank and joked in the greatest of good fellowship—either wonderful change of heart or great acting.

Huey Gow, now the Whole Thing of the Nips owing to the unfortunate absence of Mr. Mook Duck, fairly oozed geniality as he gazed at the On Leong and held up the tiny glass of rice wine in signal for a toast. Huey is a roly-poly, round and cheerful person, attired in correct Tuxedo and with his queue coiled in the fashion much preferred by sailors in colling a rope. Whether Huey does this in respect of his ancestors or to make a perfect shield against sand-bagging would not be polite to ask.

Huey Asks "Who's a Guy?" Opposite Huey, and in fearful contrast, sat Wong Quou Sing, president of the On Leongs. Not for Wong the hard-boiled conventions of the effete West. For his a blue denim jumper. His face is thin and unhappy. He looks as if he hated to smile, but felt it his duty. He only smiled with the mouth and his smile partook of a quinine pucker, though he was not behind with the toast:

"Who's a guy?" At the same table sat such warriors as Ho Poooh (in relation to Pook Pook), Lee Gong, Yee Chong, Pun Sing, Yee Shung and Guy Maine. Although the night was suggestive of spring in the restaurant, several of these gentlemen claved to the fur collar of their ancestors while going through a bill in which were enumerated:

Pineapple, lychees, golden limes, young guava, almonds, crystallized singer, white rice wine, bird's nest soup, fried sharks' fins, mushroom chicken, rice, broiled squab, lobster omelette, broiled capon, pheasant egg omelette, imperial duck (no mock), eel, white cloud tea, gold coin cakes, sponge cakes, rice cakes, sam shui, roy mai du and one ka day. The last three are Chinese (and destroyers) and can be pronounced after being imbibed in quick succession. Outside of the table where the tong leaders had wassail and good cheer under the stuffed dove (rearranged by Samuel A. Berger), the Oriental exchange was overwhelmingly on Leong. But then, it must be taken into account

BLAZE AND FLOOD NO BAR TO DRINKERS.

While Firemen Fought Blaze Overhead, Schooners Were "Imptied" in "Canal Hall."

While the firemen were fighting a fire on the second floor of a four-story building at No. 207 Canal street last night sixty men gathered in a saloon known as "Canal Hall," on the first floor, stuck to their schooner undisturbed.

The blaze was in the clothing factory of M. Silvestein & Co. and gave the firemen a stubborn fight. "Canal Hall," which is a rendezvous for habitués of the Bowery, Canal street and East Broadway, was well filled when the fire started. The arrival of the engines did not seem to disturb the drinkers, and they only clutched the 6x12-inch schooner more firmly and ordered other drinks, for fear the worst might happen and they would be ordered out.

When water began to pour through the ceiling they remained unmoved, simply covering their heads with newspapers.

A Paper Niagara Falls

WORLD ALMANAC AND ENCYCLOPEDIA

is what would be the result of all the pages of all the copies of the 1906 World Almanac being thrown from the dome windows of the World Building. This great deluge of printed pages would flow day and night in great volumes for a week before the 5,350,000 printed leaves could all reach the ground. This stupendous lot of paper would cover City Hall Park, Park Row, and adjacent Broadway like the falling leaves of autumn in a forest.
